GERMANY IN A ROW.

Seizure of a Deserter by the Panther.

Brazilian Ambassador Carries Full Report to State Department.

Characterizes High-handed Act of Cruiser as an Ominous Incident.

Steinhoff Taken With Force from Itajahy Hotel by Kaiser's Men.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON (D. C.) Dec. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Senator Joaquin Labuco, Ambassador of Brazil to this country, today took to the State Department a long telegram from his government giving in detail the taking by men of the German cruiser Panther of a German subject named Steinhoff from a small fishing port in Southern Brazil. The dispatch states that in the early morning hours of November 27 a number of seamen and officers from the Panther, the men being in civilian dress, went ashore at Itajahy, Province of Catalina, and demanded from the proprietor of the Hotel Commerce the surrender of Steinhoff, a guest of the hotel, who, they said, had evaded his full term of military duty in Germany.

They then proceeded by force to seize Steinhoff and take him on board the Panther, after which the vessel sailed for Rio Grande Del Sul, where she now lies.

The Ambassador stated that he had showed the telegram to Secretary Bacon, who acted today in place of Secretary Root, the latter being tem-[illegible]

Later the Ambassador said to a Herald representative: "The incident is [illegible]. My country will demand the return of the prisoner and an explanation, if not an apology, for the manner in which he was taken. The fact that the Panther, which has been cruising in South American waters for several years, went to this very inconsiderable place, makes it look as if the entire affair was premeditated, and therefore all the worse. Emphasis is also given to the incident because the scene was within the zone wherein the greatest German colonization has occurred, and it can only act as an objection to further German colonies within Brazil."

MAY COST GERMANY.

Itajahy is said to be only a little fishing village and without any police force of account. It is rarely if ever visited by warships, and presumably the Germans had no resistance. However, it is in the zone of German colonies in Brazil, and the incident, according to opinion outside the Brazilian Embassy, will have great weight with the Brazilian government in reference to the continuance of encouragement to German colonies in that country.

At the Brazilian Embassy it was pointed out that the Panther is still in Brazilian waters, and that if the German government wishes to make reparation it is within her power to do so at once.

CRUISERS GO SOUTH.

A cable dispatch to the New York Herald from Rio de Janeiro says:

"The Brazilian cruisers Akmirante Barroso, Tamandare and Benjamin Constant have received orders to go south.

"It is believed their mission is connected with the Panther incident.

"It appears that Steinhoff was not a deserter from the Panther, but from the German army."

FINDS ANTEDILUVIAN BEAST.

WINNIPEG (Man.) Dec. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] While on a hunting trip, H. A. Crofton of Calgary, Alberta, came across the fossilized remains of an antediluvian animal of immense proportions in Lodge Cañon, one of the most weirdly interesting places in the Canadian Northwest. The backbone of the animal is as large as a man's body, seven feet of it having been excavated. Attached to so much of the vertebra as has thus far been uncovered are eight ribs of enormous size, measuring three or four feet in length, some of them being a foot or more in width. So far the bones discovered are broken, but can be easily fitted together. No one knows to what kind of a prehistoric animal the bones belonged.

TO DEVELOP MEXICAN LANDS.

EL PASO (Tex.) Dec. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Development of nearly one-quarter of a million acres in the State of Durango, Mex., is the purpose of the company backed by Memphis, Tenn., capital, which has been organized under concessions from the Mexican government. The company is named the American Mexican Investment Company. The property just acquired by the company is timber land. The company was organized some time ago, but its large holdings in Durango have just been secured. Sawmills will be erected and operated in different parts of Mexico, and lumber will be manufactured for general consumption within Mexico.

YELLOW WILLIE SNUBBED.

Sullivan of Boston Assigned to Most Important House Committee, Much to Hearst's Chagrin.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Additional point has been given to the coolness between Representative John Sharpe Williams, the minority leader, and Representative Hearst of New York, by the decision of the former to have John A. Sullivan made a member of the Ways and Means Committee. Mr. Sullivan is the Democratic member from Boston who vigorously resented on the floor of the House, during the last session, attacks made on him by Hearst papers. This caused Hearst to reply, declaring that Mr. Sullivan had once killed a man.

Mr. Sullivan made a dramatic response to that, setting forth the circumstances and the fact that he had acted in his father's defense and had been exonerated of all blame.

Representative Williams disposes the minority committee assignments, and his selection of Mr. Sullivan for the most important committee in the House is looked upon as a reward for the latter's antagonism to Hearst.

Mr. Sullivan is in every way capable of the committee work.

BRIDE FAINTS IN BROTHER'S ARMS, DIES IN THE AISLE.

Myrtle in Place of Orange Blossoms Crowns a Courtship of Fourteen Years, and Groom, Hastening from Over Seas to His Wedding, Will Bear His Sweetheart to the Grave.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

GALVESTON (Tex.) Dec. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Word was received here today of a distressing tragedy at Bryan, a near-by village, whereby death robbed the altar of a bride in the climax of a courtship which has lasted fourteen years.

Miss Bettie Plagens, sister of a respected farmer of Bryan, named December 8 as the day of her marriage to John Francis. The church was beautifuly decorated for the occasion, and the beaux and belles of far and near were in attendance.

As the bridal couple were going up the aisle to the altar the bride-to-be swooned in the arms of her brother. Restoratives were without effect, and [illegible]

In this search for the precious metal he visited Mexico, Colorado and Alaska, and finally went to New Zealand. There he acquired a large fortune in the stock business. Through correspondence with Miss Plagens yesterday was set for the wedding. The groom was delayed at San Francisco, and only reached Bryan yesterday morning. Their union was, of course, joyful, but within less than twenty-four hours after finding his sweetheart, she was the bride of death.

JAIME NUNO RETURNS.

Composer of Mexican National Hymn to be Feted by Chihuahua After Long Absence.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

EL PASO (Tex.) Dec. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Jaime Nuno, composer of the Mexican national hymn, is the guest of honor of the city of Chihuahua. The city will fete him tomorrow, making a great demonstration in recognition of the man who wrote the great composition. In the afternoon, at the concert to be given at the theater in honor of the hero, he will probably direct the rendering of his masterpiece.

Señor Nuno, a Spaniard by birth, is more than eighty years of age. He came to Mexico in 1853 to take charge of military bands under Gen. Santa Ana. When Santa Ana fell, in 1856, Nuno went to Buffalo, where ever since he has made his home. Chihuahua is wild with enthusiasm over the return of her favorite.

STOCKHOLM, Dec. 10.—The Nobel prizes, which will be awarded tomorrow, include the following:

Physics, Philip Lenard, professor at Kiel University, for researches into cathode rays.

Chemistry, Adolph von Bosyer, professor at the University of Munich, for researches leading to the evolution of organic chemistry and the development of the chemical industry.

Medicine, Prof. Robert Koch of Berlin for researches looking to the prevention of tuberculosis.

Literature, Henryk Sienkiewicz.

Each prize amounts to about $40,000.

The awards will be distributed at the Royal Academy of Music.

King Oscar will make the presentations.

AWFUL WORK OF THE COLORADO FLOOD.

Mexican Commission Investigates Great Imperial Irrigation Work.

Situation at Intakes Near Yuma Is Serious—Four-Fifths of Mighty River Pouring Through Imperial Canal and Obliterating Its Banks—Brush Dam Gone. Col. Randolph Hopeful of Restoring the Works.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

YUMA (Ariz.) Dec. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Early today President Randolph of the California Development Company arrived at Yuma from Tucson in his private railroad car to visit the scene of the dam works destroyed by last week's great flood. The wind was too strong to permit of a trip down river today, and the expedition was deferred until tomorrow. In consultation with Randolph are F. S. Edinger, consulting engineer, San Francisco; J. S. Tolin, engineer in charge of dam operations; W. W. Follett, consulting engineer, El Paso; J. D. Schuyler, Los Angeles, consulting engineer of California Development Company; C. R. Rockwood, assistant general manager; H. W. Blaisdell, vice-president. Views are also being exchanged with the Mexican government commissioners, headed by Gen. Peña, who visited the intakes yesterday, and who are investigating the situation in behalf of the Mexican government. This canal, although owned and managed by Americans, was chartered in Mexico, hence the interest of the Mexican government in naming the commission to investigate.

Col. Randolph, interviewed today, admits that all temporary expedients to check the flow of the Colorado River into the Imperial canal are now little likely to succeed. However, careful investigation will be made, and any possible plan adopted. Meanwhile materials will be rushed in for the permanent headgate, a work which in any case would have been taken in hand right away. Randolph is confident that the canal, with a headgate constructed and river levee built above and below the present break, will drain the Colorado River at low water and permit the earthwork dam to be completed, thereby sealing the cross-cut canal and eventually returning the river to the old channel. With the headgate ready by the first of April, there will be an interval of eight to ten weeks before the heavy summer flood. This usually begins early in June, but sometimes occurs late in May. Everything, therefore, depends on results achieved between April 1st and the summer flood time. Meantime, nothing can reduce the flow of the river towards Salton sink. It was reported to me here today by a railway engineer that the water is rising at Salton at the rate of two inches per day. This shows that the flood of ten days ago has now reached the Salton Sink. Col. B. C. Beatty, who has a long and close knowledge of the Colorado Delta, thinks that success will attend the [illegible] operations, but admits that the fight now must be a prolonged and costly one. However, with the [illegible] Pacific behind the Imperial undertaking, failure is impossible.

As showing delicate international complications it may be noted that the cross-cut canal that has caused all the damage was made originally without the formal authority of the Mexican government. No Mexican engineer passed on the work before it was pushed through to meet last year's shortage of water in Imperial Valley. This is only one point of several.

THE COLLAPSE.

INTERNATIONAL ISSUE.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

YUMA, Dec. 8.—Gen. Angel Garcia Peña and Engineer Ignacio Molina, special commissioners of the Mexican government, together with Señor Jacobo Blanco, of El Paso, chief of the Mexican Boundary Commission, also Rosendo Sanetoval and Francisco Barrayan, members of Gen. Peña's staff, made an excursion today from Yuma on the river steamer Searchlight, to the scene of engineering operations to control the Colorado at the intakes of the Imperial Valley Canal, a large section of which has been almost obliterated—swallowed up in the Colorado River.

It should be stated at this point that the purpose of these commissioners' visit to Lower California at this time is more important than appears on the surface. They are sent here to look into the merits of the engineering work done by the California Development Company, builders of the Imperial Canal system.

The California Development Company, made up of American citizens, through its Mexican corporation is held accountable for any damages accruing for alleged negligence or failures in the construction work of the system built by permission of and upon the authority of a concession granted by the Mexican government.

THE EXCURSION.

C. R. Rockwood, assistant general manager of the California Development Company, accompanied the visitors, and special correspondent of The Times completed the party on today's tour. The first stage down the river was eight miles to the first intake of the canal. Here there are two openings, one on the American, the other on the Mexican side of the international boundary line. At present nothing is doing at this point. For the first four miles the canal is practically silted up. Important operations, however, are about to be started. At the American opening a big headgate of concrete and steel is to be erected, this being the only location along the river channel where there are solid rock foundations for such work. This gateway will be 175 feet between abutments, affording an opening calculated to be capable of carrying away almost the entire flow of the river at low water, control of the river being aimed at as well as the supply of irrigation water. Contracts have been let, and in view of what has happened further down the stream, work will be rushed night and day. The contracts call for the headgate to be finished by April 1, well ahead of the regular July floods of the Colorado River caused by melting snows.

Four miles below the first intake our steamer reached the place where recent attempts have been made to keep the river waters from pouring into the Imperial Canal. Last summer, it may be explained, when the silting up of the canal above this point reduced the supply of water to the Imperial Valley farmers, it was deemed more expeditious to make a crosscut to the Colorado [illegible] canal. It was an emergency work, designed merely as a temporary expedient. The length of the cutting was only 3300 feet, and the witdh was fifty feet. This work achieved its immediate purpose admirably, and the crops of the Imperial Valley were saved. But little did any one dream of the consequences to follow.

MAPPED OUT FOR YOU.

To understand the situation imagine a big letter A. The apex is the first intake of the Imperial Canal. The left leg is the Imperial Canal. The right leg is the Colorado River. The crossbar of the letter is the emergency cross-cut admitting additional water into the canal.

Now it is quite unusual for the Colorado River to come down in flood during the winter months. But last winter there was a succession of winter floods, six or seven in number from December 22 onwards. These flood waters mainly came down the Gila River, which runs into the Colorado River at Yuma, and were caused by last winter's abnormally heavy rains in Arizona. The result was to send an immense flow through the emergency canal cutting, widening it from fifty feet to 200 feet, and scouring it into a deep channel. It is through this opening—the cross-bar of our letter A—that all the waters have been flowing this summer along the Imperial Canal to the Alamo River (the ancient river bed that further on forms the canal channel,) and thence northward to the Salton sink toward which the Imperial country slopes in a gently inclined plane. As all the world knows, there has thus been formed at Salton a vast inland sea, which has engulfed the salt works there and caused the Southern Pacific Railroad tracks to be moved.

With a view to stopping this inflow an attempt has been made during the past two months to form a dam of piles and brush matting across the emergency cutting, so as to send the waters of the Colorado back into their former and more easterly channel. The task was almost completed, and it is confidently claimed that its object would by this date have been attained, had not last week there come down once again a great and unexpected Gila River flood, raising the height of the Colorado River below Yuma over fourteen feet in less than twenty-four hours. This overpowering deluge not only swept away all the upper part of the brushwood dam structure, but has made extraordinary changes in the conditions of the river.

THE HAVOC.

Our party today was the first to view the havoc wrought, for only now has the river subsided to its normal level. Briefly, the present position is as follows. That portion of the flood waters scouring through the cross-cut canal have, buth above and below the cutting, washed the island between the river and the main canal clean away for a distance of at least 2000 feet. The cutting itself has been quite obliterated, and where once was its original narrow line, now fully four-fifths of the entire volume of the Colorado River is flowing.

To return to our letter A, the river now is flowing down the right leg as BEYOND WORDS.

Pathetic Plight of Power, the Talented Actor, Whose Tongue the Surgeon's Knife Is to Sever.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Dec. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Frederick L. Power, the talented character actor, formerly leading man with Margaret Mather, today said good-by to his numerous friends. When he comes from the operating table at St. Joseph's Hospital tomorrow afternoon, his power of speech will be gone, for his tongue is to be cut out, surgeons having found a spreading cancer.

When the surgeon's bistoury severs Power's tongue it will also cut off every present means of support.

Tonight Power bade an affectionate farewell to his aged mother, Mrs. George Ober, who is watching at his bedside. "Let me talk," he pleaded, "for tomorrow and always thereafter I must write or make signs."

Power has been a stage director at the Bush Temple of Music. For several years he has had charge of the Players' Stock Company. Theater-goers will pleasantly remember him as "Dustan Kirke," in which role he appeared at his best.

HORRID TALES BY WITNESSES.

GIRLS TORTURED IN INDIANA BY PRISON SUPERINTENDENT.

Whole State Aroused Over Testimony of Inmates Chloroformed, Knocked Down and Dragged by the Hair, Starved, Beaten and Bumped Into Submission on Pavements.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Kept in dungeon cells for days and weeks with hands and ankles shackled, chloroformed to submission to discipline, knocked down and dragged by the hair, starved, beaten and bumped on stone pavements—these are some of the cruelties declared by witnesses under oath to have been inflicted on inmates of the Woman's Prison and Industrial School for Girls. These forms of punishment are said to have been resorted to by Miss Emily E. Rhoades, superintendent of the institution, to gain mastery over the wards of the State. The recital has created a sensation throughout Indiana.

Tales of cruelty are told by former officials of the prison, by some of the present attendants, and by the girl inmates themselves.

Mrs. Charles E. Coffin, a former member of the board of trustees, said she had seen girls chloroformed to prevent them from screaming. Many of the girls, according to officers, had been sent to the institution not because of any criminal offense, but because their parents wished to get rid of them.

ELKO COUNTY CITIZENS ON THE TRAIL OF FUGITIVE ROBBER.

Thomas D. Henry, Aged and Crippled Storekeeper, Beaten to Death With Revolver-butt After Attempt to Shoot Him Fails—Residents Near Fort Hallack Prepare to Lynch.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

RENO (Nev.) Dec. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A mob of infuriated citizens of Elko county, near Fort Hallack, are out looking for a thug who attacked Thomas D. Henry Thursday night at his little store, and after injuring him so severely that he has since died, stole the money in the store and escaped.

Before he died Henry stated that a robber entered his place of business and immediately pulled a revolver, which he fired pointblank at him. The shot went wild and the men grappled. Henry, besides being old, is crippled and was no match for his big adversary. Finally he was rendered unconscious by a crushing blow from the revolver-butt, and subsequently died of a fractured skull.

It is certain that should the mob overtake the guilty man before the authorities catch him it will be a short trial and quick judgment, as the entire community is greatly incensed.

ASHORE ON DANGEROUS COAST.

NORFOLK (Va.) Dec. 9.—The coasting steamer Aragon went ashore today seventeen miles north of Bodies Island, off the dangerous Hatteras coast. The steamer had to drop a barge which she had in tow, and, after laboring heavily in the sea for two hours was driven on the reef. The Aragon's crew was offered assistance by the life-savers, but refused to leave the ship.

ST. PETERSBURG, Dec. 8, via Eydtkuhnen, Dec. 9.—Fresh disorders are reported from Kronstadt. It is said that the loyal troops there were obliged to fire on mutineers.

Riots are also reported to have taken place among the troops returning from Manchuria. At Sizran, rioters are reported to have sacked the railway station.

MOSCOW MIND HUNGRY.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MOSCOW, Dec. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] It is a whole week since we last received either letters, newspapers or telegrams from the outer world and a peculiar kind of mind hunger is beginning to affect us. Nicolas Ivanowitch Gutchsoff has been elected Mayor of Moscow in place of Prince Galitzin, who recently resigned the post, which he had held for nine years.

FEAR SOLDIERS' RETURN.

The soldiers of the army in Manchuria are beginning to return in driblets. Yesterday I saw a number coming from the Kurski railway station in cabs, making the sign of the cross as they drove past the "Holy Gate" of the Kremlin. It is feared that these elements will not add to the public tranquility, since their families have suffered great hardships during the absence of their bread winners at the seat of war. In answer to their application for help from the town authorities they were told they were at liberty to beg in the streets.

COUNTRY HUGE CEMETERY.

Prince Eugene Troubetzkoy writes today in the Ruski Viedomosti, warning people of the national danger, declaring Russia stands between two extremes—dictatorship and social revolution—involving engulfment of the educated classes and rivers of bloodshed, and turning Russia into a huge cemetery. Prince Troubetzkoy calls upon the moderates to unite and support Count Witte, reserving minor differences for a more opportune moment.

Commercial affairs are now chaotic. Acceptances are protested by wholesale daily. Revolvers only are selling. Hebrews are buying firearms and enlisting supporters, regardless of the cost, among needy inhabitants, against a rumored impending attack. Forty such protectors are quartered in the house of a wealthy Hebrew.

THE POT IS BOILING.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ST. PETERSBURG, Dec. 8, via Eydtkuhnen, Dec. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The pot is boiling. The sitting of the revolutionary party is almost continuous. "The fight today is scarcely fair," said one of their leaders. "We are getting too powerful. A while ago, the government, with all its resources, was too strong for us. Today, it is the opposite. The weight of power and resources is on our side."

Such confidence as that which members of the revolutionary party show is astounding and disconcerting to those in power. In a particularly quiet and assured way, its committee issues orders which are accepted from one end of the country to the other.

The telegraph strike is on. The government's wires have been completely stopped. "Don't take government messages," say the Workmen's Alliance to the few remaining railroad operators who have done work up to yesterday, and the operators don't. But they take those of the Workmen's Alliance. They themselves have issued a document calling for redress of their grievances. It is printed in several papers this morning.

The latest telegrams received by the special wires of revolutionaries, the only ones open, say the whole army of the south is in a condition of revolt. In four different towns, military mutinies have taken place within twenty-four hours. At one place, the military served out rifles to the workmen.

MILITARY REVOLT SIGNAL.

A big military revolt at any center today would, according to the latest decision of the Alliance, be the signal for a general strike, its object being to prevent the government sending reinforcements by severing railroad communications.

While planning with deadly astuteness the foiling of any attempts of the expiring ministry to develop a plan and policy before the nation, impatient almost beyond the bounds of restraint, the Union of Unions has united its undoubted and already proved talent by combining with the minds on the committee of the Workmen's Alliance to draw up a constitution of its own, of which I have already had a glimpse and of which I hope later to be able to give the Times readers the primeur.

All I can say at this point is that it is a particularly forcible and lucidly-worded document, with some [illegible] five clauses, very clearly defining the ideas of the future government of the country by the party issuing it. There is no doubt as to its meaning or as to the fact that those who wrote it have well developed ideas of what they want. The final touches are being put to it tonight, at a joint meeting of the Interior Committee.

In truth, it has come to the point today that people have almost ceased to ask what the government is going to do, as was the case some time ago, but the question of the day which holds supreme interest in the public mind is, what is the Union of Unions and the Workmen's Alliance going to do next?

In the meantime, business of all kinds is going from bad to worse. The financial department has, up to date, made a splendid show, but behind it all there is terrible trouble. The demon of revolution, waxing stronger day by day, is a deadly enemy to that confidence so necessary for good trade conditions.

NEW GRIP ON SITUATION.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

ST. PETERSBURG, Friday, Dec. 8.—(Night.) Via Helsingfors, Finland, Dec. 9.—The leaders of the striking telegraphers have taken a new grip on the situation and the tie-up continues practically complete. Cases of attacks on strike breakers are reported and at Smolensk, Middle Russia, the strikers fired into a passing mail car.

The sailors of the Fourteenth and Eighteenth divisions, in which a chronic condition of mutiny has prevailed for some time, were finally surrounded by troops here at 3 o'clock this morning, and were marched to piers, embarking on barges and despatched to Kronstad. The men had presented petitions similar to those of the sailors of Libau and Sebastopol, for an improvement in service conditions. The reply being that that they would be transferred to Kronstadt, they held a meeting under the noses of the officers and refused to go until martial law was raised at Kronstadt. Accordingly, the Admiralty decided to use force. The task of capturing and embarking the men was successfully executed under Capt. Baron Fersen, former naval attaché at Washington. A court-martial under the presidency of Admiral Tomashevich has been appointed to try the Kronstadt mutineers on the charge of insurrection.

War Minister Rudiger has issued orders prohibiting the granting of leave to soldiers to stay out of barracks at night.

It is reported that the garrison of Schluesselburg fortress has practically mutinied, and is joining in the demand for the liberation of political prisoners who have not yet been arrested. It is also reported that the Ladoga Regiment at Lomsha, Poland, recently mutinied and that, after a struggle with a loyal regiment, the mutineers were finally disarmed.

The belated press comment on President Roosevelt's message to Congress is extremely friendly.

TO KILL MINISTERS.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

ST. PETERSBURG, Friday morning, Dec. 8, Via Eydtkuhnen, East Prussia, Dec. 9.—The local leaders of the post and telegraph strike, having received more encouraging news from Moscow, are making a desperate effort to rally their followers to continue the strike to the bitter end. They promise that those without funds will be provided for.

The leaders have succeeded in destroying telegraphic communication with Kieff, Warsaw and Moscow, which was opened for a time last night.

The Executive Committee has issued another appeal to the strikers to stand firm until all their demands are satisfied. It concludes: "Be firm and victory is ours."

The strikers claim that the delegates who have returned here from Finland report that the Finns will stand out to the last.

From Vladikavkas, North Caucasia, it is reported that the telegraphers have selected a man to come to St. Petersburg and kill Interior Minister Durnovo and Sevastianoff, Superintendent of Posts and Telegraphs.

A delegation from the Tula Zemstvo yesterday presented an address to the Emperor, as follows: "We adjure Your Majesty to rely on the peaceful millions of the Russian people, who desire freedom without license. Your Majesty has removed a burden of 80,000,000 roubles from the peasants and you have promised relief in the matter of land. The Tula peasants expect help, but not from the senseless promises of the wicked. Your Majesty will hear the truth, not from the revolutionists, but from the Douma, which we pray Your Majesty not to tarry in calling."

The Emperor, after thanking the delegation, said in reply: "For a full realization of the liberties accorded, it is necessary primarily to restore order. This is possible only by the hearty cooperation of all the citizens of Russia. I know that the needs of the peasants are great, and to relieve them is my constant care. What could be done at present has been done, but there is still much to be accomplished, and therefore it is necessary to return to peaceful pursuits and to direct all your efforts to the furtherance of the objects in view. If others follow your good example, the work of improving the peasants' condition and the realization of the reforms will be greatly simplified."

Several officers of the Semionovsky regiment, stationed at Tsarskoe-Selo, which, Monday, was addressed by the Emperor, who commented on its tried loyalty and expressed the hope that it would always show itself as firmly united as it is at present, have called on the editor of the Russ and declared that they will hold him personally accountable hereafter for articles printed against the regiment.

RUN ON WARSAW BANKS.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

WARSAW (Russian Poland) Dec. 9.—There is a heavy run today on the government savings banks as a result of a campaign against them inaugurated by the radical papers. The depositors demand their money in gold.

A battalion of military engineers has mutinied at Gora Kalwarya, government of Warsaw, complaining of bad food and unsuitable quarters. The mutineers have destroyed the barracks kitchens, and have otherwise damaged the buildings. The military authorities have refrained from making arrests, fearing that it would provoke greater disturbances.

The military telegraphers at Kieff have refused to take the places of striking civilians.

The German government has asked the government of Russia to protect the Warsaw gas works, which are the property of a German company.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—In answer to an inquiry from the State Department intended to develop the number of Americans sojourning in his consular district, the American Consul at [illegible] replied that the number is small but variable. He adds that a peaceful settlement of the present troubles in Warsaw seems probable, as negotiations are progressing between the government and the workmen's unions.

EXPLORER AMUNDSEN REACHES EAGLE CITY.

Norway's Sailor-scientist, First to Force the Northwest Passage, Arrives in Alaska Town and Tells of His Search for the Magnetic Pole.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

EAGLE CITY (Alaska) Dec. 7, via Skagway, Friday, Dec. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Capt. Roand Amundsen, master of the Norwegian sloop Gjoa of Christiania and first of explorers to make his way through the Northwest Passage, has arrived here from Herschel Island, where he completed his perilous trip from the Atlantic to the Pacific. To get here Amundsen traveled 700 miles through snow and ice with Eskimo guides and accompanied by Capt. William Mogg of a wrecked whaling schooner, the Bonanza of San Francisco. They suffered severely from cold coming over the "divide."

"My expedition has been very successful," said Capt. Amundsen modestly. "Successful from a scientific standpoint as well as by the conquering of the passage, which has been my life ambition. I believe that my observations will prove of great scientific value. Among these are the extreme variation and constant changes in the magnetic needle at practically the magnetic North Pole. From the northern point of Peel Sound to the western end of Simpson's Strait the ship's compasses were found to be useless.

HUGGING THE POLE.

"I established an observation station at King William Land, in latitude 68 deg. 30 min. north and longitude 97 deg. west. I believe, basing my statement on my two years of observation, that the north magnetic pole is within ninety minutes of that point."

Observations have been taken day and night for a period of three years, and in the opinion of the explorer the actual position of the magnet will be determined as soon as his observations can be figured out. Evidently, the change from the position marked by Ross has been very slight.

Capt. Amundsen, with his crew of seven men, sailed from Christiania June 17, 1903. He has not only brought his ship through the passage that had never been completely traversed before, but he and his men arrived in the Arctic without casualty or any serious illness.

The route sailed was from Christiania to Baffin Bay, and then through Lancaster Sound, Barrow Strait, Peel Sound, James Ross Strait, Rae Strait, Simpson Strait, Dease Strait, Coronation Gulf and Dolphin and Union Straits to King Point, where the explorers obtained communication with the winter-bound fleet of whalers from San Francisco.

Between King William Land and Victoria Land, says Capt. Amundsen, the passage is very shallow and narrow. There are more than a hundred islands there, and at times the sounding was as shallow as three fathoms. These islands were seen and mentioned by Rae, and Capt. Amundsen says it is now definitely proved that they are land.

UNDER HERSCHEL'S LEE.

The Gjoa is wintering under the lee of Herschel Island, and as soon as the ice breaks away in the spring she will sail through Behring Sea to San Francisco. From the latter place she will proceed by way of Cape Horn to her home in Norway, thus accomplishing for the first time the complete circumnavigation of the American continent.

Capt. Amundsen credits his success mainly to the discipline, and the harmonious endeavors of his crew, but he cannot conceal the extreme satisfaction with which he realizes that he is the first navigator to succeed in an undertaking in which many of the greatest mariners of the world have failed.

After communication with his government and after resting here for awhile, he will return over the route by which he came and wait with his fellow-voyagers of the Gjoa for the ice to break up and permit him to sail for San Francisco.

Capt. Amundsen made inquiries among the Eskimos wherever he went for tidings of the lost explorer, Andre, but was unable to obtain any information about him. Some of the natives had never seen a white man before.

Capt. Amundsen states that the coldest weather he experienced was in March of 1904, when the mercury registered 79 deg. below zero.

PETERSBURG JEWS ARMED FOR BATTLE.

Kuthevan, Organizer of the Bloody Kishineff Riots, Enters Capital and Begins Denouncing Israelites—Mutinous Sailors Suppressed.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ST. PETERSBURG, Dec. 8, via Eydkuhnen, Saturday.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] M. Kuthevan, owner of the Bessarabiki and organizer of the first bloody Kishineff riots, is here in Petersburg preaching against the Hebrews to the intelligent classes and the students, apparently with the consent of the authorities.

Eighteen thousand Hebrews here are armed with revolvers and knives, and are well able and organized to resist attack.

A serious mutiny has just taken place among the sailors of the Fourteenth division. One thousand men positively refused to leave the city, saying they were being sent into a trap. It ended in their being surrounded by the Preobrajensk and Ismailovski regiments and the horse guards conveyed them in specially prepared barges to Kronstadt. The offense of the men was that they issued a list of demands to other divisions. Of these, the Eighth, and the Eighteenth are in a state of semi-revolt.

More operatives returned to work at the postoffice here today and large quantities of letters which have been lying for a long period were delivered, but no telegrams.

DENOUNCES WITTE.

In Moscow, M. Druglini, the postal delegate, who was arrested, is now released. He made a terrible speech against Count Witte, M. Durnovo and M. Sebastiani, the latter being the head of the St. Petersburg postoffice.

The run on the savings banks continues; the people are clamoring for payment in gold and silver; they do not want to accept paper money.

M. Nobel, the petroleum king, is reported to have sent 2,000,000 roubles abroad. The Minister of Finance protested, but M. Nobel insisted. The Novaya Zhisn asserts that [illegible] roubles worth of gold have left the country.

VLADIMIR'S DEVOTION.

Apropos of a recent fantastic report, according to which Grand Duke Vladimir is supposed to have threatened the Emperor, the truth is that Grand Duke Vladimir's devotion to his nephew is being much talked of. In fact, when the grand duchess recently left she tried hard to get her husband to go with her and so escape danger. He replied that he would not leave the Emperor, even if it cost him his life.

The outcry against M. Durnovo is growing. It is said that now he is the special nominee of the Emperor, who, it is believed, insisted on his presence in the Cabinet.

Wild reports are in circulation of Count Witte's resignation. The report that the martinet, Gen. Ignatieff, has been called to Tsarskoe Selo is quite unconfirmed.

CENSORSHIP MODIFIED.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

ST. PETERSBURG, Dec. 8, via Eydkuhnen, Dec. 9.—An imperial ukase issued today contains provisional laws governing the press in general. The censorship of periodicals and illustrated papers is abolished except in country districts, and punishments for the periodical press are practically abolished.

Responsibility for breach of the press laws must be established in courts of law. The right of the Minister of the Interior to prohibit publication of the discussion of questions affecting the government, is abrogated.

The ukase contains a long list of exceptional cases which will entail legal proceedings, with penalties on conviction ranging from a fine of $150 to imprisonment or deportation.

But Smoke-pots, not Bayonets, Will be the Weapons of War—Yellow Fever Spreads Despite Health Officials, and Islanders Declare for One Grand Massacre of Mosquitoes.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

HAVANA (Cuba) Dec. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] As the yellow fever has continued to spread despite the efforts of the health officials, the Havana papers are devoting long editorials to the proper steps to stamp out the scourge. El Mundo says that the fever has counted more victims in Cuba than all the cyclones and all the fires, and suggests that as the death of the mosquito means the end of the fever the work of smoking out these pests should not be done by installments in the neighborhoods where yellow fever appears, but that Havana should make an effort to kill all the mosquitoes indoors in one day by hiring thousands of workmen, putting on all the artillerymen, policemen, rural guards and employés of public works, and asking the aid of all business men in their own quarters.

The Secretary of the Treasury, Señor Rivera, today signed a decree lifting the quarantine from all ports of the United States, all vessels from Gulf of Mexico ports having to be disinfected on their first trip here.

LIKE CHRISTMAS MORN.

White House Rooms in Dee-lightful Clutter, Miss Alice's Presents Having Arrived.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Miss Roosevelt's much-discussed gifts from sovereigns of the Orient have finally been received at the White House. The upstairs living rooms of the President and his family, in consequence, suggest a Christmas morning, with articles of many and various materials, shapes and values, scattered round. There were twenty-seven boxes in all, and it took an immense express van to convey them from the customhouse at Georgetown to the White House.

As it is against the law for customs officials to state the value of the sum levied on goods as duty, nothing is known about the much-mooted duty the President's daughter was obliged to pay on the trophies of her recent trip to Japan and other Oriental countries. All known is that the duty money will be sent to Collector Nyman.

The gifts were presented to Miss Roosevelt by the Dowager Empress of China, the Mikado of Japan, and the Emperor of Korea.

Dr. Edwin J. Hughes, standing trial at North Yakima, Wash., on the charge of bigamy, hanged himself in his cell Friday night.

PITH OF NEWS FROM THE MIDDLE WEST.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Dec. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The mercury, which throughout the day, had stood above freezing suddenly commenced to fall this evening as the wind changed in the northwest and it is predicted that it will be close to 20 degrees before morning. The maximum temperature early in the day was 42 degrees and the minimum, at nightfall, 30 degrees. Storm signals went up over Lake Michigan and Lake Huron tonight with the approach of a low-pressure area from the northwest. Middle West temperatures.

CALL DALRYMPLE TRAITOR.

The first of a series of immediate municipal-ownership meetings was held tonight in the Twenty-eighth Ward. James Dalrymple, the Glasgow tramway expert, was branded as a traitor. Aldermen were denounced as criminals. Mayor Dunne was urged to drawdraw police protection from all Aldermen obstructing his plans and the audience was advised to use bullets and ropes against the men who vote against municipal ownership.

CUSTARD PIE SAVED HER.

With a newly-made custard pie as a weapon, Mrs. Jennie Ginochio, No. 217 Ashland boulevard, wife of John Ginochio, a wealthy wine merchant, succeeded in beating off two hold-up men who attacked her this evening and prevented them from getting $50 which she had in her purse.

WHEN IS A KISS A BITE?

Judge Gary knows—but, then, sometimes it's different. Today, the veteran jurist, sitting in District Court, was puzzled. Filomena Caprio said her husband was cruel. Francisco abused her, treated her shamefully, she said. "He struck me several times," the wife testified, "and once he took me in his arms and bit me on the cheek." "Are you sure it wasn't a kiss?" asked the court. "It was not a kiss," replied Mrs. Caprio. "I had the mark on my face for some time. You don't bite when you kiss." Judge Gary replied, "Well, I guess that it was not a kiss in this case. You ought to know."

MEXICO LACKS FLOUR.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

EL PASO (Tex.) Dec. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mexico is facing a serious flour stringency despite the decision of the government to offer free entrance for the American product. It was hoped when the concession was made that large importations from the United States would be received, but up to this time such has not proved a fact.

JOLIET (Ill.) Dec. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A gang of forgers by rapid work between 8 and 10 o'clock tonight, swindled Joliet merchants and saloonkeepers out of between $5000 and $10,000. Taking advantage of the holiday rush, they succeeded in getting checks cashed for sums ranging from $20 to $200.

HARRIMAN MAY HAVE TO EXPLAIN THINGS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] E. H. Harriman, it was decided today, may be recalled to the witness chair before the insurance investigation committee to explain the discrepancies between his testimony before that committee and the story told by Thomas F. Ryan relative to the incidents accompanying the purchase by Mr. Ryan of the majority stock of the Equitable Life from James H. Hyde. Whether Mr. Harriman will be called Monday is still an open question, because of the impression which has been gained by the members of the committee that Mr. Ryan will decline to answer fully the inquiries of Mr. Hughes regarding Mr. Harriman's efforts to obtain a slice of the Hyde stock the day or the day after the transaction between Mr. Hyde and Mr. Ryan was concluded.

If the holder of the Equitable majority stock consents to enter into the details of Mr. Harriman's negotiations for a share of the Hyde holdings, he will get rid of the charge of contempt which it is the intention of the committee to push before the District Attorney, and Mr. Harriman will not be called until later.

Interest in the Republican situation centered today in the testimony Thomas F. Ryan is expected to give before the insurance investigation committee as to what passed between himself and E. H. Harriman after Mr. Ryan's purchase of a controlling interest in the Equitable Life. If it should be established that Odell was acting in the interest of Mr. Harriman in urging a legislative investigation, there is little doubt that a special meeting of the State Committee will be called to choose a new chairman.

Odell has announced that he will not call a meeting of the committee, and his partisans take the ground that no meeting can be held unless he issues the call. This view is combatted by Republicans who have made a study of the laws and precedents. They assert that a majority of the committee may at any time force a meeting to take such measures as it may see fit.

So far as can be learned, President Roosevelt has not yet considered the question of causing a meeting of the State committee to be called.

Odd Fellows and Elks to Convey Dead Senator to Tomb—No Senators Coming from Capital.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

PORTLAND (Or.) Dec. 9.—It has been definitely decided that funeral services for the late Senator Mitchell will be held at the City Hall of Portland on Tuesday afternoon next; and that burial will be made in the family plot at Riverview Cemetery. While the plans are not yet complete, it is believed that the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks and the Odd Fellows, with which organizations Senator Mitchell was affiliated, will participate in the ceremonies.

NONE WILL ATTEND.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—Vice-President Fairbanks announced today that it was his understanding that friends of the late Senator Mitchell of Oregon would not request that a commitee of Senators be appointed to attend the funeral services, and therefore he would not name one.

MORMON HIERARCHS WIN.

SALT LAKE (Utah) Dec. 9.—A decision in favor of the authorities of the Mormon Church was rendered by Judge Morse in the State court today in a suit brought to secure an accounting of the tithing funds.

The defendants alleged that the contributions of tithing were voluntarily made, to be expended by the church authorities in such manner as they saw fit. This contention was sustained by Judge Morse.

PROPERTY TO BE APPORTIONED.

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—The World tomorrow will say: "J. P. Morgan & Co have formed a syndicate consisting of Morgan, Norman B. Ream, representing the Pennsylvania, the Erie and other allied railroad interests, H. McK. Twombley, representing the Vanderbilt interests, and George F. Baker, representing the First National Bank and the Reading and allied railroad interests, to take control over the 75,000 shares of the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton Railroad turned back into Mr. Morgan's hands by the Erie Railroad. The shares cost Mr. Morgan more than $10,000,000.

"It is generally believed that the personnel of the syndicate confirms the announcement made several days ago that the property is to be apportioned between the Pennsylvania and the Nickel Plate, which are owned by the Vanderbilts."

Knee-deep in Snow; Waiting Dead Master's Word.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

RENO (Nev.) Dec. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Covered with snow and sitting bolt upright in his spring wagon, C. R. Sears was discovered frozen to death Thursday afternoon about sixty-five miles from the Humboldt House on the road to the Mill City copper mines in Humboldt county. The man had been dead for more than twenty-four hours. The horses, mindful of the hands on the reins, were standing knee-deep in snow, waiting the word to go.

Sears left the Humboldt House on the 28th of November, soon after a storm had swept over the country, followed by a blinding snow storm which has only just subsided. Sears's absence was not noticed until the weather moderated, when a party went out to find him.

It is presumed Sears got bewildered and sick with the cold, and that while urging his horses he froze to death. He was a driver in the employ of the Mill City Copper Mining Company and was in the habit of making one trip a week from the Humboldt House to the mines.

ERS, NAKED, IN MARSHES.

ITALIAN TAKES TO HEELS

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

WOODLAND, Dec. 9.—Without a stitch of clothing to protect him, an Italian, presumably A. Lorento of Siskiyou county, has been wandering since 9 o'clock last night in the marshes east of Davisville in this county.

The man, who is undoubtedly insane, appeared at Webster early yesterday. After standing about, muttering to himself for some time, he proceeded to divest himself of every bit of clothing and immediately started on a dead run toward the north. He was not seen again until 5 o'clock this evening, when he was observed by workmen on the reservation, seven miles from Webster. At this time, Lorento had covered his nudity to a certain extent by a wheat sack tied about his waist.

Workmen who had been apprised of the crazy man's actions and were on the lookout for him, secured ropes and attempted to lasso him, but he eluded them, and, diving into one of the tule ponds, swam to the other side and has not since been seen.

A poll tax receipt made out to A. Lorento, Siskiyou county, June 16, and a passport giving his age were found in a pocketbook in his abandoned clothing.

New York City to Have a Rocky Mountain Club, Also a Big Dinner at Delmonico's.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Steps have been taken for the formation of a Rocky Mountain Club in New York, the members of which shall be former residents of the Rocky Mountain States now living in this city. The project is fathered by the Montana Society of New York, whose trustees, at a meeting held last night, formally launched the club idea.

It was decided to give a Montana dinner at Delmonico's on February 10, and to invite all the United States Senators from the Rocky Mountain States, as well as all officers of existing societies in this city composed of former residents of Rocky Mountain States. The States included in the movement are Oregon, Washington, Montana, Idaho, California, Nevada, Utah, and Colorado, and the Territories of Arizona and New Mexico.

W. J. McEvilly, secretary of the Montana Society, is in charge of the dinner, and those wishing to attend should communicate with him at No. 32 [illegible] street, this city.

BAD SMASH-UP.

Santa Fe East-bound Passenger and Extra Freight Lock Engines Near La Junta, Col.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

TOPEKA (Kan.) Dec. 9.—The general manager's office of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fé Railway here reports a terrific smash-up between No. 6, California passenger train eastbound, and an extra freight, at Cal[illegible], forty miles east of La Junta, at an early hour today.

Both trains were moving at about twenty-five miles an hour at the time they met head-on. The engines were interlocked and badly smashed. The mail car, the express car, a baggage car and the Wells-Fargo refrigerator car of No. 6, were smashed into kindling wood. Seven box cars on the freight are in the same condition.

None of the passengers were fatally hurt, but several were severely bruised and shaken up by the collision. Express Messenger Strong had his hips crushed and Mail Clerk Woods is seriously injured.

The exact cause of the wreck is unknown, but it is reported that Engineer Gaddy of the extra freight had orders against No. 6 and was supposed to remain on the siding at Cal[illegible] rather than to pull out on the main track. Engineer Simmons and the fireman of No. 6 are not mentioned among the injured.

A relief train was made up to go to the wreck to carry the passengers to their destination.

CHARGES OF PREJUDICE MADE.

TER (O.) Dec. 9.—Mrs. Grace Taggart's motion for a new trial was set for hearing December 19. Counsel for Mrs. Taggart presented a number of depositions and affidavits in support of the charge of prejudice against Judge Eason and asked a continuance in order to secure others. Judge Eason is said to have announced that he would have the hearing at once. Some of the affidavits, it is said, make sensational charges against Judge Eason. One of them will attempt to show that a newspaper man had influence upon the case.

COLORADO FLOOD.

far as the cross-bar only. Here it takes a sharp turn, and sweeps over into the left leg, that is into the Imperial Canal proper below its silted-up section of four miles. Even now with the waters subsided, this onrush against the lower peninsula formed by the letter A is a mighty and irresistible one, and as we watched from the deck of our steamer we could see every two or three minutes immense slices of the bank falling into the turgid stream. Acre by acre this body of land seems doomed to be eaten away. But the most serious immediate consideration is that, with this immense enlargement of the cross-cut canal by last week's flood, and the diversion into the Imperial Canal of fully 80 per cent. of the Colorado River waters, the brushwood dam proposition becomes a hopeless one. The mainland side is a crumbling bank, and the spit of land in mid-stream is fast being washed away. There are no stable points to build from or to. Twenty-six thousand dollars were spent upon the brushwood dam. But the river, in its wild flood has triumphed, and bidden the work to cease. To my eyes at all events one might now as well attempt to plug an opened faucet with a postage stamp as to stop this flow by brushwood mats.

CANAL WIPED OUT.

From this point our steamer sailed, not down the old bed of the Colorado River, where now only a trifling stream is flowing, but through the cross-cut, or rather round the wide sweeping channel into which the tiny cross-cut has been transformed, and so into what was once the Imperial Canal. But canal it can no longer be called. Instead of the original eighty-five feet, it is more than three hundred feet wide. The old banks of the canal have been wiped out of existence. We are sailing down a noble and powerfully-flowing stream, and, as we pass by, the caving in of banks to left and right, at times a whole line of bushes being engulfed, shows how the scouring out of a new channel is still going on.

For the present; however, this fact is certain—that the Imperial Canal, from the four-mile point below its original intake, is now the main stream of the Colorado River. The hand of man interfered, rashly it must now be confessed, for surely there should have been some controlling gate in the cross-cut emergency canal. The only answer is that these winter floods of last year and this year were quite unprecedented—quite unknown during the preceding decade. But here again, as in many things of life, it is precisely the unexpected that has happened, and costly will be the price that has now to be paid.

NOW NAVIGABLE PART OF RIVER.

From the remains of the abortive brushwood dam we steamed nine miles down the canal—now the navigable branch of the Colorado, be it noted—to a point where dredging operations are going on. A new channel is being cut across the low-lying swampy ground to send some of the surplus waters towards the Gulf by way of the Padrones or Quail River, one of the best known flood outlets of the old river, draining towards Volcano Lake, and thence by what is known as Hardy's Colorado to the sea. This cutting is about 1000 feet long, and, while the dredger was still at work deepening it a certain proportion of the canal water was already being here diverted. But most undeniably the main body of the Colorado River was still sweeping on towards the Alamo River and its final destination in the Salton Sea.

Here I may note that it is the overflow from Volcano Lake, fed by the Padrones or Quail River, and only partly carried off by Hardy's River, that has hitherto fed New River, which also forms one of the Imperial Valley channels draining northward towards Salton. New River, no less than the Alamo River, has been instrumental during these two successive winters of floods in feeding the inland lake. It has now been dammed to shut out from its bed the Volcano Lake waters. But at this very time, owing to last week's abnormal flood, an immense quantity of the Padrones River water, before it ever reaches Volcano Lake, is getting across country into New River. Thus the dam at Volcano Lake, for the present at all events, fails to effect the full end in view. New River is at this time carrying four times its normal flow.

The question therefore naturally arises how much of the water diverted by this newly dredged-out cut from the canal to the Padgones River will eventually reach, not the Gulf where it is intended to go, but Salton Sink by way of the New River channel instead of the Alamo. This point shows how many are the results, uncalculated and indeed incalculable, that are taking place in the vast reticulation of old-river courses that play a part in the Colorado system.

IMMENSE FLOOD.

The broad feature of the situation is that for the present at all events three-fifths of the entire waters of the Colorado River—allowing that one-fifth is diverted towards the Padrones channel—are now gaily sailing on their way to the Salton Sea. The old river bed, below the crossbar of our letter A, for all practical purposes disappears. Henceforth it will only act as a flood channel. Navigation to the Gulf is absolutely destroyed, though this navigation has been in recent years taken but little advantage of.

It may be eventually that we shall have a new navigable route from the sea, by way of Hardy's Colorado, Volcano Lake, Padrones River and the Imperial Canal. It might even result that this would prove a better navigable river than the old channel, because a narrower one and one therefore with fewer sand-bar obstructions at times of low water. But for the present these can be only speculations. The one undoubted fact is that at this moment there is no navigable Colorado River, and there never can be one so long as three-fifths of the stream go north to the Salton Sea. Navigation to the Gulf of California is absolutely stopped.

ROCKWOOD HOPEFUL.

Yet Mr. Rockwood still speaks hopefully. He considers that the cutting to the Padrones River will carry off a goodly proportion of the surplus waters of the canal, and, failing a return of the river to the eastern bed, may eventually form a new navigable stream. But he also places great faith on the intake headgate. If he gets this working by April 1, he considers that he will be able to take charge of most of the low river flow, and will so enable a solid earthwork dam to be constructed across the emergency channel by which all the unexpected mischief has been caused. When this barrier is completed, he contemplates closing the headgate, and sending back the river to its old channel. At first the scanty flow will backwash the silt against the earthwork dam and so strengthen it. Then the full powerful scour of the summer floods will induce the Colorado to abide in its old channel below the crosscut, by this time permanently sealed. Such, I believe, are Mr. Rockwood's plans, the brushwood dam idea to be abandoned, and work rushed on the headgate with a view to control the stream for a sufficient length of time to permit of the crosscut earthwork dam being constructed. There may also be gates and levees on the Alamo River to aid in the control operations.

One thing is certain, and must be provided against. There will be no immediate cessation of the inflow into the Salton Sea. Indeed the chief result of last week's flood, which has swung the main body of the Colorado River into the Imperial Canal, is likely to be a further rise in the level of the lake at Salton and consequent further disturbance for the Southern Pacific Railroad tracks. If the river is still uncontrolled at the time of the next summer flood there will, undoubtedly, then be a great further access of waters.

The situation so far is not a serious one as regards the great body of the Imperial Valley farmers. For instance, I am told that last week's abnormal flood affected only the Silsby or eastern side of the valley, where the waters from the New River, feeding the Blue Lake, submerged for a few days between 2000 and 3000 acres of land. This will have caused individual losses, no doubt, to some considerable extent, but not the wholesale ruin which certain exaggerated reports have represented. For the Imperial Valley as a whole, the new situation is that they have a big Alamo River—veritably a re-created Alamo River—flowing past their doors, instead of a modest and placid canal. But the control of these waters, at this point, presents no serious engineering difficulty. The chief sufferer by the continued great inflow of waters will be the Southern Pacific Railway at the other end of the valley. Brawley, the northern limit of cultivation, is still a good few miles distant from the Salton Sea, and although Brawley is far below sea level, there need be no anxiety on her account for a long time to come, even if the present order of the things were allowed to continue.

THE MEXICAN COMMISSIONERS.

I have asked Gen. Peña and Señor Blanco for an expression of their opinion. They have just come up from Mexico, where they visited the Volcano lake district, after which they made a tour over the Imperial Valley. So they have now, after their trip down the river today, fairly sized up the position. But they prefer for the present to make no comment. They explain that the whole situation is a most complex one and requires thorough study, and that in any case their report must be first of all to their own government.

While I write this dispatch on the steamer, we are slowly forcing our way up the river in a bright moonlight night, and at 10 o'clock are still some hours from Yuma.

Yesterday I visited the Laguna dam, about twelve miles up the Colorado River from Yuma. I found operations in full swing, for the heavy flood of last week from the Gila River below had no effect at Laguna except in cutting off communication by the stages on either side of the river for a few days. The scene was a busy one of activity, there being giant drills, pile drivers, rock crushers, dredgers and steam diggers all at work, and some 400 men engaged on the varied operations.

EDMUND MITCHELL.

Personnel of the Commission.

The commission named by the Mexican government to visit the United States and inquire into the situation at the intake of the California Development Company's canal is composed of men distinguished in the service of their country.

A man of especial interest is Brig.-Gen. Angel Garcia Peña, who heads the commission. He is the chief of what would be equivalent in the United States government service to head of the Coast and Geodetic Survey. He is at one and the same time the representative of the military and the civil authorities in everything that pertains to the public and national surveys.

Gen. Peña is a man who has been in the military service, and actively at that, for thirty-five years past, since he was a mere lad but 14 years old. At that tender age he entered the military college at Tacubaya, since moved to the national palace at Chapultepec. There he had as one of his professors in mechanical engineering a man recognized at that time as well as today as an authority, Ing. Ignacio Molina, now serving, strangely enough, as a member of the special commission of which Gen. Peña is the head.

From military college Gen. Peña plunged into an active military life at an age when most American boys would have been going through high school. But those were troublous and history-making times in the life of the republic which he served, and the young man saw plenty of good hard and active campaigning in fights with the Indians as well as in incipient revolutions following the opening days of Gen. Diaz's first administration.

He bore himself gallantly and well throughout all his trying experience and won recognition and rapid promotion. He was one of the officers who led the attack on 1500 Yaquis in the memorable engagement of Macocoba in 1900 when 800 of the Indians were slain outright and the backbone of their uprising effectually broken for all time.

Never since that time, he says, have the Yaquis been able to put up any concerted resistance. Their strength has gradually waned until today they are considered of no consequence whatever by the residents of the State.

Gen. Peña served as surveyor of lands in Sonora until 1902 when he was appointed to his present position.

The other members of the commission have served in public capacities for a number of years, and boast records of signal achievement which will not soon be forgotten in the history of the republic.

Col. Blanco is at present in charge of the Mexican boundary between El Paso and the Gulf. He, acting for the Mexican government, worked in conjunction with Col. Barlow when the present international boundary was established from El Paso west.

Ing. Ignacio Molina is one of the most distinguished engineers in the republic and was for a number of years instructor in engineering at the military academy.

WASHINGTON.

NEW SCANDAL IS UNEARTHED.

Secretary Shaw Removes Lid from Hospital Service.

More Doctors than Patients in Marine Wards.

Medical Attendance Costs Too Much.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Following remarks and recommendations in the annual report of the Secretary of the Treasury in regard to gross extravagances and squandering of public money in the Marine Hospital Service, an investigation begun several weeks ago has revealed a state of things which is admitted by Treasury officials to be nothing less than startling.

In most of the smaller hospitals there have been (exclusive of medical officers) more surgeons, pharmacists, etc., than actual patients.

Throughout the list a wide discrepancy is shown. All figures are taken from reports of public hospitals, and the Marine Hospital Bureau. These reports show that it costs from two to three times as much to care for a patient in marine hospitals as it does in outside hospitals by private contract.

Secretary Shaw calls attention to the fact that appropriations were made for new marine hospitals at Pittsburgh and Buffalo without his advice, and he has recommended that these hospitals and others be abandoned.

TO CHOOSE COMMISSION BILL.

DOLLIVER PREDICTS AS TO RATE

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Positive prediction that the Senate committee will adopt, in substance, if not in form, the rate-regulation bill prepared by the Interstate Commerce Commission, is made by Senator Dolliver of Iowa, recognized as one of the leaders of what may be called the extreme regulation element in the Senate.

Senator Dolliver is of the opinion that the majority of the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce will not follow the lines of the Foraker and Elkins bills, which give to the courts power to review in its entirety the action of the commission, but will rather support the general principle of the bill presented by the commission itself, which contemplates the court reviewing the order of that body only in so far as its legality goes.

Senator Dolliver said: "There are just three propositions of rate legislation in the Senate at this time. These are embodied in the Foraker bill, the Elkins proposition and the commission bill. In my judgment, neither the Foraker bill nor the Elkins proposition will meet the general approval of the committee. The committee will undoubtedly adopt in substance, though not necessarily in form, the provision contained in the commission's bill."

ANOTHER COMPLICATION?

SERRA SENT TO SEE CASTRO.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Official announcement of the appointment of Signor Phillipo Serra, for nearly ten years Italian Consul-General at San Francisco, as Italian Minister to Venezuela, indicates another complication in the situation now existing between President Castro and the governments of Europe, arising from the damage claims awarded in settlement of the revolution of 1902.

Signor Serra departs very soon, it is said, for his new post, and his main object in going is to press payment of damages already awarded, and to present fresh claims which have materialized since the first were made.

Italy and France now appear to be thoroughly in accord in insisting that President Castro meet the payments when due, and give consideration to new ones as fast as they are presented.

Although at the State Department it is believed that any demonstration will be avoided, yet it is thought that in the case that one nation acts the other will assist.

GRIDIRON CLUB.

NEW OFFICERS ELECTED.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—At the annual meeting of the Gridiron Club the following officers were elected:

President, Richard Lee Fearn, New York Tribune; vice-president, Samuel Blythe, New York World; secretary, John S. Shriver, Cincinnati Times Star; treasurer, George H. Walker; Executive Committee, Daniel C. Bone, Charles A. Boynton, Associated Press; Louis Garthe, Baltimore American.

W. U. Jermaine of the Minneapolis Journal and Seattle Times was elected resident member of the club.

SMALLPOX ON SYLPH.

NO ALARM FOR PRESIDENT.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—By the breaking out of smallpox on the naval yacht Sylph, retained for the use of the President and his family, the vessel is practically quarantined, and the crew put under close observation by the health authorities. Only one case has developed, that of Clarence Marlow, a negro sailor. He was removed to a hospital.

It has been a month or more since the President or any member of his family has been aboard the Sylph, and no alarm is felt on that score.

LOUISIANA AROUSED.

TRYING TO HELP MERIWETHER.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—Midshipman Meriwether's case was the subject of a conference today between President Roosevelt and the entire Congressional delegation from Louisiana, the State from which Meriwether was appointed to the Naval Academy. The court-martial proceedings are now before Secretary Bonaparte for review. The Louisiana delegation is anxious to prevent drastic action against Meriwether.

The President informed his callers that until he had gone over the matter with Secretary Bonaparte he could take no action regarding it.

BEVERIDGE CONFIDENT.

CONSOLIDATION STATEHOOD.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—Senator Beveridge of Indiana, chairman of the Committee on Territories, had a conference with the President today in part regarding the status of Statehood legislation.

The Senator is confident that Congress at the present session will erect two new States, and that opposition to consolidation will not be serious. One State will be erected from Oklahoma and Indian Territory, and the other from Arizona and New Mexico. Considerable opposition to Statehood for Arizona and New Mexico exists, but Senator Beveridge believes it will not be successful.

BOYCOTT IS BEGUN.

SAN FRANCISCO SEES IT.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 9.—The anti-American boycott has reached this port. It is the custom of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company to allow peddlers and other small dealers on board their China liners during the luncheon hour for the convenience of the Chinese sailors, firemen, cooks and waiters, who, by reason of the exclusion, may not do their shopping ashore.

When the Manchuria docked on Tuesday last notices in Chinese were tacked up all over the ship. These notices called the attention of the Manchuria's crew to the existence of a boycott against American goods and forbade them to buy any wares offered for sale on the liner's decks during her stay in this port. So far the Manchuria's Mongolians have followed the edict of the boycott notice to the letter, and dealers have abandoned their efforts to trade with them.

NO MODIFYING EXCLUSION ACT.

HOUSE AND SENATE LEADERS WILL GIVE NO HELP.

As a Result, China Will Re-enforce Boycott Against American Goods and Our Exports to Orient Will Decrease—Rockhill and Na Tung in Deadlock—San Francisco Boycott.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—Congress will not enact any legislation modifying the Chinese Exclusion Act. As a result the boycott of American goods will be reimposed shortly, and there will be a greater development of the anti-foreign feeling throughout China.

The prediction as to the attitude of Congress was made yesterday by leaders of both House and Senate.

The policy of the Chinese people is based entirely upon this attitude. In edicts issued by the Chinese Emperor the people were urged to refrain from boycotting American goods pending action by Congress.

The viceroys of various provinces proclaimed that President Roosevelt had given assurances that Congress would pass remediary measures, and that the Chinese should continue to purchase all goods as heretofore until the purposes of the legislative branch of the American government developed.

It is understood the Chinese Legation here has been making inquiries as to the prospect of action by Congress, and is satisfied there is no chance whatever of the enactment of satisfactory legislation.

TREATY DEADLOCKED.

A deadlock has occurred in the treaty negotiations between Minister Rockhill and Na Tung of the Chinese Foreign Office as a result of the refusal of the former to allow the admission of Chinese laborers to the American possessions in the Pacific.

In exchange for this privilege Na Tung was willing to define the classes of Chinese which should be granted entrance into the United States, thus authorizing the government to exclude every one who failed to come directly within those classes. With Congress unyielding and treaty negotiations impossible of successful conduct, the President is confronted by the probability of a serious blow to American commerce in the Orient. Last year's increase of exports was chiefly to China, Japan and four other countries, amounting in the case of the first named empire to $41,000,000. Of this sum $22,500,000 was in cotton cloth, $10,000,000 in copper and $3,500,000 in mineral oils.

WASHINGTON BRIEFS.

Shaw Authorizes Interest Payment.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—The Secretary of the Treasury today announced that he has authorized the payment of the interest on United States government bonds due January 1, 1906, on December 15, 1905. Coupons due January 1 will be paid on presentation on and after December 15. Checks for the interest on registered bonds will be mailed on the same date. The total interest payment anticipated will aggregate about $4,200,000.

Burton Desires No Assignment.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—Senator Burton this afternoon wired his colleague, Senator Long, notifying him that he did not desire any committee assignments, pending the determination of his case in the courts, and Senator Long so informed Senator Hale, as chairman of the Republican Committee on Committees. Senator Burton is at present chairman of the Committee on Forest Reservations and a member of the Committees on Post-offices, Public Lands, Pensions and Claims.

Three-fourths Would Respond.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—Gen. F. C. Ainsworth, militia secretary, in his report on the militia of the United States, says it is estimated that about 75 per cent. of the organized militia would respond to the call for troops to repel invasion or suppress insurrection against the authority of the United States, the percentage being the same as that estimated for the preceding year. The secretary says: "Increase of interest on the part of the younger men in the military has been marked and the morale of the organizations has been appreciably advanced."

MRS. ROGERS BURIED.

HOOSICK FALLS (N. Y.) Dec. 9.—With very simple services, the body of Mrs. Mary M. Rogers, who was hanged at Windsor, Vt., yesterday, was buried today in St. Mary's Cemetery here.

It had been generally supposed that the body would be brought over the Boston and Maine Railroad to the station here last night and several hundred persons had gathered at the depot. To avoid the crowd, friends of the Rogers family appealed to the railroad officials to have the train stopped at Hoosick. This was done and the body was removed from the baggage car at that station, where it was taken in charge by undertakers. The casket was placed in a wagon and driven to the cemetery. It had been planned to make an immediate interment, but at the last moment this plan was abandoned and the body was placed in a vault, in accordance with the wish of relatives and friends for a final opening of the casket. Meantime, the vault was secured and an armed guard remained in charge.

Awaiting the funeral party at the cemetery were Rev. Francis A. McCranor, Kathryn Callahan and a sister of the dead woman, a brother, Louis, and a few intimate friends of the family.

At Marysville, Harry Bradley, a 12-year-old boy, stabbed Johnnie McGuire, aged 12, this afternoon, after a quarrel. The weapon used was a long bladed knife. McGuire is believed to be seriously injured.

FLASHES FROM THE WIRES

The Navy Department has decided to sell the transport Zafiro, which is now at the Puget Sound naval station. The Zafiro was bought by the Navy Department in 1898 for $80,000. It is roughly estimated that the ship will sell for $25,000.

Secretary Metcalf of the Department of Commerce and Labor yesterday dismissed the charges made by the World's Fair Navigation Company of St. Louis against Archibald Gordon, inspector of hulls at that port.

Information has been filed in the District Court of Council Bluffs, charging Pat Crowe, the alleged kidnaper of Eddie Cudahy, with highway robbery. He is charged with being implicated in the robbery of last July of a streetcar crew and two passengers.

That the Chinese government will not be required to pay punitive damages for the murder of several missionaries of the Presbyterian board of foreign missions at Lien Chau, China, several weeks ago, has been decided, so far as that board is concerned.

Signor Palo Carvino, Minister of the Treasury, made his budget statement before the Chamber of Deputies yesterday, showing the good condition of Italian finances. Notwithstanding the heavy expenses sustained, the budget shows a surplus, and there is no need of an increase in taxation.

Charles H. Graves, United States Minister to Sweden and Norway, yesterday had an audience of King Haakon VII. He presented the congratulations of President Roosevelt, and expressed the President's wishes for the welfare of Norway and for the promotion of good relations between that country and the United States.

DR. HART PLEADS GUILTY.

CHICAGO, Dec. 9.—Dr. Oliver B. Hart, who came to this city from St. Louis some months ago, pleaded guilty today to the murder of Irene Klokow. He was asked by Judge Barnes if he knew that under his plea of guilty he could be sentenced to death, and he nodded affirmatively.

It was agreed by the State's attorney and by counsel for Hart to leave the case to Judge Barnes for sentence, but witnesses were introduced to show that Hart was not mentally responsible. Several prominent alienists, one of whom pronounced him a "high-grade idiot," declared that Dr. Hart was mentally incompetent.

Judge Barnes took the case under advisement, remarking that he would give his decision within a few days.

TO SAN DIEGO HE'S BOUND.

COLORADO SPRINGS (Colo.) Dec. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Charles L. Tutt, one of the "Big Three" in the "mill trust," having made a million in mining and milling ventures since the discovery of Cripple Creek, has retired and will devote himself to enjoying life by spending his money.

Tutt is a lover of the sea. He has purchased a fine sea-going pleasure yacht for $60,000 and rechristened it the Anemone. It was built by Hon. J. Murry Mitchell, a wealthy Englishman. It will go from New York to San Diego via Cape Horn.

Tutt, in complying with the law regarding registering at the port of entry nearest his residence, must do so at Denver, at a city one mile above sea level. He will go to San Diego early in the year for a long cruise.

The Anemone, being an English vessel, Tutt must pay duty on her or fly the English flag.

CORDAGE TRUST REORGANIZED.

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—A reorganization of the Standard Rope and Twine Company, known as the "cordage trust," was announced today. In the new plan, it is said that "the old capital stock of the Standard Rope and Twine Company having been wiped out by the decree of Chancellor Magee, no provision has been made for it in the organization plan." The plan provides for a foreclosure of the first mortgage, the formation of a new company, to be known as the Standard Cordage Company, to be organized under the laws of New York, and the issuance of $2,806,000 in first mortgage 5 per cent. bonds; $2,500,000 in adjustment 5 per cent. voting bonds, and $2,800,000 in capital stock; a total of $8,106,000, as compared with $21,506,190 of securities now outstanding against the company.

MAKES UP WITH COLOMBIA.

CARACAS, Dec. 9.—Dr. Lopez de Baralla, former Minister of Foreign Affairs, who was appointed to conduct the negotiations in behalf of Venezuela and Señor Grenado, the confidential agent of Colombia, in behalf of the latter republic yesterday signed an agreement providing for the resumption of diplomatic relations between Venezuela and Colombia, interrupted since the time of the Matos revolution and involving boundary disputes.

AGITATION ENDS IN A KILLING.

ROME, Dec. 9.—Recently there has been considerable agitation by Southern wine growers over the commercial modus vivendi between Italy and Spain, under which a duty of $4 on every 100 kilos of Spanish wine is reduced to $2.40. The growers claim that the Spanish will compete with their product and compel them to reduce their price. The agitation today reached such a point that several demonstrations were made. At Aurisano, during an attempt to attack the City Hall, the police was obliged to use their arms. One person was killed and several were wounded.

NO AGREEMENT YET REACHED.

ROME, Dec. 9.—It is asserted that an agreement has not yet been reached between France and Germany concerning the question to come up at the conference on Moroccan reforms, to be held at Algeciras, Spain, December 15. The Italian government is working to have a complete understanding reached by the two powers. M. Barros has gone to Paris in connection with the conference.

Baroness Sedwitz Journeys to Peoria to Effect Reconciliation With Catholic Bishop Spalding.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

PEORIA (Ill.) Dec. 9.—Baroness Sedwitz, a sister of the Marquise de Montiers, both of whom, reared as wards of Bishop John Lancaster Spalding of the diocese of Peoria, created a sensation over the world by renouncing Catholicism a year ago, is in Peoria to see Bishop Spalding and effect a reconciliation with the noted prelate. It is announced semi-officially that the famous woman will sue for readmission to the Roman Catholic Church.

The baroness and the marquise were formerly the Misses Caldwell, and were born in Kentucky. They were taken as wards by the Bishop of Baltimore, and at his death were assigned to Bishop Spalding of Peoria. Both married wealthy French noblemen and are now independently rich. Before their renunciation of the Roman Catholic religion they gained note by endowing the Roman Catholic College at Washington, D. C.

An effort was made by Baroness Sedwitz to secure an audience with Bishop Spalding last night, but the prelate asked for time to consider, and a further attempt toward an audience will now be made.

50c——Third Annual Box Sale——50c

This Sale at Store Number 3, Second and Spring Streets, (Formerly Dean's)—Tomorrow Only

Bigger, Better, Broader, Than Ever Before. The Event Thousands Have Been Waiting For

An explanation of the plan and purpose of this "Box Sale" is essential—for the reason that there are so many visitors and residents in Los Angeles now who were not here a year ago. In the first place, advance orders for large quantities of Holiday Merchandise are placed months ahead in anticipation of this event. Secondly, buying for Eight Stores we naturally get goods below prevailing market prices—often for less than actual cost of production. This enables us to include in the sale articles that regularly retail from 50c to $25.00.

There are, of course, more of the lower priced than of the higher priced pieces—but you'd be surprised to know how many $5.00, $10.00 and $15.00 articles are included. And we absolutely guarantee that each and every box contains some article worth fully 50 cents, if not more.

In the Box Sale

Think of getting a $25.00 Punch Bowl for 50 cents! Somebody will. There will also be an order for a $10.00 decorated salad set. Some one will get that for 50c. A chocolate set—value $12.00—and a large number of other articles, $5.00 to $15.00 values, at 50 cents in the box sale.

There are exactly Twenty-five Hundred boxes to be sold tomorrow—each box exactly al —without any mark of identification to tell what any box contains. You simply indicate a clerk the box you want; he'll hand it over, and take your 50 cents. Whatever's in the belongs to you. By selecting several boxes you're bound to be ahead, because hundreds the articles range in value from $2.00 to $20.00. Where articles are too bulky to go into boxes, numbered orders for some will be inclosed, entitling the purchaser to the article ing the corresponding number. This box sale will be by far the most important trade ever held in Los Angeles—a merchandise movement that will stand without a peer in Pacific Southwest. Positively no telephone or mail orders filled—come in person, or some one to select for you.

[illegible]EW YORKERS WIN BIKE RACE.

[illegible] WATCHED BY TWENTY-[illegible]VE THOUSAND PEOPLE.

[illegible] of Miles Falls Four Hun[illegible] and Seventy-three Below the [illegible]—Five Thousand Dollars in [illegible] Distributed—Long Island [illegible] Second, Boston Third.

[illegible] ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

[illegible] YORK, Dec. 9.—Eddie Root [illegible] Fogler, the New York team, [illegible] six-day bicycle race in Madi[illegible] Garden after covering 2260 [illegible] six laps, and finished shortly [illegible] o'clock tonight in the presence [illegible] people.

[illegible] Menus Bedell, the Long Isl[illegible], were awarded second prize; [illegible] and Moran of Boston got [illegible] Vanderstuyft and Stol, fourth; [illegible] and Hollister, fifth; Downing [illegible] sixth; Logan and Downey, [illegible] Galvin and McDonald, eighth. [illegible] were seven capital prizes, [illegible] to the winners down to $200 for the seventh team. Special prizes distributed among the riders brought the aggregate of prize money considerably above $5000. Root easily held his rival throughout the distance, and finally won by four lengths. The record for a six-day contest is 2733 miles and four laps. The riders on this year's race therefore fell about 473 miles below.

TIGHT VICTORY.

Moran of the Boston team and Stol of the Belgium-Holland team rode for the third honors, Moran winning in the final sprint by one length.

Downing and Hollister, of the teams tied in fifth place, furnished an exciting close to the contest. They rode slowly about the bowl-like track until near the finish, when both started to sprint. At the height of the rush Downing's wheel slipped from beneath him and he had a bad fall. This enabled Hollister to win easily.

Matt Downey of Boston, who hitherto has been an amateur, was awarded a special prize of $350 for his clever riding, having led in most of the sprints and having been in front during the greatest number of laps.

THE FINAL SCORE.

The final score in the six-day race was as follows:

Root-Fogler, 2260.6; Bedell-Bedell, 2260.6; Vanderstuyft-Stol, 2260.5; MacLean-Moran, 2260.5; Hopper-Hollister, 2260.4; Downing-Bowler, 2260.3; Logan-Downey, 2260.3; Galvin-McDonald, 2260.1.

As a result of the special heat races ridden to determine the positions of the tied teams, the final standing in the race was as follows:

Root-Fogler first, Bedell-Bedell second, MacLean-Moran third, Vanderstuyft-Stol fourth, Hopper-Hollister fifth, Downing-Bowler sixth, Logan-Downey seventh, Galvin-McDonald eighth.

TRYING HARD TO SAVE FOOTBALL.

COMMITTEE ON RULES SITTING AT PHILADELPHIA.

Suggestions Made for New Rules for Betterment of Game and Lessening of Brutality—More Open Play Recommended and Punishment for Rowdy Exponents of the "Sport."

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 9.—The football rules committee met tonight with a full attendance. A resolution was adopted stating: "This committee is in favor of action leading toward the bettering of the game and the lessening of brutality; the placing of the officials in a central body, and rendering an evasion of rules unprofitable."

The suggestions offered during tonight's session proposed a more open game by strengthening the center and weakening the ends of the line. They were as follows:

First, the rules should distinguish between unnecessary roughness and brutality. Brutality should include "slugging" and "kneeing." The penalty for these offenses should be disqualification of the guilty player until the end of the half, no substitute being permitted to take his place; two such disqualifications in a season to operate as a bar to such player's further participation in any intercollegiate game during that season.

The former "unnecessary roughness" should include the use of "straight arm" and "elbow offense," "piling up" and other acts of a similar character.

Second, to bring more open play the following changes are recommended: (a) forward passing permissible back of the line of scrimmage; (b) on defense there shall not be more than six players on the line of scrimmage; of the players back of the line of scrimmage three of them must be at least five yards back of the line.

He Was Thawing Out Dynamite.

FRESNO, Dec. 9.—In an explosion of dynamite at a camp of the San Joaquin Power Company at Lane's bridge, on the line between this county and Madera county, today at noon, Jack Reed was killed. His face and body were mangled beyond recognition. Reed had dynamite thawing out in a hole warmed by a fire. Probably embers were left in the dirt. Reed had a family in Springfield, Mass.

BEAR CATCHER WINS CROCKER.

TAKES POPULAR VICTORY FROM TITANIA AND NICOLAS.

Third Horse Rules Favorite in the Betting, but Accepts the Princess' Tail and Loses the Place—Ferguson's Brown Lowers California Record by Half a Second.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 9.—There were only three contestants in the Crocker Selling Stakes, and it resulted in a popular victory when Bear Catcher won in a canter from Princess Titania and San Nicolas. The latter ruled favorite in the betting, but finished last. The start was good, and Princess Titania was leading on the first turn, with Bear Catcher last, being shut off. This can be said to have won the race for Ferguson's marvel, as he had the most in reserve. San Nicolas cracked after trying to keep up with Princess Titania. The Brown horse also lowered the California record for the distance by half a second. Time 1:38½. Weather fine; track fast.

Summary:

Six and a half furlongs: Crigll, 108 (T. Sullivan,) 4 to 1, won; Yellowstone, 110 (League,) 2 to 1, second; Scherzo, 110 (Clark,) 5 to 2, third; time 1:21. Silver Heels, Forerunner and Nonie also ran.

Futurity course: Father Catchem, 117 (Otis,) 13 to 2, won; Dr. Gardner, 106 (Clark,) 7 to 2, second; Rey Del Mundo, 109 (Prior,) 3 to 1, third; time 1:10¾. Charlatan, Busy Bee, I'm Joe, Warwheel and Cassasa also ran.

Five furlongs: Crusados, 122 (Prior,) even, won; Tocolaw, 117 (Knapp,) 6 to 1, second; H. L. Frank, 108 (Treubel,) 25 to 1, third; time 0:59¼. Cloudlight, Young Pilgrim and Classic also ran.

One mile, Crocker Selling Stakes, purse $2000: Bear Catcher, 117 (McBride,) 8 to 5, won; Princess Titania, 90 (Greenfield,) 9 to 2, second; San Nicolas, 112 (Radtke,) even, third; time 1:38½.

Seven furlongs: Corn Blossom, 108 (Radtke,) even, won; Conreid, 108 (Knapp,) 14 to 5, second; Gloomy Gus, 107 (League,) 60 to 1, third; time 1:27. Chalk Hedrick, Wexford, Eckersall and Prickles also ran.

One and one-sixteenth miles: Firm Foot, 107 (Knapp,) 6 to 5, won; Hugh McGowan, 107 (Radtke,) 2 to 1, second; Watercure, 107 (L. Williams,) 5 to 1, third; time 1:47. Ink, Blue Eyes and No Remark also ran.

San Bernardino and Orange.

[NEWS REPORTS FROM TIMES CORRESPONDENTS.]

COLTON.

PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN.

COLTON, Dec. 9.—Twice as many members in the Chamber of Commerce as the week before, and $50 to add to the treasury, was the report at a meeting of that organization last evening. The chamber is arranging to extensively publish the advantages of the city. Last evening it was decided to place an advertisement in The Times.

The preliminary steps in the annexing of territory adjacent to the city have been taken.

COLTON NOTES.

Prof. Green, principal of the Colton High School, stated today that of the 115 high schools in the State only twelve have a larger representation in the freshman class at Stanford University.

Miss Hope Burgess, who has been the guest of her cousin, Miss Myrtle Hubbard, returned yesterday to her home in Los Angeles.

Mrs. E. A. Brink and Mrs. G. S. Bailey have returned to Pomona, after a visit with Mr. and Mrs. I. W. Brink of this city.

SECRET DIVORCE SUIT.

William Vinson commenced an action Wednesday for the annulment of his marriage to Jennie Vinson, and until tonight efforts to suppress news of the proceedings had been successful. Vinson charges his wife with bigamy. He was married to her here in 1901. Both took an active part in religious work until a week ago, when she suddenly disappeared.

Two days before her disappearance he had discovered she had married a Michael Aulliffe at Flagstaff, Ariz., in 1899 and he is still living and no divorce had been obtained by either. Vinson also alleges his wife on marrying Aulliffe gave her name as Sara Kendall. Vinson is prostrated at this exposure.

PULLMAN PORTER GOES FREE.

Albert Hill, Pullman porter who was arrested at Needles Tuesday charged with robbery by Mrs. Lucille Willits, a pretty young woman of Des Moines, Iowa, was discharged by Justice Thomas this evening. Hill's preliminary examination came to a sudden close by the woman testifying that the porter had demanded the money and she had given it to him.

DEBATERS TALK OF SHIPPING.

CORONA, Dec. 9.—At the first interscholastic debate of the season held last evening in the operahouse between the High School teams of Chino and Corona, the latter won on the negative side of the question, "Resolved, that the granting of ship subsidies would be for the best interest of the United States." Chino was represented by Miss Ruth Brown and Mildred N tle, and Corona by Harold Hull and Miss Marion Foss. The judges were Mr. Jolliffe of Ontario, S. C. Evans and Mr. Irving of Riverside. This was Chino's first entrance into the Swing debating contest. Profs. Murphy and Hay of Chino and Corona sat with the contestants.

The Temescal Water Company directors have organized by electing Frank Chase, president; Charles Scofield, secretary, and the Citizens' Bank, treasurer.

Rev. D. McG. Gandier of San Bernardino will preach in the Baptist Church Sunday morning and address a union temperance meeting in the Baptist Church in the evening.

Mrs. T. O. Andrews left today for a two months' absence in Fresno and Bakersfield.

RIVERSIDE.

SHOTS MISS BURGLAR.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

RIVERSIDE, Dec. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Gill of North Orange street were awakened tonight at 10:30 o'clock by the crash of glass. Mr. Gill looked about and found a window broken. Under the window he discovered a man. He inquired of the man what he was doing and the fellow asked for something to eat. The man acted suspiciously and Mr. Gill shot at him, but the cartridge merely snapped. Then Mrs. Gill took the firearm from her husband's hand, carried it to another window and fired a shot at the burglar, who was then retreating. The shot evidently missed. A pretty good description of the prowler was obtained.

HUNTINGTON BEACH.

YOUNG PRISONER CONFESSES.

HUNTINGTON BEACH, Dec. 9.—When Bert Skillman, a 15-year-old boy, was arrested a few days ago on complaint of the Newport Gun Club's keeper, who charged him with burglary, some sympathetic citizens talked of raising funds to provide for the lad's defense in court, giving full faith to his claim of innocent intentions.

According to his own statement, he was homeless and hungry, and while tramping along the road to Newport stopped at the clubhouse to obtain food. A week's confinement in jail at Santa Ana has brought out a different story from the boy, and a change of sentiment on the part of his erstwhile defenders. His confession to the officers here today is an astonishing story of criminality. He not only admits having taken the articles missed from the clubhouse, including a valuable watch and a gun, but gives a long list of other similar crimes committed and has surrendered a collection of stolen articles which he had cached on the beach below Newport.

The property recovered is not recognized as belonging to any one in this locality, excepting what was taken from the clubhouse. If the boy's report is true, most of it belongs to residents of Los Angeles, from which city he had but recently arrived when captured at the clubhouse. Constable Winslow has taken charge of the property and will endeavor to find the owners. He will also try to locate young Skillman's parents and place them in communication with their wayward son, who, in his latest story, indicates that his home is at Santa Barbara. Upon his plea of guilty he will be committed to the State school at Whittier, where he will have something over five years in which to reform.

THIS PICKER, CRAZY HE.

Lunatic Hires Gang to Take Unripe Fruit from Orchard in Redlands.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

REDLANDS, Dec. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The orange grove of J. M. Cadwell on Smiley Heights was entered today by an unknown crazy man who had hired a gang of pickers—the trees were stripped of green and ripe fruit and more than 200 boxes were filled before the pickers were discovered by J. E. Woodruff, the overseer of the grove.

No action will be taken against the man as he is irresponsible.

SAN DIEGO.

MAYOR AGREES TO SIGN.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SAN DIEGO, Dec. 9.—Mayor Sehon and the officers of the Southern California Mountain Water Company have agreed to sign the contract for supplying the city with water for fire and domestic purposes, Monday having been the day fixed for the signatures. Specifications for the work on the pipe line have been circulated among bidders, and work will be commenced as soon as the contract is awarded. The signing of the contract, which was passed over the Mayor's veto, will mean much toward the development of the city.

HOLDS ROWAN FOR TRIAL.

In the Township Justice Court this forenoon, Thomas E. Rowan was held under $2000 bonds for the Superior Court for the alleged larceny of a diamond from Dr. E. G. Logan of Escondido. Rowan is in the life-insurance business and in years past has been prominent in musical circles. The examination was held behind closed doors, this being at the request of counsel for defendant.

DOESN'T STOP NUPTIALS.

Daniel E. Bowman of Valley Center, who claims to have shot and slain Jim Woods in self defense, has been held for preliminary trial under a $2000 bond on the charge of murder. The complaining witness is James Woods, an uncle of the deceased. Bowan, who is 68 years of age, is to be married on Sunday. This was the date set before the tragedy and Mr. Bowan says that he sees no reason to postpone the ceremony.

SAN DIEGO CITY NOTES.

The funeral of Mrs. Elisa V. Roberts, mother of Congressman Roberts of Massachusetts, was held this afternoon, under the auspices of Southern Chapter of the Eastern Star. Mrs. Roberts, whose age was 73, had been a resident of this city for twenty-two years.

On account of the fine condition of the county treasury a call will be issued within the next few days for the cashing of all outstanding registered warrants. This will put about $30,000 in circulation.

Montgomery Ward and wife, accompanied by their daughter, arrived yesterday at Hotel del Coronado, where they will spend the winter.

The Spreckels electric street railway system is to increase its power capacity from 500 to 1500 horse-power, the intention of the company being to install ten-minute service on all of the lines.

SANTA BARBARA.

OLD STAGE DRIVER DIES.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SANTA BARBARA, Dec. 9.—Jim Myers, familiarly known as "Uncle Jim, the stage driver," died last week in San Francisco. He was well known all over the West as a pioneer stage driver, having been in that capacity in California for thirty-five years, besides a previous experience in Nevada and New Mexico.

He drove from Missouri west to the San Francisco-San Diego run, over the Newhall-Ventura route, the Santa Barbara-Santa Ynez route, the Lompoc-Santa Barbara "gap," and from this city to Gaviota, and later drove from Gaviota to Los Olivas.

In Nevada Myers was associated with Hank Monk and N. W. Wines, both famous stage drivers, and in this locality was in business with Matt Kinney, the oldest stage driver now in this locality.

Myers was a native of New York, aged 65. He was the father of James A. Myers, Walter R. Myers and Mrs. Edwin Hecox.

BOY RUNS AWAY.

Mike Slivkoff, who resides at No. 1113 Mateo street, recently took a trip to the Hawaiian Islands, with the idea of locating there, and left his son Willie at home with his mother. When the father returned on Thursday the boy was not there, having run away three weeks ago. He is 15 years of age, has light brown hair and blue eyes; is about 5 feet, 2 inches tall, and walks slightly stooped. The father is anxious to receive information of his whereabouts.

NEW WELSH SOCIETY.

Rev. Dr. E. P. Thomas, pastor of the Welsh Presbyterian Church, last week organized a young men's literary society in his church, as a means of interesting the young men of his congregation during the winter. Its purpose is social, literary and religious, and special attention will be given to the education of the members in the art of public speaking. The following officers were elected: President, Rev. E. P. Thomas; vice-president, E. R. Williams; secretary, J. E. Jenkins; corresponding secretary, Emyrs Owen; treasurer, T. Evans; musical director, Fred Hughes; organist, I. J. Williams.

Grand Holiday Display and Sale

BEGINNING MONDAY MORNING, DECEMBER 11th

Our late importations are now unpacked and enable us to show the largest stock of new, rich goods ever exhibited on this Coast.

First Floor

CUT GLASS ROOM

Only a few people have inspected our cut glass room up to the present writing, but the universal opinion of those who have seen it is that it is second to none on the Pacific Coast and our prices will be just as reasonable for these elegant new cuttings as they always have been. We have set aside some specially good bargains for Monday and will have new ones each day during this week.

SILVERWARE DEPARTMENT

We can say knowingly that ours is the largest showing of rich novelties on display in this section. The goods were specially ordered for the holidays.

On Monday we offer some decided values here and each day will be brought out new goods at special values to attract holiday purchasers. Do not miss our silverware department.

Large Assortment New Patterns and Shapes in Dinner Ware

DINNER SET DEPARTMENT

To say that we have an unusually large variety of new patterns and that our prices for such quality are below the normal is expressing it very mildly. We have added a great many new patterns that would surely interest those who require good qualities and stylish patterns at reasonable prices.

BOHEMIAN NOVELTIES

We have one entire room devoted to Bohemian novelties, especially imported for our holiday trade. You will find here many unique and entirely new ideas that will help you in selecting your holiday gifts. No lady or gentleman who visits our store can well afford to overlook these exclusive novelties.

JARDINIERE DEPARTMENT

Jardinieres, since their introduction, have and always will be popular as gifts. The styles change in Jardinieres, as they do in everything else. We are prepared now to show you two large rooms filled with beautiful jardinieres, new both in shape and decorations. The prices range lower than usual for new goods.

STEIN ROOM

Bring your husband with you here. He will enjoy, as you will, seeing the new ideas that are shown in one large room; every conceivable shape and decoration, some very clever specimens, suitable for dens and Dutch rooms.

Special Provision Made for Storing Holiday Purchases to be Delivered

ELECTRIC LAMP ROOM

Here will be found an immense assortment of lamps for use with electricity and suitable for parlor, library, tables or desks. A very useful and sensible gift that one can enjoy fully night after night and year after year.

TOILET SETS

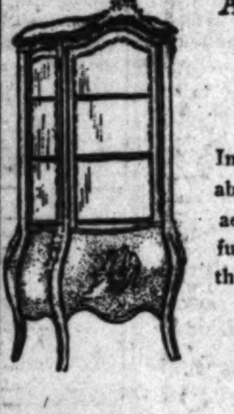
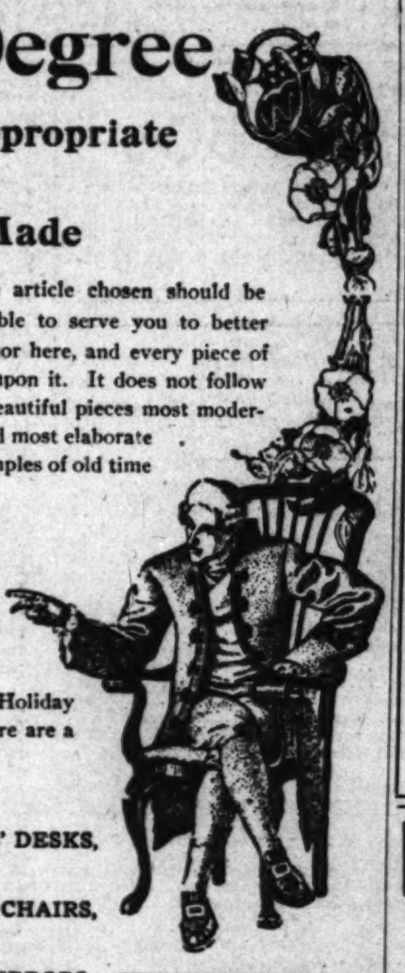
Gift Furniture of High Degree

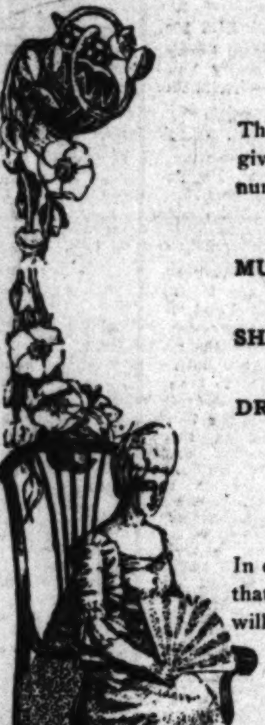


A Magnificent Stock, from Which Appropriate and Particularly Choice Holiday Selections May Be Made

In the selection of furniture for gift purposes it is quite important that the article chosen should be above the ordinary, both in quality and style. In this connection we are able to serve you to better advantage than any other firm in Los Angeles. Quality is a foremost factor here, and every piece of furniture in our splendidly complete showing has the mark of superiority upon it. It does not follow that this furniture is necessarily costly, for we have many handsome and beautiful pieces most moderately priced. We also display a representative line in the very finest and most elaborate productions of the cabinet maker's art, which embrace the choicest examples of old time and modern styles.



These for Christmas Favors



There are so many articles of furniture which would prove suitable for Holiday giving, that it would be difficult to name them all in small space, but there are a number which appeal to popular desires, among which are

MORRIS CHAIRS, EASY ROCKERS,
MUSIC CABINETS, WORK TABLES, LADIES' DESKS,
PARLOR TABLES, CELLARETTES,
SHAVING STANDS, CHINA CABINETS, LEATHER CHAIRS,
GOLD FURNITURE, DAVENPORTS,
DRESSING TABLES, TABOURETTES, CHEVAL MIRRORS, LIBRARY TABLES, BOOKCASES, COUCHES, HALL CLOCKS,
ORIENTAL AND DOMESTIC RUGS, ETC., ETC., ETC.

In each of the above lines, we have an extensive variety, and you can rest assured that your selection will incorporate the best of good taste, that the article you choose will be in good quality, and that the value will be the very best for the money that can be secured anywhere. It will be a pleasure to show you what we have, and we feel sure that your pleasure will be equal, in viewing our superior furniture display.

POMONA.

VALLEY CITY NOTES.

POMONA, Dec. 9.—A special young ladies' service was held at the Christian Church last night when Rev. F. M. Dowling delivered an address upon "Two Elements of an Ideal Woman's Character." A scripture reading was given by Miss Cason; prayer was offered by Miss Bogue and special music was rendered by Misses Whipp, Blackburn, Washburn, Chain and Eells.

The charity ball given at Hotel Palomares last evening by the local Lodge of Elks was an enjoyable affair, and about $200 was realized therefrom.

Telegrams received yesterday by Guy and Earl Bonham announced the sudden death in Minneapolis of their mother, Mrs. O. S. Bonham, who made her home here on North Gordon street for two years. Only a few days ago the young men had a letter from Mrs. Bonham, saying she expected to leave Minneapolis this month for Pomona.

Rev. Heber Rice, the newly called pastor of the local Unitarian Church, and his family, arrived yesterday from Pueblo, Colo. Mr. Rice will preach his first sermon here tomorrow morning, when there will be special music under direction of Mrs. J. W. Mills.

Mrs. F. E. Hoard, Jr., and little son have gone to Fresno to join Mr. Hoard, who has employment there.

Rev. E. R. Bennett, pastor of the local Baptist Church for a number of years, but now of Oakland, will preach at the First Baptist Church Sunday.

The colored members of the African Methodist Episcopal Church will hold all-day services tomorrow at Liberty Hall on Third street. Rev. A. Simpson of Riverside is here in the interest of the local colored people, who are trying to raise money to erect a little church building.

The Pomona Manufacturing Company has received two orders for the "Pomona" deep-well pump from Ventura county. The pumps cost from $1000 to $2000 each. The company has a rapidly-increasing patronage.

A Christmas social was given by the Congregational Y.P.S.C.E., in the church parlors last night. A Christmas tree was one of the attractions. J. M. Powers impersonating Santa Claus.

DOWNEY.

HIGH SCHOOL CORNER LAID.

DOWNEY, Dec. 9.—The cornerstone of the new High School building was laid this afternoon. The ceremonies were conducted under the auspices of the Grand Lodge of Masons.

The procession formed in front of the lodge room and was headed by the Whittier State Band. J. H. Ardis of Downey was president of the day. An address was delivered by Oscar Lawley of Los Angeles.

All business houses were closed during the afternoon.

DOWNEY BRIEFS.

Mrs. J. J. Tweedy left this morning for Waco, Tex., to visit her daughter, Mrs. A. J. Copas.

Mrs. W. C. Holman, an old-time resident of Downey, is visiting old friends here this week.

Hotel del Coronado greatly improved.

SOLDIERS' HOME.

COASTING BAD FOR HIM.

SOLDIERS' HOME, Dec. 9.—John Dearbaugh, while coasting downhill on his bicycle toward Sawtelle, struck a rut and took a header, which laid him out. He was conveyed to the hospital, where it was found that except for a very much disfigured face, he had sustained no serious injuries. John will not be able to recognize himself in a mirror for, at least, a month.

Mrs. C. E. Parsons, wife of Quartermaster Parsons, and daughter, Miss Bertha Parsons, arrived at the home yesterday, and with Miss Belle, who accompanied her father on appointment here, completes the family circle.

Ladies of the Stanton W.R.C. visited the home on Thursday, and enjoyed luncheon with their comrades in Assembly Hall.

RECENT DEATHS.

LORDSBURG.

WILD CAT FIGHTS DOG.

LORDSBURG, Dec. 9.—A terrible fight took place yesterday between a wild cat and a dog on the ranch of Frank Evans, at the head of San Antonio avenue, La Verne.

The dog, which is the property of D. R. Malone, is a thoroughbred mongrel and well known as a vicious brute. Many a coyote and wild cat has it laid low, and although now very old, it entered into the conflict yesterday with all the energy of its younger days.

Malone was plowing on the foothills of Evan's ranch, when the dog discovered a monster wild cat in the sagebrush and at once gave battle.

The conflict was fierce and bloody, and although the top of the dog's head was torn off and its throat terribly lacerated, it finally succeeded in vanquishing the wild cat.

The dog is in the hands of a veterinary surgeon and will recover.

NOVEL ORANGE PACKING.

The orange growers of this district are much interested in the novel manner of packing oranges which is to be adopted by the La Verne Citrus Association.

The oranges will be placed in separate cardboard compartments, each carton containing twelve oranges, a number of cartons are then packed in a crate.

The oranges will be packed by Heath & Coltrine, while the California Produce Company will act as eastern selling agents.

Those growers interested in this method of packing are very sanguine and anticipate good returns, the enterprise, as far as this district is concerned, is confined to the La Verne Citrus Association, which will only ship seventy-five cars, the majority of the growers preferring the present method of packing.

OCEAN PARK.

SHORE CITY ITEMS.

OCEAN PARK, Dec. 9.—Mrs. Tanada Machado died suddenly last night at her home near Fredericks. Her ailment was pneumonia.

The engagement of Miss Edith Deluna to Harry B. Chapman is announced. The groom-to-be was chief engineer during the construction of Venice, and is now manager of an electric-power plant at La Croix Falls, Wis. The wedding is to be at Minneapolis in January.

This town will indulge in another bond election on Monday. At that time the voters will be asked to authorize an issue of $30,000. Of this sum, $20,000 is needed for the completion of the sewer system, $10,000 for fire-fighting apparatus, $5000 for city buildings, $10,000 for a garbage incinerator and $5000 for a city-hall site.

Three score of horse owners from Ascot this evening enjoyed a banquet at the ship hotel of Venice. The toastmaster set a fast pace, and after the bunch was warmed up some phenomenal speed was developed, and an enjoyable evening was sandwiched between the several heats.

HOLLYWOOD.

FOOTHILL CITY ITEMS.

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 9.—The largest future event of the month is to be the concert to take place Thursday evening next in Wilcox Hall, under the auspices of Father Murphy of the Church of the Blessed Sacrament.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Herrington were tendered a surprise tin-shower Wednesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Denman have returned from a three months' trip East.

Hotel del Coronado always open.

SANTA MONICA.

LIGHT VOTE ON BONDS.

SANTA MONICA, Dec. 9.—Owing to the prevalence of a "Santa Ana" today the voters did not turn out in force to vote for school bonds. Only 157 votes were polled, and all but 27 were in favor of the bond issue of $15,000. This makes $75,000 available for use in the construction of three new brick schoolhouses, one to be on Michigan, near Seventh; one in Irwin Heights, and the third near Twentieth and Oregon.

BRIEF NEWS NOTES.

Mrs. George W. Gasaway died at the family home on Ocean avenue this morning. Heart disease was her ailment. Deceased formerly lived at Corning, in the Maywood Colony, above Sacramento.

Local baseballists are organizing a nine to meet amateur teams of their class that may come this way. Practice has been commenced on the polo grounds.

$1,000 REWARD!

Obtainable by Every Man, Woman and Child.

This may sound like an exaggerated statement, but when you have carefully studied the details as to how this reward can be obtained you will readily agree that no exaggeration has been made.

One of the stepping stones to affluency is money, and to obtain money honestly we must work for it, but when we obtain money by the sweat of our brow it can't be literally classed as a reward.

On the other hand if money works for us the earnings can readily be considered a reward.

The best method of making money work for us it to place it in a sound savings institution where it will draw a generous interest each month.

Such an institution is the Continental Building & Loan Association of San Francisco, the largest co-operative bank in the United States and as sound as the rock of Gibraltar.

A subscription for ten shares of stock will draw an interest of $5.00 per month and this amount when compounded will soon reach the $1000 mark, the reward mentioned above.

Think this suggestion over carefully and then lay plans to capture this reward by investing with the Continental Building and Loan Association.

For further information and literature apply to I. C. Terry, Field Manager Investment Department for Southern California, Suite 136 Rindge Building, 254 South Broadway, Los Angeles.

At the Pickwick Apartments

The modern apartment house, as it is built today, is arranged to furnish one, two, three or four-room suites to the guest, the same as in any high-class hotel. But it has the advantage of the buffet kitchen, which can be taken in connection with the suite, if desired.

Whether you choose the rooms alone, or with the buffet kitchen in connection, you have the same conveniences, service and privacy as you have in the modern hotel.

The modern apartment house today is truly a high-class hotel in every respect; where accommodations for the transient guest are as great and where the permanent guest can live more satisfactorily. Rates at the Pickwick Apartments for one room and private bath for two persons are $1.00 and up per day. Two rooms and private bath for two to four persons are $1.50 and up per day. These prices, compared to $3.00 to $5.00 per day for one room and bath for one person, and $6.00 to $8.00 per day for two rooms and bath for two persons at any first-class hotel, make hotel accommodations at the Pickwick Apartments within the reach of every one.

Equipped With Marshall & Stearns Co.'s Patented Wall Beds

The stamp of approval which the builders of homes and apartment houses have placed upon the Marshall & Stearns Company's Patented Wall Beds and Fixtures is evidenced by the new buildings which we illustrate in our advertisements each Sunday, and which are, or will be, when completed, equipped with our Patented Wall Beds, or our complete line of Patented Fixtures. Like the owners and builders of these apartment houses, the vast renting public has learned to know the many conveniences and advantages to be enjoyed by living in apartments equipped with them. And the demand for these apartments today is great—so great, in fact, that it is almost impossible to secure accommodations in any of the large number of apartment houses in Los Angeles where our Patented Wall Beds or Fixtures are installed.

What Our Patent Fixtures Are:

Our Patented Fixtures are the result of years of study and experiments, towards the solution of concentration and space economy in Apartment House construction. Fixtures that would give to two and three rooms all the conveniences and comforts of home. That would make possible the erection of Apartment Houses on valuable ground, with sufficient number of rooms to make profitable the large investment necessary. These things we have attained, and today our Patented Wall Beds, which are the only perfect sanitary beds in existence, our Book Case and Writing Desk Door, Dining Tables and Gas Range on Swinging Door, are known as The Fixtures which have revolutionized Apartment House construction.

We have erected on the floor of our display rooms a model Three-Room Cottage, in which all of our Patented Fixtures are installed.

Come in and let us show you through. Our salesman will explain everything in detail to you.

Yesterday's Forecast and Report.

U. S. WEATHER BUREAU, Los Angeles, Dec. 9.—[Reported by George E. Franklin, Local Forecaster.] At 5 o'clock a.m. the barometer registered 30.07; at 5 p.m., 30.07. Thermometer for the corresponding hours showed 55 deg. and 62 deg. Relative humidity, 5 a.m., 38 per cent.; 5 p.m., 30 per cent. Wind, 5 a.m., southwest, velocity 4 miles; 5 p.m., northeast, velocity 8 miles. Maximum temperature, 67 deg.; minimum, 52 deg. Barometer reduced to sea level.

Weather Conditions.—An area of abnormally high pressure, extending from the Missouri Valley and accompanied by fair, freezing weather, is slowly moving eastward from the Rocky Mountain Slope. The pressure in the Southwest is low, the gradients between the Southern California coast and the crest of the high area being nearly an inch, and as a result, fair weather, with drying land winds and unseasonably high temperature, prevails in the southern portion of California. The maximum temperature at Los Angeles Friday was 77 deg., at San Luis Obispo and San Diego 73 deg. The relative humidity at Los Angeles Saturday morning was 33 per cent. The Florida storm is moving slowly up the coast, accompanied by rain to the Capes of Chesapeake Bay.

Forecasts.—Local forecast for Los Angeles and vicinity: Fair tonight and Sunday, with fresh northerly winds.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 9.—Weather conditions and general forecast. The pressure is unusually high over Idaho, Northern Nevada, Utah and Wyoming. In Southern California and Arizona, strong north winds are blowing, causing sandstorms in the interior. At Yuma, a north wind attained a velocity of thirty-four miles. Travelers by southern routes may expect unsettled weather, strong north winds and probably rain Sunday night, with snow in the mountains. The indications are that Sunday will be for the most part fair in Central and Northern California. Forecast:

San Francisco and vicinity: Fair Sunday, with cloudiness, increasing at night; fresh east wind.

Los Angeles and vicinity: Cloudy, unsettled weather Sunday, with sandstorms in the interior and brisk north winds; possibly light rain by night.

Sacramento Valley: Fair Sunday; light to heavy frosts in the morning; light east winds.

San Joaquin Valley: Fair Sunday; heavy frosts in the morning; light east wind.

Coast: Cloudy Sunday; fresh east wind.

Nevada: Fair Sunday.

In bank stocks, for American National, 118.25 bid, none offered; for Commercial National, 81 more bid; Home Savings offered at 73, 72.25 bid; Merchants' Trust went down to 90.12 bid, 100 asked; State Bank and Trust offered at 100.50. Bank clearances for the day were light, $1,391,150.68, and for the week average at over $10,000,000. The business at all points surpass last year, and is much greater than for two years ago.

The New York bank statement was very bad yesterday, showing a decrease in reserves on deposit of $3,811,900, and a reserve deficit of $1,246,525. This was in spite of a contraction in loans of $7,561,500. High money rates are looked for all through the current month. The treasury is not likely to come in unless general business is threatened.

LOCAL PRODUCE MARKET.

The week closed yesterday with a dull Saturday at the produce market. Trading was of no great volume at any time during the past week. Eggs and potatoes were unsettled and weaker; however, each of them showed a tendency yesterday for improvement by next week.

The supplies and prices of local fresh ranch eggs are governed now by the weather conditions. It is reported that some of the egg jobbers here have a scheme under consideration to buy up all the ranch offerings at the lowest price and hold them until they can work off their surplus stock of eastern storage eggs, which they must dispose of by February. Judging from the way the fresh stock was quoted on the Exchange yesterday morning, the price dropping from 37, the previous day's price, to 35 cents, the latest quotation, the egg jobbers are apparently successful.

Conservative egg dealers declare that the unsettled state cannot last long, for the market in San Francisco is firm for the fresh offerings at 30 cents a dozen. This is too great a difference in quotations for that market not to effect this one, for already the local ranchers are shipping their stocks to the north, where they realize better prices than they do here. One egg broker said yesterday that no shipments of fresh eastern eggs were being received now, and that those that are arriving are not up to the standard. One car of eastern storage eggs came in, but was refused by the local jobbers. Eastern fresh eggs are quoted at 32@33, and seconds at 22.

The shipments of butter from the north are decreasing on account of the light rainfall in that part of the State, so that the butter jobbers expect little from the northern butter sections. The supply of butter in storage it is thought, will last until February. The dairy product quotations are firm at unchanged prices. Several low offerings of cheese were on the Exchange, but little was sold. Imported Swiss was selling at 26½@27.

The Produce Exchange had the largest attendance of their reorganized institution and the greatest number of sales ever made on a produce exchange in this city, at yesterday morning's session. Two applications were made for membership.

Fresh fruits arrived in moderate quantity. Two cars of bananas from Honolulu were being unloaded. One car of Fard dates in 60-lb. boxes was received, the fruit selling at 8½@9 lb. About five crates of raspberries are consigned to this market daily. Grapefruit receipts are more liberal, so they are a trifle cheaper.

The general receipts of beans are increasing weekly. Pink beans are firm, with a tendency to advance.

Potatoes showed little improvement for the river and highland grades, although the market for choice qualities is particularly active. Onions are being received in greater quantities, but remain firm at unaltered quotations.

Peas are scarce and sell at 6 cents; and beans at 6@7. Other vegetables were in moderate supply and sold at the prevailing prices.

Fish was scarce, while wild geese and lobsters were plentiful. Wild rabbits are wanted.

The poultry market closed with the supplies of local stock well cleaned up. Fryers are quoted at 20c lb.; and broilers at 3.50@6.00 per dozen.

The following produce was sold at the Produce Exchange yesterday morning: 65 boxes Colorado Ben Davis apples; 215 boxes yellow sweet potatoes; 30 boxes navel oranges; 5 drums Longhorn cheese; 25 sacks choice Burbank potatoes; 1 car Highland fancy potatoes; 50 sacks pink No. 1 beans; 50 sacks Australian brown onions; 15 sacks garlic; 225 sacks northern Early Rose potatoes; 19 cases local ranch eggs.

The receipts of produce for the month of November, as reported at Exchange, is as follows: Eggs, local ranch, 1121 cases; eastern, 2043 cases; butter, 298,665 lbs.; cheese, 149,821 lbs.; potatoes, 59,964 sacks; sweet potatoes, 2071 sacks; onions, 6424 sacks; beans, 10,545 sacks.

The Los Angeles Hay & Storage Company report the receipt of 32 carloads of hay during the past week.

NEW YORK MARKETS.

SHARES AND MONEY.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—Today's stock market was kaleidoscopic. The market was ragged and irregular until the appearance of the bank statement, disclosing the deficit in the legal reserves, when a buying movement of great animation and enormous volume developed and carried prices up with a resistless sweep. Just in the final dealings there was some rather wild throwing off of holdings to realize profits. The result was an unsettled and irregular closing. At one time during the short session the market was uniformly weak and considerable losses showed all through the list. The upward rush of prices after the appearance of the bank statement was a striking demonstration of the power of the organized speculation in the market. The explanation commonly accepted of the movement was as a demonstration of a positive conviction of coming relief of the money market. There were nothing but rumors all pointed toward Washington as the source of the expected relief. The current discussion on this subject assumed that the banking position disclosed by the clearing house statement presented a position which the Secretary of the Treasury has stated as contingent upon his taking action to relieve the money stringency. It was argued that the week's events showed that money resources even for commercial purposes have been so largely depleted that the stringency must extend to other quarters than the stock market unless relief is forthcoming. The bank statement emphasized this condition. The rushing up of stocks on this assumption represents a speculative maneuver in some violence. In the bank statement itself some skepticism was expressed over the showing of a decrease in the loans in view of the course of the week's stock market. The loss in cash of $7,546,100 was in excess of expectations. Foreign exchange moved up strongly. Continental exchanges also moved strongly again in London and a rise of the discount rate of the Imperial Bank of Germany on Monday was regarded as possible. Paris was reported to be securing gold in the London market. Sugar, Amalgamated Copper and finally Union Pacific were the conspicuous features of the market, the last named rushing to above 140 a record level, in the late outburst in the market. Total sales of bonds par value, $2,145,000.

GENERAL EASTERN MARKETS.

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

CHICAGO, Dec. 9.—A firm tone prevailed in the wheat market throughout the day. A feature of trading was covering by shorts, but business was not large. One of the main factors in the situation was the continued reports of small arrivals of wheat at Minneapolis and Duluth, and the consequent firm tone of the Northwestern market. Another factor was comparative firmness of the wheat market at Liverpool, where prices showed only a slight decline following the slump of yesterday in the local market. May opened ⅛@¼ higher at 88@88⅜, sold between 88¼@88⅝ and 88@88¼, and closed firm ⅝ higher at 88⅜. Sentiment in the corn pit was inclined to be bearish, but covering by shorts prevented any material loss in values. The market closed steady, May unchanged at 44⅝. Trading was active in the oat market. May closed firm, unchanged at 32⅞@34. Provisions were quiet but firm. A feature of the trading was a good demand for December and January lard. Shorts were the chief buyers. The small amount of local stocks caused the demand. At the close May pork was up a trifle and lard and ribs were each 2½ higher. Close: Wheat, December, 86⅝; May, 88⅜@89. Corn, May, 44⅝@45; December, 45¼, old 46⅝. Oats, December, 31@31¼; May, 32⅝@32⅞. Rye cash, 67½@68. Flax, cash, Northwestern, 101½. Timothy, March, 3.45. Clover, cash, 13.00. Barley cash, 37@54.

SAN FRANCISCO MARKETS.

FRUIT, GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Apples moved with spirited sale today and market exhibited firm tone at maintained prices. In citrus fruits sellers reported moderately active trade in oranges at sustained prices, with large size choice and standard navels leading in point of demand. Supplies were augmented by arrival of four carloads and were fully up to trade requirements. It was reported that auction sales for season would be inaugurated shortly after turn of the year. Lemons were easy under free supplies and indifferent trade. Grapefruit was quiet. Tangerines were slow of sale, mandarins were weaker under more liberal stocks. Tame and featureless markets prevailed for potatoes. Sweet potatoes were overplentiful and market was in semi-demoralized condition. Onions closed firm. Steady prices prevailed for miscellaneous kinds of vegetables and general market was in good shape for sellers. First quality southern peas, beans and tomatoes sold well at full prices, but much low quality stock was neglected. Lima beans were held at sharp advance.

Indigestion!

Stomach trouble is not really a sickness, but a symptom. It is a symptom that a certain set of nerves is ailing. Not the voluntary nerves that enable you to walk and talk and act—but the AUTOMATIC STOMACH NERVES over which your mind has no control.

I have not room here to explain how these tender, tiny nerves control and operate the stomach. How worry breaks them down and causes indigestion. How misuse wears them out and causes dyspepsia. How neglect may bring on kidney, heart and other troubles through sympathy. I have not room to explain how these nerves may be reached and strengthened and vitalized and made stronger by a remedy I spent years in perfecting—now known by physicians and druggists everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Restorative (Tablets or Liquid.) I have not room to explain how this remedy, by removing the cause, usually puts a certain end to indigestion, belching, heartburn, insomnia, nervousness, dyspepsia. All of these things are fully explained in the book I will send you free when you write. Do not fail to send for the book. It tells how the solar plexus governs digestion and a hundred other things everyone ought to know—for all of us, at some time or other, have indigestion. With the book I will send free my "Health Token," an intended passport to good health.

For the free book, and the "Health Token" you must address Dr. Shoop, box 8970, Racine, Wis. State which book you want.

Dr. Shoop's Restorative

Prepared in both liquid and tablet form. For sale at forty thousand drug stores. Mild cases are often reached by a single package.

We appeal to those that have suffered for years with stomach trouble no matter what kind, will cure it. We know from experience that these sufferers have tried all kinds of treatment and medicine, only to find, at best, a relief. Nau's Dyspepsia Cure will make a cure, for it cures the cause. Try it and you will not be disappointed.

Seventy years old and cured of stomach trouble of 15 years' standing. "I have tried several bottles of Nau's Dyspepsia Cure and it has cured me. I have had stomach trouble for 15 years and my friends thought my case hopeless. For 12 years I could not eat uncooked fruit, thought I would rather die than live; pains would always come three or four hours after noon dinner, acids would almost set me crazy. Your medicine is the best on the market, as I tried most everything, including physician's treatments, but nothing reached my case. I am 70 years of age."

BREVITIES.

Times' "Liner" Advertisers—Important change in rate for Sunday classified advertisements. Commencing Sunday, October 1, 1905, and thereafter, the rate for Sunday "Liners" will be 1¼ cents per word for each insertion; minimum charge, 25 cents, as at present. This slight advance is amply justified by the present Sunday circulation of The Times, which averages over 60,000 copies. (When the 1-cent per-word rate was established in 1893, The Times Sunday circulation was only 14,000 copies.) The "Liner" rate for the daily—1 cent per word—will stand as at present.

Los Angeles has a 5 and 10-cent wall paper house. Mr. J. Brent Harding, formerly of Cleveland, O., has opened a 5 and 10-cent wall paper store at 634 S. Broadway. Mr. Harding has had several years' experience in the business, having represented some of the leading factories and jobbers as traveling salesman. Mr. Harding will deal only in papers from 3 to 10 cents per roll. This is a big departure from the trade prices and will mean much to the builders as well as the public at large, who have been accustomed to paying from 10 cents to 50 cents for the same styles of papers.

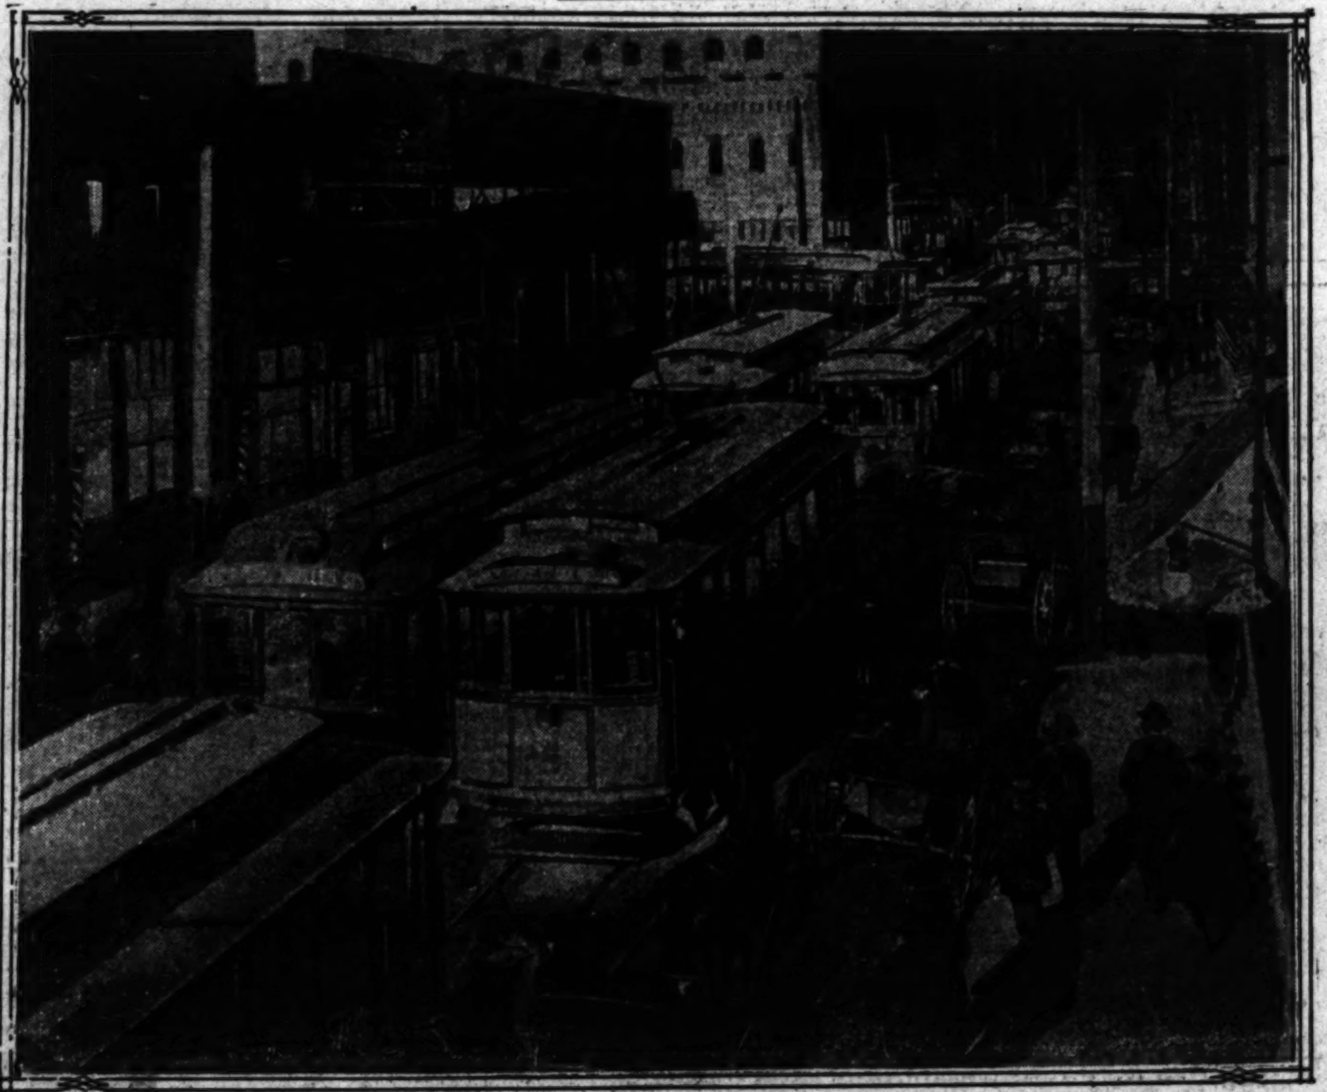
STREET CAR CONGESTION LEADS TO PLANS FOR ELEVATED LINES.

Prominent officers of the trolley lines dismayed at the blockades on Main street, which are growing worse and worse every night, are already talking of plans for the first stretches of elevated road in Los Angeles. But for the twenty-one-year franchise limitation, a beginning on elevated structures would now be under way.



From photograph of street car blockade at First and Main streets last evening when the dinner-time crowds were clamoring to be moved.

BECAUSE seventy-five million passengers annually ride on the electric cars of Los Angeles, or at the rate of the entire population of the city daily, an elevated structure for the relief of congested traffic in the city streets seems to be in sight.

This is the opinion of a prominent official of the Pacific Electric Railway, who declares that he can see no other solution of the problem.

With seventeen distinct car lines contending for the crossing at Third and Main streets, a dozen lines clustering over the switches at First and Spring, Third and Fourth at Spring, Sixth and Main, and similar conditions existing at half a dozen other crossings, the spectacle of car jams in which drays, electric vans, carriages, automobiles, bicycles and dodging pedestrians are hopelessly mingled, is a sight so common as no longer to excite comment.

Every evening Main street is hopelessly snarled up.

Five separate electric railway companies are operating some fifty distinct lines, practically every one of which converges and operates within a downtown business district practically six blocks long, and four blocks wide.

This is the active business center of the city. Into it the electric railways pour the bulk of their travel in the early morning. From it they take by far the greater part of their traffic in the evening.

During the going-home hour at dinner time the movement of cars to accommodate the rush of travel necessitates the shooting of a car over the busiest crossings at the rate of one every fifteen or twenty seconds. At the intersection of Main and Third streets between 5 o'clock and 6 o'clock on any busy night, by actual count from 200 to 300 cars claim right of way, which means that nearly every minute eight cars simultaneously are likely to be clanging insistently for the right to make this crossing.

As there are no switches to throw at this junction there is no tower man. But at the half-dozen other crossings where like conditions prevail there is a tower man to throw the switches and to handle the block signals. It is needless to say that this position requires a cool head to keep things moving without collisions and to prevent car jams.

It is at this hour also that the streets are filled with pedestrians, nearly all of them insistent on getting home at the same time, while draymen, hackmen, bicyclists, automobilists, all impelled by the same universal motive are adding to the general confusion and still further retarding the movement of the cars, the motormen of which have quite enough to do to keep out of the way of one another.

With the cars running so closely together, it takes a fine system of organization, dispatching and operation to keep things going. But it is impossible to avoid frequent blockades. The wonder is that they are not more numerous. The delay of a minute to any one car down town has its effect on the entire system, and causes a line-up of stalled cars extending away down the lighted streets as far as the powerful electric headlights show.

It is not difficult to see how the suggestion of The Times for the stopping of cars on the near side of crossings would greatly facilitate the movement of cars during the rush hours. As it is imperative on practically all downtown crossings to stop at the near crossing and signal for right of way to cross, this stop and necessary delay might well be utilized for the taking on and discharge of passengers, without the need, as at present, to make the stop again immediately on effecting the crossing. This would reduce the number of downtown stops by half, and would assist in the movement of cars to an almost incredible degree, as can best be appreciated by the train dispatchers and motormen, to whom every fractional part of a second at such times is of paramount importance.

By a conservative calculation the adoption of the near-crossing system would result in the saving of from one to two minutes in the passage of each car through the congested district. With this, take into consideration that the delay of a minute on one car during the rush period is frequently responsible for throwing the entire system out of schedule for from two or three hours, and the immense advantage of the plan to the operating department of the road, to say nothing of passengers, may be readily appreciated.

But it is to the removal from Main street of the Pacific Electric cars that the officials of that system look for the greatest relief. This should have been begun before this date, according to officials concerned, and all of their cars would have been brought into the Sixth and Main street depot by rear streets, but for the passage of the twenty-one-year franchise ordinance by the city. While this ordinance stands, it is declared, no effort will be made to change the trunk lines of this busy system from Main street.

With the granting of a franchise for a suitable length of time, it is not unlikely that an elevated structure would be built from the rear of the Huntington building directly to the private right of way of the system at the freight yards and shops on Central avenue, for the use of the beach lines, and another to the present terminus of the abandoned San Gabriel Valley Traction Company for the use of the Pasadena and foothills lines.

This would give the Pacific Electric its own private rights of way direct into the central depot, and take its cars off the city streets.

Officials of the local electric lines contend that a great deal of the present congestion of traffic during the busy hours is due to the fact that they furnish a better service for the handling of passengers than any other city of like importance in the United States, providing more cars for the number of people moved, and consequently embarrassing themselves for the convenience of the public.

Another aggravation of the traffic congestion on the downtown streets is the fact that Los Angeles has grown so rapidly into a metropolis that it has not yet shed a number of its old pueblo customs, relics of the old plaza days, chief of which is the tying of saddle ponies, buggies and carriages as well as delivery and farm wagons at posts and hitching rings in the very busiest of the city streets.

The street scene given herewith, from a photograph taken at First and Main streets, is typical and can be seen daily in the heart of the city. Vehicles of every description are allowed to stand along the curb blockading traffic and generally inconveniencing the public, their owners as unconcerned as though "mañana" were time enough and all complaints were to be lodged with "Quien Sabe."

MAY MOVE SOUTH.

Santa Fe Local Ticket Agent Likely to Have Quarters on Spring, Between Third and Fourth.

The right of Spring street from Second to Fourth to the title of "Railroad Row," will be still further validated should the Santa Fé close for the new location for its city ticket offices, now under consideration, at Nos. 332-334 Spring street.

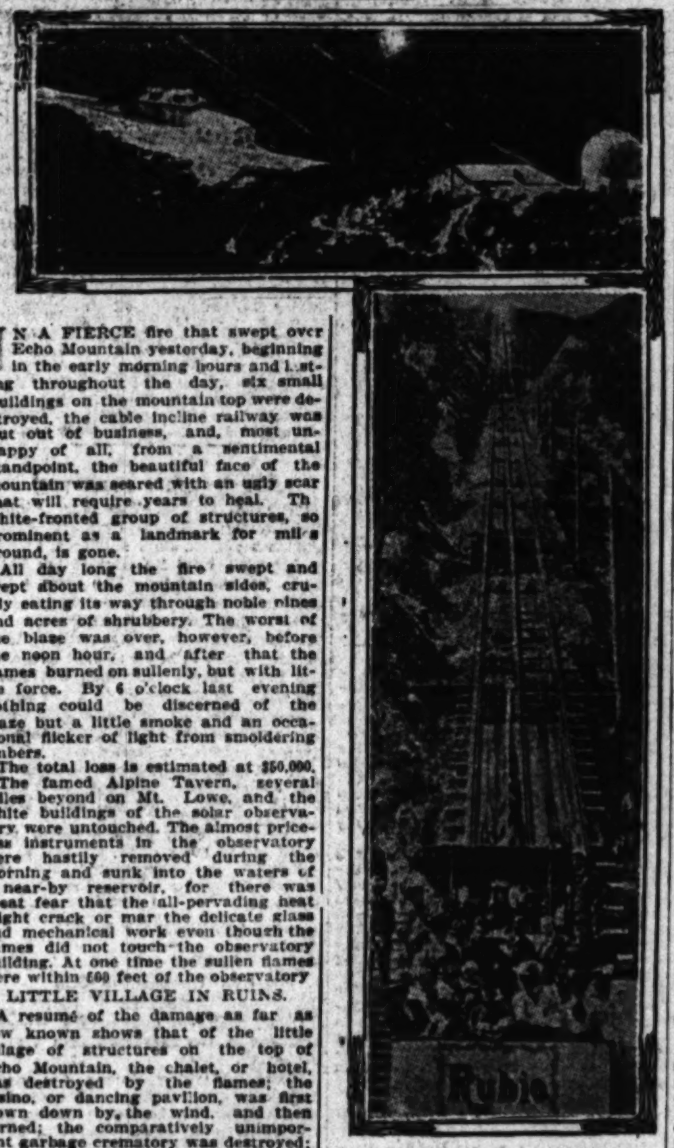
Should the Santa Fé decide on this location, the wall between the two store buildings now occupying the structure, would be torn out, and a handsome plate-glass front put in.

It is announced that the Southern Pacific will remain in the Douglas block, improving and enlarging its quarters there to give adequate room, and the movement to cause a general exodus of the principal railway offices to Sixth and Spring streets will undoubtedly be off for several years to come.

In this connection, it was attempted at one time to secure the ground floor rooms on each side of the street of Mercantile Place fr two solid rows of railway offices, but it was found impossible to get all of the interests together on the proposition, and so the project for the securing of what railway officials unhesitatingly acknowledged an ideal location for their offices, was abandoned.

FIRE'S DESOLATION ON ECHO MOUNTAIN.

Buildings in Ruins, Cable Incline Damaged and Trees and Shrubbery Swept Away by Flames that Start Early in Morning.



Where yesterday's fire raged.

IN A FIERCE fire that swept over Echo Mountain yesterday, beginning in the early morning hours and lasting throughout the day, six small buildings on the mountain top were destroyed, the cable incline railway was put out of business, and, most unhappy of all, from a sentimental standpoint, the beautiful face of the mountain was seared with an ugly scar that will require years to heal. The white-fronted group of structures, so prominent as a landmark for miles around, is gone.

All day long the fire swept and crept about the mountain sides, cruelly eating its way through noble pines and acres of shrubbery. The worst of the blaze was over, however, before the noon hour, and after that the flames burned on sullenly, but with little force. By 6 o'clock last evening nothing could be discerned of the blaze but a little smoke and an occasional flicker of light from smoldering embers.

The total loss is estimated at $50,000.

The famed Alpine Tavern, several miles beyond on Mt. Lowe, and the white buildings of the solar observatory were untouched. The almost priceless instruments in the observatory were hastily removed during the morning and sunk into the waters of a near-by reservoir, for there was great fear that the all-pervading heat might crack or mar the delicate glass and mechanical work even though the flames did not touch the observatory building. At one time the sullen flames were within 500 feet of the observatory

LITTLE VILLAGE IN RUINS.

A resumé of the damage as far as now known shows that of the little village of structures on the top of Echo Mountain, the chalet, or hotel, was destroyed by the flames; the casino, or dancing pavilion, was first blown down by the wind, and then burned; the comparatively unimportant garbage crematory was destroyed; the Pacific Electric power-house, containing highly valuable machinery, was destroyed, and it is said that much of the machinery is irreparably damaged; the car barns were also burned.

In addition to this, the upper trestle of the incline railway was burned. The flames swept along the incline tracks for a ways and the $12,000 cable was more or less injured by the heat. Workmen, to save the huge cable, worth almost its weight in silver, cut it and allowed it to slip and roll thunderously to the bottom of the steep incline.

Such is the property that can be accounted for in dollars and cents.

But it is the trees and the great matted tangle of chaparral, interspersed with bushes and stunted trees that suffered the most, and in the long run that were worth the most. Many of the estimates of the territory burned over are palpably incorrect, and no exact estimate can be made until the

TO BUILD TO LOS ANGELES.

Gould's Western Pacific Will Enter This Field.

Work on San Francisco Line to be Rushed.

Surveys Finished and Entire Stock Subscribed.

The Western Pacific Railway, with the backing of the millions and prestige of the Gould system, is coming to Los Angeles, and that at once.

This is the authoritative statement of Treasurer Brown of this new transcontinental line.

But the road from Los Angeles to San Francisco is not to be delayed until the completion of the Western Pacific from Salt Lake to the Golden Gate. The work on the route into the heart of Southern California is to be commenced at once, says Mr. Brown.

This has been accomplished through the organization of a new company, the articles of which have not yet been filed, but for which the entire capital stock has been subscribed.

And in this the master hand of George Gould, railroad builder, shows that he has appreciated the value of Los Angeles territory and has lost no time in availing himself of the opportunity of an entry into this field.

The surveys for the new line have been made and approved, and it is a question of but a very short time, according to Mr. Brown, when actual work of construction will begin, commencing from Los Angeles and heading northward with San Francisco as the objective of the new company, which will be ostensibly an independent line.

The route, as planned, will be northward from Los Angeles by way of Cochico Pass, to San José, where considerable property has been quietly acquired.

From San José the new Gould line will parallel the Southern Pacific to the San Francisco terminus in the tract of 130 acres on the west side of the bay not far from the yards of the Union Iron Works.

For the acquisition of this terminal, with its fine yard facilities and water frontage, the Gould interests have already expended the sum of $5,000,000. The Los Angeles and San Francisco line will make use of this terminal as freely as though it were one of the divisions of the Western Pacific, which it will be practically, as the principal stockholders in the Western Pacific have subscribed for the majority of the stock of the Los Angeles line.

Mr. Brown explains that Mr. Gould desires to have the line from Los Angeles to San Francisco complete and ready for operation as soon as the line from Salt Lake to San Francisco, if not at an earlier date. To do this will necessitate the beginning of work at this end of the line with as little delay as possible.

It is understood that considerable property has been purchased in this city by agents of the company, to be used for terminals, but that work of construction, when commenced, will be from a point north of the city on the Southern Pacific, whence a spur will be run for the delivery of materials.

FRENCH PIONEER DIES.

Mrs. Louise Bouelle-Marsat, for Many Years in Business in Los Angeles.

Death claimed one of the early French pioneers of this city, yesterday. Mrs. Louise Bouelle-Marsat, who had a wide acquaintance throughout Southern California, died at the family home, No. 418 West Eighth street, after having been in declining health for several years.

She was a native of France, and sailed from there when a young woman, going around the Horn to the French colony at the Island of Tahiti. She remained a year or more in these French possessions, and then sailed for San Francisco, where she lived for two years. She arrived in San Francisco in the year 1870, and there met and married August Bouelle.

They came to Los Angeles two years later, and Bouelle was for several years one of the prominent members of the French colony. It was through his activities that the French Hospital Association was formed, and he was active in various municipal affairs. He conducted a general merchandise store for several years on the site now occupied by the Nadeau Hotel, and then removed to Eighth and Olive streets. He died in 1880, and Mrs. Bouelle continued the store, being in active business for twelve years.

To Mr. and Mrs. Bouelle was born one son, Frank A. Bouelle, who is now a teacher in the city schools.

In 1891 Mrs. Bouelle married M. Marsat, and to this union was born one daughter, Miss Adrienne Marsat.

The funeral services will be held this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from the chapel of Orr & Hines, No. 647 South Broadway, and thence to St. Vibiana's Cathedral, where services will be held at 3 o'clock. The interment will be in Hollywood Cemetery. Pioneers of Los Angeles will act as pallbearers.

ALLIANCE FRANCAISE.

Next Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock the Alliance Francaise will hold its monthly meeting at the new Ebell Clubhouse No. 1719 South Figueroa street, and will then present the sparkling comedy, "L'Anglais tel Qu'on le Parle," by Tristan Bernard. This comedy when first presented at l'Athenne in Paris had a run of 300 consecutive performances.

Those taking part are Misses Germaine Fusenot and Georgie Caswell, and Messrs. De Rostaing, Permentier, Roseyroles and Auclair. Mrs. J. A. Ledoux will recite a translation of Enoch Arden, and Mrs. Calvert Wilson will play the beautiful music which has been composed for the poem.

Two quaint French songs are to be sung by Mrs. Catherine Collette, "Hai Luli," by Arthur Coquard, and "Trois Bergerettes," by Weckerlin, Mr. Sessions playing her accompaniments. The other attractions on the programme are: A group of French songs by J. B. Poulin, two piano solos, Fantasie empromptu (Chopin,) and Faust Fantasie (Gounod) by Jean de Chauvenet; and a flute solo by Jacquard Auclair.

"AT HOME" EVENT.

A reception to the public was tendered yesterday afternoon and evening by the Lyon-McKinney-Smith Company at its establishment at No. 632 South Broadway and Seventh street. The hours were from 3 to 5 and from 7 to 10. The store was elaborately decorated with floral pieces. Music was rendered by Stam's Orchestra. Many people visited the place and inspected the furniture in rare woods on exhibition there.

THE LOCAL SCHOOLS.

CURE PUPILS OF DEFECTS.

Physical Tests Work Wonders for Little Ones.

Parents Asked to Aid in Correction of Ills.

Fife and Drum Corps Enlivens Alpine Marches.

"Oh, I can see clear across the room," said a small girl at the Amelia-street school last week when she put on her new glasses.

It was the first time in her short life that the blessing of perfect vision had been granted her, and the joy of this near-sighted child, made plain, the good that is being accomplished in this way by Prof. George L. Leslie.

Prof. Leslie is the head of the science department, but he has undertaken the child-study branch of it on his own initiatives, with the cordial support of Supt. Foshay and the Board of Education.

He goes from school to school, instructing the teachers how to apply simple physical tests to determine the condition of the children under their care, and in this way has afforded relief to many.

A child at Custer-street school said to a reporter a few days ago: "I can talk just as plain as anybody, and the children can't laugh at me any more."

The teacher had called Mr. Leslie's attention to this child, and he discovered that unbalanced muscles of the eyes were causing her to stutter through pure nerve strain. The parents were notified, a simple operation was performed and the result is a happy little girl who has ten times the chance to study and to develop.

Out at the Thirty-ninth-street school, Mr. Leslie came across a case of the most severe muscular unbalance, and the child had no endurance. Upon visiting the parents of this child four other children in the same family were found to be in the same condition, and not one of them was capable of sustained effort.

EYES CAUSE MUCH TROUBLE.

Eyes are the cause of much trouble to children in the schools. One boy whose case has recently been investigated was attempting to do school work with only half vision. He could not look at a page more than five minutes without the letters apparently running together. He was handicapped in every way, but when Mr. Leslie visited the mother with the news of her son's condition, she said: "He is a worthless boy and needs to be whipped."

A stormy scene ensued, for parents are not over-fond of being interfered with in the management of their children, but when the mother found Mr. Leslie had interested one of the best oculists in the city in her son, and that it would not cost her anything, she relented considerably, and even offered to pay for the glasses he needed.

"The child with abenoid growths in the head," said Mr. Leslie, "is one of the most handicapped beings in the world, and yet so little do the average parents know of the outward sign of this difficulty that I have had them tell me to whip the children into line—that they were bad and needed it."

ASK PARENTS TO AID.

This week, parents throughout the city will receive slips informing them of the results of the physical examination of their children. These slips are accompanied by reply blanks and read thus:

"Defects interfere with health, with school work and with growth and development.

"The schools are making an earnest effort to secure the correction of any physical defects of pupils, thus making possible for them better health, higher attainments in school work and greater efficiency in adult life.

"We send this notice earnestly asking the coöperation of the parents in this work and urging the importance of securing the correction of physical defects as early as possible.

"We would appreciate suggestions from you or your physician with reference to your child."

A physical defect leaflet also will be sent to parents. It describes the effect of eye strain, defective hearing, discharges from ears, abenoid growths and enlarged tonsils, spinal curvature, inflammation of the eyes and arrested development.

PENALTY OF NEGLECT.

In speaking of this plan for the aid of parents and teachers in helping the children, Mr. Leslie says:

"Physical defects and injuries of children and young people should receive all reasonable care. They interfere markedly with development and growth. If neglected, they show themselves later in life in no uncertain manner."

Many of the best physicians of the city are interested in Mr. Leslie's work and have offered their services free of charge for those who cannot afford treatment. It is hoped in time that these steps may lead to such medical supervision of the schools as exists in a few of the large cities of the country.

On January 1, a child-study laboratory will be opened at the Polytechnic High School, and all sorts of interesting apparatus for testing physical and mental conditions will be kept there for constant use. Mr. Leslie will be in charge of it, the object of his investigations in these lines being to teach the teachers properly to gauge a child's physical and mental capacity, so that children may not be expected to do work beyond them, and that children of unusual capacity may be allowed full scope for their abilities.

WITH FIFE AND DRUM.

MARTIAL AIR AT ALPINE.

There are life and color at the Alpine-street school, where the Y.M.C.A. Fife and Drum Corps is temporarily stationed. Nearly all of the boys belonging to this musical organization are attending school at the Alpine-street building, and they bring their instruments to play for all special school performances, when the drums and fifes and bugles beat and blow the martial strains that take the fancy of all the children and the grown-ups who pass that way.

Friday the principal held a fire drill. Out of the building the pupils poured in short order, marching double quick with fine effect, emptying the building of 375 children in one and one-half minutes.

No, there was no fire, but the Cadet Fife and Drum Crops stood ready to play for the return march.

"Rub-a-dub-dub, rub-a-dub-dub," went the drums, and the fifes and bugles struck clear high notes until the children caught the spirit of the thing and went back to their tasks with blood moving and spirits gay.

Harvey Cheeseman is the leader of the corps, and the whole company is in connection with the Y.M.C.A. The boys practice there.

Their leader of the entire Cadet Fife and Drum Corps is a real estate man, Oscar B. Smith, who takes a great interest in boys, and has provided all the instruments. The corps is to march in the procession at the Pasadena Tournament of Roses, and the boys in the picture are to play.

There are six drummers, Harvey Cheeseman, Albert Boschke, Clayton Oliver, Harold McLean, Henry Sullivan, and Lawrence Silver. The fifers are Frank Boschke, Earl Anders, Milo Walker, Tom McCain, Nathaniel Hendrickson, Lewis Frimas, and Waldemar Barman. The buglers are Roy Bryant and Dick Leonard.

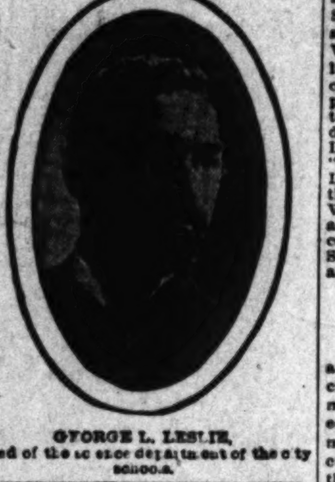
The pride of the Alpine-street School, Cadet Fife and Drum Corps.

STAR AND CRESCENT.

TALENT GIVES "MRS. WIGGS."

The Star and Crescent Society had the jolliest time for many meetings last Friday afternoon, when "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" was presented by the youthful talent of the school.

"The Theater Party" was the scene deplored. Mrs. Wiggs carefuly ironed out the pigtail plaits of her children to make their hair crimp, and other realistic performances were part of the side-splitting production. Maude Howell as Mrs. Wiggs had the principal part, and was the life of the affair, though May Scott as the irrepressible Europena covered herself with glory. Virginia Wright took the part of Australia in clever fashion, and Irene Bullfinch as Asia, and Charles McDowell as Billy completed the cast.



GEORGE L. LESLIE, head of the science department of the city schools.

A business meeting was held first, and then Mr. Housh presented to the school a bust of Napoleon, the gift of Miss Huston. Miss Estelle Summers gave a reading, "Naughty Nell," and Maurice Salzman talked upon the Moki Indian snake dance, exhibiting curios gathered from the villages of these Indians.

The High School Orchestra is in fine feather this season, and was enthusiastically encored, after the rendition of a selection from Verdi, responding with a piece from the "Chinese Honeymoon." Miss Matilda Baruch played an instrumental solo from Godard.

CHRISTMAS COMING.

NORMAL'S PROGRAMME.

With the sweet breath of heliotrope filling the air, and gay poinsettias flaunting their colors outside, the seniors of the State Normal School held a Christmas programme Friday afternoon in the auditorium, and told of snow and ice and recited all sorts of beautiful Christmas poesy, concluding with "Christmas in California," given by Miss Maude Parsons.

The auditorium was crowded with teachers and pupils of the school, the following attractive selections being rendered:

"The First Christmas Tree" (Eugene Field,) Marion Dumble; "Chrystmasse of Olde" (Eugene Field,) Fay Hubbard; "Bells Across the Snow" (Frances R. Havergal,) Alice Barr; "An English Christmas" (Walter Scott,) Zelma Shutt; "The Christmas Eve" (F. E. Weatherly,) Mary Davis; "The Sabots of Little Wolff" (Francois Coppee,) Alma Smith "First Christmas Gifts" (Mrs. Charles Bernard,) Fay Hubbard; "The Angels and the Shepherds" (Lew Wallace,) Adelaide Estudillo; "Christmas in California" (Edward Rowland Sill,) Maude Parsons.

MONROVIA.

SUCCESSFUL BAZAAR.

MONROVIA, Dec. 8.—A painting of an old adobe pile at Whittier, said to be those of the home where Pio Pico, last Mexican governor of California, was found ill and poverty stricken long after the days of his glory, was on exhibition today at the bazaar of the Saturday Afternoon Club. It was painted by Miss Belle Combs of Monrovia in 1888, and in a temporary lake that reflected the ruins of the adobe, is also seen a perfect reflection of a California sky. At the time the roof was off of the adobe, and of these ruins of the Pio Pico holdings, it is hardly possible that a remnant remains today.

The bazaar proved a very successful affair and drew people from Duarte, Azusa and El Monte in addition to friends of the Saturday Afternoon Club from Monrovia, and Sierra Madre.

Monrovia is represented at the Annual Convention of the Baptists of Southern California at San Bernardino by Rev. H. Russell Greaves and wife, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Badeau, Dr. and Mrs. R. D. Adams, Mrs. Reitnouer and George Renner.

W. B. March has begun to build a handsome seven-room cottage on West White Oak avenue, which will cost $3500. F. Reichard is building a $2000 home on Myrtle avenue just beyond the operahouse. A route of fifteen miles in length with seventy-five families to serve has been outlined in West Duarte where the people are soliciting a rural delivery service. The mail will be dispatched from the Monrovia postoffice.

A. C. Thompson of Duarte is entertaining the family of Finlaysen of Pain, Rosshire county, Scotland. They are from Thompson's former home.

HOLLYWOOD.

BENEFIT CONCERT.

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 8.—Under the direction of Rev. D. J. A. Murphy, pastor of the Church of the Blessed Sacrament of Hollywood, a classical concert is to be given at Wilcox Hall, Hollywood, on Thursday evening, December 14. A choice array of talent has been chosen for the affair and the programme will include: Operatic selections, Arend's Orchestra; soprano solo, Miss Adelaide McNeill; "Agnus Dei" (Lorety,) Hollywood Choir; baritone solo, Oliver Ross; concert galop, "The Sleigh Ride," Dr. Lorety; contralto solo, "Regina Coeli," Miss Marule Wagner; vocal selections, Miss Lillian Scanlon; Schubert's "Ave Maria," cello obligato, G. Allen Hancock; soprano solo, Miss Mary Merrick; baritone solo, Henry Daly; Moore's Melodies, orchestra; soprano sola, Miss Louise Gerse; selection from opera "Linda," Mrs. Nellie Hibler. Dr. Lorety the organist at this concert is the man, who opened the concert at the Venice Auditorium and is considered a musician of much ability. Mr. Hancock's ability is well known and Miss Scanlon, Mrs. Hibler and all the others are talented musicians in their lines.

RIVERA.

LAST WALNUT SHIPMENT.

RIVERA, Dec. 9.—The Los Nietos and Ranchita Walnut Growers' Association made its final shipment today, making the total 151 cars of ten tons each, for the season. The sales were made promptly, and there was no difficulty in disposing of the entire crop at the price agreed on—12 cents. The packing-house is being cleared out, and the Rivera Fruit Exchange will start the shipment of oranges in a few days.

The Rivera Nut Company is at work on an order from Alaska for 1000 packages of assorted walnut meats.

G. W. McCampbell was married in Los Angeles December 6, to Miss Jennie M. Houser. They will be at home after January 15.

The I. T. Club gave a social last night at the home of W. W. White.

Rev. J. B. Thomas and wife returned yesterday from the Baptist State Convention at San Bernardino.

STABBED BY PIPE.

Unique Accident at the Llewellyn Iron Works—And Still Another.

E. N. McNown met with a curious accident at the Lleyellwn Iron Works yesterday.

While skylarking during the noon hour with other ironworkers, some one struck at him in the scuffle and hit the end of his clay pipe. The stem of it was driven back between his teeth until he was stabbed through the throat.

He was brought to the Receiving Hospital, where his wound was dressed as well as the difficult location of it would admit.

Just as he was being carried out of the side door, after the dressing of the wound, the front door opened again and another man from the Llewellyn Iron Works was brought in. This one was J. E. Cloman, hurt in the wrist.

GOLDEN DAY FO OF GARIBAL

DECEMBER, 9, 1855, and December 9, 1905, are two dates to be marked with white stones by Maj. and Mrs. Charles C. DeRudio of this city who celebrated their golden wedding last evening.

Their first marriage day, just fifty years ago, saw the romantic picture of a dashing young Italian, Count DeRudio, a member of Garibaldi's legions, escaped from his unhappy country and making his way across the snow, three days' ride from London, Eng., to plight his troth to a beautiful young English girl, not 15 years of age.

OLDEN DAY FOR ONE OF GARIBALDI'S MEN.

ECEMBER, 9, 1855, and December 9, 1905, are two dates to be marked with white stones by Maj. Mrs. Charles C. DeRudio of this who celebrated their golden ing last evening.

first marriage day, just fifty ago, saw the romantic picture of ing young Italian, Count De-, a member of Garibaldi's legions, ped from his unhappy country and his way across the snow, three ride from London, Eng., to plight troth to a beautiful young English not 15 years of age.

the ancient church of Godalming, the county of Surrey, which had the whispered vows of four cen- of fair young brides this hand- hot-blooded son of the south, to his girl bride. "My Queen," as he calls her today, "Una, the one woman in the world."

Last evening at the family residence on Figueroa street in this far-away land of the afternoon, this courtly Roman, with deep fires still burning in his dark eyes underneath the snow-white of his hair, the bridegroom of 50 years standing exchanged his vows with the youthful wife who stood beside him, Judge William Young, conducting the rites of the civil ceremonial.

MAJOR AND MRS. C. C. DeRUDIO, celebrated their golden wedding last evening.

Children and grandchildren had worked to deck the house for the golden day, great pumpkin flowers made soft crepe paper blossoming here, there and everywhere throughout the lower floor and standing out against the lacy green of smilax that was twined and wreathed about walls and doorways and old family pictures.

The bridal couple stood just beneath the fretwork which divided the drawing rooms. Yellow silk draperies were drawn to either side and a horseshoe of white carnations tied with golden ribbon depended from the center. As Judge Young read the words of the marriage rite, a benediction seemed to breathe from the picture of the bride's aged English mother (now 84 years old,) which was placed in a conspicuous place, framed with living green, while the face of Gen. Calvi, the last martyr of Italian independence for which the gallant bridegroom struggled so long ago looked down upon the scene.

The bride, to whom the fifty years have been most kind, was handsomely gowned in a sweeping black velvet robe imported from Italy to wear at her silver wedding twenty-five years ago. A rich lace bertha finished the costume and she wore the gift of the groom, strings of beautiful Italian coral, which have just come from across the water.

Congratulations, good wishes and cordial handshakings were showered upon Maj. and Mrs. DeRudio, while many warm friends even kissed the bride. Mrs. H. C. Scott, a daughter of the couple, came in for her share of the good will of the evening as it was also the anniversary of her wedding. Hercules DeRudio, the only son, and Mrs. Adair and Mrs. Vickery, two daughters, were also present, the only grandchild there being young Sam Adair. A great many invitations had been issued and among the guests were members of the Army Ladies' Euchre Club and army people of Los Angeles.

The good health of the bride and groom was drunk in that noted concoction, Seventh Cavalry punch, the punch bowl resting upon a table spread with golden silk and covered with lace. In the center of the table where the wedding feast was spread, was a noble wedding cake with golden letters upon it, and the cake was cut with a cherished saber presented to Maj. DeRudio many years ago by Troop G of the Seventh Cavalry. A notable fruit cake, made according to an army recipe and stirred by the bride and her daughters, was a part of the good things with which the table groaned, while yellow-shaded candelabra, yellow flowers and glittering cut glass and china made a picture of old-time hospitality.

Maj. DeRudio, who has lived in Los Angeles for several years, is one of the most picturesque of the retired army officers. He came to the United States early in the Civil War and volunteered in the Seventy-ninth New York, being later appointed second lieutenant in the regular army by Gen. Grant, then acting Secretary of War. He served in the regular army thirty years and four months and was retired while in command of Troop D, Seventh Cavalry. Two years ago he was promoted by Roosevelt to the rank of major, which title he now bears.

TO EXPLOIT LIME.

Millions of Tons in Kern County Mountains—Company is Organized.

The Jameson Lime Company has been incorporated with J. W. and I. M. Jameson of Tehachepi, C. A. Canfield of Los Angeles, J. A. Chanslor of San Francisco, and J. W. Danziger of Los Angeles as directors. The company will maintain its principal office in this city, and may later erect a kiln here, if the market justifies such action. At present it has the Jameson kiln of fifty tons capacity daily at Tehachepi, which will be at least tripled within a year.

The company owns 500 acres of lime-bearing territory, a veritable mountain of limestone, enough, its owners claim, to supply all demand possible for years to come. Besides this, there are other immense deposits in the region around Tehachepi, Keene and vicinity. While there are other kilns in that region the Jameson plant is the largest.

The Jameson kiln is also unique in that it is the only oil-burning plant of its kind at Tehachepi. Much difficulty was at first encountered in getting a satisfactory burner for liquid fuel, but one invented by Irving Carl of this city was adopted nearly two years ago, and is working very satisfactorily. When running to the limit the company will burn 4000 barrels a month. The oil comes from Bakersfield. Prior to the introduction of oil wood was burned, and this is still used by other kilns. There is a good supply of this fuel in the mountains, but oil is declared to be found better.

Pen Points

Dr. Henry Van Dyke has coined a new word which he calls "publicomania." It means the mania for notoriety. It describes a very prevalent disease. In this town, for instance, Dr. John R. Haynes has it bad.

If the college boys would tackle their books with the same energy they give to football, we'd have some slashing smart men in this country a few years from now.

Great Britain is looking forward to the time when Canada will be able to furnish her with all the wheat she needs. And, just as likely as not that will be about the time when Canada will have set up her own independent republic and will have severed all her political connections with Great Britain.

Thinking of Mark Twain's recent birthday—and it is a pleasant thing to think of, too—we are reminded that although he grows old, his humor never does.

New York State has authorized the expenditure of $50,000,000 for good roads. This ought to resurrect some of the old grafters or produce a crop of new ones. It will probably do both.

It would be all right, perhaps, for Charlie Schwab to steal a United States Senatorship in Nevada. He would be known as the steel Senator, anyhow.

Sometimes "the news that's not fit to print" gets into the papers, anyhow, through the dexterity of the reporter who fits said news to words that are either sufficiently suggestive or explanatory to convey the meaning without specifically making the statement. This is why newspaper men are always successful when appointed to the diplomatic service.

Mr. Maddy, the railroads' press agent, says the public has not studied the railroads' side of the rate question. But what's the use? No matter how much we knew about it, it wouldn't have any effect on the flinty hearts of the traffic managers.

Another way to make football less brutal would be to compel the players to wear boxing gloves on their feet.

After this week has passed there will still be one week left in which to buy Christmas presents by those who happen to have money left.

Uncle Joe Cannon has issued a ukase excluding flowers from the House of Representatives. Consequently, if an occasion should arise during the present session to grant the privilege of the floor to J. Ham Lewis, he will be compelled to either decline the invitation or shave off his whiskers.

The world is certainly putting a great twist on itself when the United States steel trust ousts its president because his morals are not good.

As the insurance investigation proceeds it is seen that the grafters of high degree have made the small, petty grafters of politics seem almost respectable.

The Chauncey Depew Club of Iowa has declared boldly in favor of race suicide. A club that sticks to the name of Chauncey Depew after what has happened, would probably favor any kind of suicide.

The sentiment against babies has received such a tremendous momentum of late that those of us who have already had the good fortune to be born have reason to congratulate ourselves.

That Iowa motto of "fewer but better babies" looks all right on paper, but the question is will it work out in practice? Some people seem to think that they can have just whatever kind of babies they want, as though they and not divine Providence had the doing of it. If that were the case we should soon have a race of men and women so beautiful, strong and talented that the world would be quite too lovely to live in.

Mrs. Frake is mistaken, we think, in her assertion that a boy must have a university education in order to succeed in the world. It was not so in the past, it is not so now, and it is far less likely to be so in the future. The greatest living American author is not a university graduate, nor is the head of the army, nor are the great majority of the men who have done and are still doing things in this country.

The question: "Where did you get it?" hasn't caught on nearly so well as was expected. "Have you got it?" really seems to be the only question that has any interest for the American public. In other words, if you have it, it doesn't matter where you got it.

Our famous Dr. Osler, who is now a full-fledged Britisher, is making tariff speeches in England. He can kill off people over 60 years that way quite as well as by chloroforming them.

England has conferred the title of Viscount on a newspaper man. In this country we have no titles to confer on the people of the press, and even if we had it is doubtful if any member of the staff outside of the society editor could be induced to accept them.

MORE "GOOD OFFICES."

The "good offices" that we like to hear about are not those after which the politicians hanker, but the ones which, in another sense, are used by men in high places for the peace of the world and the betterment of mankind. And, in this regard, it may be safely said that in the use of good offices there has never been a magistrate more assiduous than the beloved head of this nation, the Hon. Theodore Roosevelt, President of the United States.

Our dispatches from Washington yesterday indicated that the latest effort in behalf of justice, peace and tranquillity which the President is making has to do with the situation in Venezuela. It was but a few days ago that conditions on the Caribbean Sea wore a threatening aspect. France was on the eve of making a naval demonstration against Venezuela, and she even went so far as to declare that unless Gen. Castro acceded to her demands she would bombard his ports and land troops on the shores of our sister republic. This would, of course, mean nothing less than war, for Castro would certainly fight, and his countrymen were ready to die at his back.

Suddenly, however, the war clouds lifted, and upon the stormy waters fell the calm of peace. What had brought about this happy change of what surely appeared to be a most desperate dilemma, we did not then know. But we know now. It was the "good offices" of Theodore Roosevelt.

The concern of this nation for our sister nations of the South must be earnest, watchful and sympathetic now and always. Happily they are growing better able to care for themselves with every passing year, and are constantly becoming more stable and self-reliant. Better still, the ancient suspicion with which they have unfortunately regarded the United States is also fast disappearing. Gradually, gently and surely have we been winning not only their friendship but their love, as well. The presence of Elihu Root at the coming Pan-American Congress will further cement the bonds between us and our fair sisters. Soon we shall have complete reciprocal trade relations with them all, to their enormous advantage and ours.

These are the splendid results of "good offices." Thus is accomplished the world's welfare. Better than artillery, better than armies and navies are the blessed ways of peace.

THE MISCHIEVOUS MOON.

The only friends the moon has are poets and lovers. Everybody else seems to be dead against fair Luna, and there's reason for it. The moon has caused a mighty lot of trouble in this world and will continue to do so as long as there is a world for it to shine on.

The truth of these statements receives additional support from Capt. Amundsen's recent location of the magnetic pole. He finds that the pole is not stationary, as a respectable pole should be, but is shifty, jumping out of its hole and acting very much after the manner of the Poles in Russia. According to Capt. Nansen, another eminent Arctic explorer, the magnetic pole shifts one minute in every 800,000 years. How can any reliance be placed on a thing so fickle that it won't even stand still for 800,000 years? And Nansen says it's all the moon's fault. If it weren't for Luna and her wiles the pole would behave in a perfectly respectable manner instead of being so scandalously unreliable as it is now.

It is well known to all observers that many a good crop of turnips, onions and other garden truck has been destroyed because the moon was in a bad humor when the seed was planted. And if you will lie all night at a window upon which the moon is shining you will wake up foolish.

These scientific facts are laid before the public in order that when our neighbors, the Socialists, the walking delegates, the knockers and the Democrats butt in on us with their spasmodic troubles, we should be patient with them. They can't help it. It is the moon.

ARIZONA.

It is to be regretted that President Roosevelt in his message to Congress did not see fit to differentiate between Oklahoma-Indian Territory and Arizona-New Mexico. In the former combination, the proposed union in Statehood has much to favor it. The expanse of territory covered is not extravagant. There are no natural boundaries, for the plains include both subdivisions. There are the very same industries, the same products, and, practically, a homogeneous population. Furthermore (and a very important point it is,) a majority of the voters in the two Territories are in favor of union.

Conditions in Arizona and New Mexico are radically different, for the two Territories have nothing in common. In Arizona there is statutory law, mainly following the California code. English (not of the M. Quad variety, either) is spoken exclusively in public affairs and in the schools, the Spanish-speaking part of the population being very much in the minority. The principal industry is mining, with a close second soon to materialize in the farming of the rich irrigated valleys to which the government now is bringing the blessings of water storage. That the Arizonans are American in every thought and that they are devotedly proud of their Territory is well appreciated in Southern California, where so many of them spend their summers.

THE NEWEST CHICAGO "IDEE."

NOTICE TO STORK! NO BABIES WANTED. THEY COST TOO MUCH. WE CAN'T STAND THE EXPENSE.
'05

The Stork: Well, if that isn't the limit!

New Mexico's laws seem to be founded upon common-law practice and inherited Spanish custom, and her organization of counties and her methods in the administration of justice are peculiar to herself, on lines undoubtedly best suited to her peculiar needs. Spanish is the common tongue of fully two-thirds of the people; in the Legislatures and courts necessarily are interpreters, and every printed law and notice has to be duplicated in Spanish to be effective. The principal industry is stock raising, mainly the care of sheep. There is little mining, save that of coal, in the northwestern part, about $1,500,000 a year covering the production of gold, silver and copper. The agricultural valleys of western and central New Mexico are mainly occupied by descendants of the Spaniards who settled there hundreds of years ago—a peaceful class, but, assuredly, not a progressive one. Only in the Pecos Valley, in the eastern part, can there be struck a dominant American note. Of population New Mexico has nearly 300,000, enough to entitle her to Statehood on that ground alone, though her assessment roll shows only $40,000,000 valuation for taxation. This amount is about $13,000,000 less than the valuation in Arizona, which has only one-half New Mexico's population. Made a State, hedging her people and their customs within State boundaries, it is probable that New Mexico would not prove a failure, but would work out her own salvation in a manner most satisfactory to her own citizenship.

Possibly it is ungenerous of The Times at this distressing juncture to say, "I told you so!" Yet we would rise to remark that, long ago, to the manifest ire of the Arizona politicians and press, The Times advised a cessation for a time of the political yell of "Statehood!" that resounded from the s. k. Territory. But the cry was kept up, in and out of season (mainly the latter,) till members of Congress had cold shudders when they thought of the oratorical advocates of the Southwestern Territories. It was urged upon the Arizonans that they wait till their wonderful resources should bring them the necessary population, but, no, they wanted Statehood for breakfast. Now it is dawning upon the Arizonans that Statehood is not the all-essential attribute they had pictured it. They now are even willing to admit that their Territorial condition is not one of unmixed evil, and they acknowledge that they could struggle along, even, for fifty years more, with the Federal government paying much of the expense of their political maintenance. It has taken a terrific shock to accomplish this result, but the President's message has done it.

Yet, in absolute fairness and justice, it is un-American and wrong to punish a whole people for the yawping of the few. As well condemn Los Angeles as a whole because she is afflicted in spots with the walking delegate. And, taking issue with the Senator from Indiana, The Times most emphatically would proclaim the good old American doctrine that coercion should not be used upon loyal American citizenship. Ninety-nine out of every 100 of the residents of Arizona are bitterly opposed to the proposed merger, as are two-thirds of the New Mexicans. Are their wishes and the plain statement of their interests to be ignored because, forsooth, they have been at times illy and injudiciously represented in Congress?

The proposed State of Arizona (joint) would be cumbersome and expensive to maintain. It would be nearly as large as Texas, which came into the Union with the understanding that she was to be divided into four States. It would mean the merging of the less populous, though richer, Arizona into the more populous New Mexico, whatever name be given the distasteful combination. It must mean the forcing upon the Arizonans of customs and laws widely at variance with their own. There would hardly be an average struck in a constitutional convention in which the New Mexican representation would be, as prescribed by the Hamilton bill, more than 50 per cent. the greater. Yet Arizona would pay the greater part of the cost of running the State government there organized.

Phoenix would lose the capital, of course, leaving useless a building that cost about $150,000. The university at Tucson would go, as well, for its main support is from the general government and the Morrell and Agricultural College funds may go to only one institution in each State. Naturally the funds would be taken in for the New Mexico university at Albuquerque, the only town where the joint Statehood advocates seem to be in the majority. Thus California would benefit through the defection of Arizona youth to her schools.

But this local view, concerning offices and institutions, is immaterial beside the main feature that it will be impossible to fuse the people and their customs. Sectional bitterness will follow the union, if made, and the eastern part of the new State would be arraigned perpetually against the west. Dissimilar in every way, separated by prejudice, as well as by mounthin ranges, they will mingle no better than oil and water. The union would be an unholy one and should not be enforced.

REFORMED FOOTBALL.

The football conference of various colleges and universities, held in New York, has resolved, by a vote of 15 to 8, that the game shall not be abolished as an intercollegiate "sport," but that it shall be "reformed," so as to eliminate the brutal and dangerous features. It is proposed that delegates shall be sent to an annual conference from the colleges most active in football, to appoint a committee of eleven to formulate rules for the government of the game, and that professionals shall be ineligible as delegates to the conference. Presumably, professionals will also be barred from the game.

It is some encouragement to note an effort on the part of footballists to make the game somewhat more like a civilized amusement. It is well enough to remember, however, that this action has not been taken voluntarily, but in response to a strong public demand that the game be either outlawed altogether, as prize fighting is in most States of the Union, or so modified as to destroy its more objectionable and brutal features. Football, with its long list of killings and maimings, has become so unpopular that it cannot long survive if something be not done to make it at least semi-respectable.

We shall see what reformed football will be like (provided the plan agreed upon at the New York conference be carried into effect.) It may be that the game will be so far reformed that it will be voted dull and uninteresting, as prize fights are voted a fake by the sports, unless one of the participants be killed or wounded.

And then, it is well to keep a sharp eye out for reforms and reformers of all sorts. The reformed drunkard is prone to return to his cups.

CALIFORNIA SUNSHINE.

The Accusing Collar Button.

From Eldora, Iowa, comes the most pathetic tale of the twentieth century, in which a California man is the hero. This hero sends to a clergyman in Eldora $2.50, requesting that the holy man pay over the sum to a jeweler in that town from whom the California man confesses to having purloined, twenty-two years ago, one collar button valued at 25 cents.

The plight of this unfortunate Californian would wring briny tears from the scaly hide of a crocodile. Just contemplate his agony! For twenty-two years this accusing collar button rose up against him. When he retired to his bed at night the collar button was there, gleaming like an accusing eye out of the darkness; but when he arose in the morning, after a sleepless night, to put on his shirt, the collar button was not there. Nay, it was lost, like all good collar buttons.

But the next Thursday, or maybe Wednesday, it showed up again, and he was glad to meet it, for he needed it; for three days he had buttoned his collar with a safety pin, and for the moment the finding of the lost collar button was a relief. But only for a moment, alas! Then the guilty finger of conscience pointed at his collar button and said in sepulchral tones, "Remember Eldora!"

Time and time again he contrived to lose that collar button, glad to get rid of it; but no collar button ever stays lost; it always turns up again, usually just after you have gone and bought another one and don't need it. However, you lay it away, for the next day you are sure to lose the new one—and then you can't find the old one until after you have lost all your patience and a quarter-section of your religion.

So this stolen collar button kept turning up, for twenty-two years, and the victim kept remembering Eldora. No doubt he wished that he had stolen only a two-bit pocketknife, which always gets lost for good, or a paper-cutter, which you never see again after you first bring it home, or even a Waterbury watch, which you can give to your brother's youngest boy and forget.

But, alas! he had stolen a collar button, and it would not down! Every time he felt it pressing against the back of his neck he remembered Eldora, and whenever it was lost it was gone but not forgotten. Finally the poor fellow could stand it no longer, so he sent ten times its value to be turned over to the man from whom he had taken the accusing collar button. Probably this means that he had lost it ten times—only ten—in those twenty-two years, though this seems unreasonable.

BY ROBERTUS LOVE.

Elegy Written in a City Backyard.

(With no apologies to anybody, except the cat.)

The curfew tolls the midnight from the tower;
The air stirs softly from its breathing sleep,
Then sinks again to rest; the mystic power
Of silence hath the world within its keep.

Save that, from yonder whitewashed picket fence,
The Tomcat doth unto the moon complain,
Pouring his whole wild soul in one immense,
Unearthly and repose-destroying strain.

Sleep, gentle sleep! tired nature's sweet (oh, heaven!)—
How shall I woo thee, charm thee to mine eyes?
Is that a cat? I think there must be seven
Or eight, with lungs of most unusual size!

Sleep, gentle (blank and blazes!)—where's my gun?
My pantaloons? Where did I lay my socks?
B-lud, b-lud, shall greet the rising moon
And phantom walls affright the crowing cocks!

Peace, base disturber! wouldst thou rest in peace?
Horrors!—crescendo doth my prayer evoke!
Now look you, Thomas, if you do not cease
I'll send you straightway to the sausage folk!

Be steady, arm! be true, my trusty!—Bang!!!
The serenade hath ceased, the fractured air
Reknits its sutures; peace again doth hang
Her laurels on the fence and pin them there.

EPITAPH.

Here rests his head upon the backyard pave—
A Cat, to all the neighbors known too well,
Good was he—but he sang! No power may save
His speeded spirit from the pits of—the place where singing cats and other nocturnal musicians go when they get shot.

Because They Don't Understand.

"It means as much to the North Pasadena boy or girl to ride in Rose Carnival parade on New Year's Day, from the hour of the assembling of the pageant to the moment of its final disbandment, after the chariot races, as it would mean to you or me to take a jolly trip across the seas. The splendor and sparkle of it, the gay songs and prancing horses, bright sashes and countless thousands of many-hued flowers; the clatter of heralds' hoofs and ring of merry laughter; the jubilant preparations, the hurried assembling, the eager waiting for the start; the fairyland journey between streetfuls of chattering, surging, welcome-waving throngs, and at last the grand climax in Tournament Park when the prizes are given and the magnificent chariot races are run—all these dear delights they dream about and plan for and count upon from New Year's Day to New Year's Day. And you, my excellent friends, who never were kiddies yourselves and know nothing of childhood's dazzling joys, would drown their hosts of happy expectations in a mist of tears because—because you don't understand. [Snorts.]

"For my bluntness I have already asked pardon. In saying good-night to you and good luck to your unfortunate children, I would recall to you a brief incident: Said the celebrated Dr. Henry Van Dyke to the Presbyterian Assembly at Los Angeles, immediately after that learned body had adopted a resolution against the use of tobacco by the clergy: 'Men and fathers, you have yet one thing to do before adjourning: adopt a resolution against doughnuts.'"

Does Competition Compete?

Time was, not so long ago, when a modest kid, clad in knee breeches and a winning smile, came to Los Angeles afoot and modestly announced himself to be the new Home Telephone Company, hunting for a job. He had come, he said, to serve the public, if the public would but graciously consent.

The public graciously did, lured by the kid's sweet smile and his manly talk about superior service and the many good things to be obtained by competition. For awhile he did famously—until he had secured from the public all the work he could do, and had begun to reap rich financial reward. In those first days, when the kid was going about knocking from door to door for jobs, the public got from him very bully service indeed; 'phones put in promptly according to promise, polite treatment at Central, first-class results on the wire—until success turned his foolish young head.

Now see how things have changed. The kid has donned long pants with a crease in them, and smokes a 25-cent cigar, and looks down with a haughty eye, and takes his own sweet time about keeping installation promises after contracts have been signed, and wears high and mighty airs that do not fit, and looks with languid hauteur on the public that trusted and befriended him in the job-hunting days of his youth, seemingly oblivious, in the intoxication of sudden success, that his elderly and established rival has awakened and is beating him a city block in prompt service.

Such cases have been before. And you bet the public is not forgetting that "pride goeth before a fall."

Give Us No "Cheaper" Gas.

The Lancer, after the manner of his hereditary foes, the Dimmicrats, "views with alarm" the proposed reduction in the price of Los Angeles gas from ninety to eighty-five cents the thousand feet on New Year's Day. Being a man of family as well as a lifelong Republican, he regrets that he cannot adopt the gesture of his party and "point with pride" to the quality of said invisible fluid as here manufactured and supplied.

When the nefarious carelessness of a prominent stove company has been unearthed in the shape of a cracked pipe belonging to the internal mechanism of a gas range, and said crack has been repaired with emergency soap until the deleterious pipe could be replaced, and when said pipe has been replaced and still the dwelling is permeated with fit-promoting odors, and said gas burns with a white flame that paints the kettles black and gives forth insufficient heat to victualize an inundated egg by tea time, then it is high time to invite the civics section of the Ebell Club to visit No. 418 North Broadway for the purpose of formulating a movement against threatened appearance of "cheaper" gas.

Notices to that effect will be mailed at once.

MINES AND MINING.

DREDGER ON THE COLORADO?

BIG WORK REPORTED IN SIGHT NEAR LAS VEGAS.

Reno Paper Tells of Enterprise Planned in Los Angeles Territory. State Association to Attract Capital—Rich Strike of Gold at Gold Park.

The Nevada State Journal of Reno says:

"A. S. Petrie, H. Elvalker, well-known mining men, outfitted at Vegas for a two months prospecting and development trip along the placer bars of the Colorado River.

"In the pursuit of their purpose they built a boat capable of conveying supplies and material and transport same with advantage along the navigable portions of the river.

"They have considerable ground located and will make complete tests with a view of introducing a dredging plant that will work and save the placer gold along their claims on a large and profitable scale.

"Messrs. Hall and Hewlettson also are operating their placer properties near Colville. Tests from this property show values of $2 per cubic yard. With the introduction of a dredging plant, arrangements for which are completed, the Hall-Hewlettson possessions promise great returns. The vantage point for entrance into the placer territory is from Las Vegas."

DEVELOPMENT AT ELY.

G. H. Spencer, a Los Angeles mining engineer, has just located a group of forty-seven claims in the Ely district of White Pine county for the Giroux Consolidated Mining Company, a corporation that is starting big operations. Application has been made for patent.

The copper production of Ely is expected to exceed 2000 pounds a month within the next eighteen months.

A rich strike is reported on the eastern slope of Mt. Patterson, fifty miles south of Ely, and a ledge nearly ten feet wide has been opened up carrying $272.85 per ton in gold. The claim is owned by James Edwards and can be traced for over 500 feet on the surface.

TO ATTRACT MINERS.

Alfred Tregido, the new president of the California Miners' Association, has announced that his policy will be to attract investors to the State. He refers to the replacing of hydraulic methods by the dredger and its benefits to the mining industry by making possible more economical work and avoiding waste. In part, he says:

"In New York last year there was distributed in dividends $160,000,000. All that money is for speculative purposes, and no one can tell me that it will not come this way, where the gold is known to be locked up in the earth, but easily available to capital. Then, too, the balance of trade is in favor of the United States, and we have all kinds of money in our financial centers, every dollar of which is looking for investment.

"As president of the Miners' Association it will be my policy to seek to develop great properties and to attract to the mining industry of this State a great share of this money that only needs to be told where it can be invested for it to come to us."

STRIKE IN RIVERSIDE.

W. E. Winnie and J. E. Schweng, president and secretary of the Gold Park Consolidated Mines Company, have just returned from a trip by automobile to the company's property in northern Riverside county. The trip was made to Banning between 11 o'clock in the morning and 6 o'clock in the evening and to the mines the following day. The return run all the way to Los Angeles was made in one day. Previous attempts to go over parts of this road with automobiles have proved unsuccessful.

They report that a strike of very rich ore was made a few days since on the Atlantic claim of their company at a depth of only thirty-five feet. Ore from a nine-inch streak gives assays of $2776.81 and that from a fourteen-inch streak returns $1207. Specimens brought in show a sugary white quartz, with sulphides, and free gold plainly visible to the naked eye.

YELLOW ASTER'S WORK.

The Yellow Aster Mining Company is still working for water sufficient to insure a supply for another 100-stamp mill to be erected at Randsburg to handle the enormous quantity of ore now blocked out in the mine, estimated at 6,000,000 tons. The company has secured a standard oil drilling rig which will be moved to Goler and several wells put down in this territory where it is known that water can be found at about 500 feet depth.

A well 1635 feet deep has been completed near the town of Randsburg and on ground of about the same altitude, but which at bottom is practically on a level with the Goler and Garlock wells, apparently in the same strata. By a small pump 14,000 gallons a day have been raised and a new pump of 170,000 gallons capacity is about to be installed so as to give the well a thorough test. The drill went through several strata, the first between 300 and 400 feet deep and the second 500 feet further or at between 800 and 900 feet depth. The well, while a good one, has cost as much as several at Goler would come to.

Elegance and Exclusiveness in Holiday Novelties

Our Christmas stock is composed only of high-class, exclusive goods—the very choicest and best we could find. No trash—no last year's goods—no 5c and 10c toys and novelties, but gift articles worth while. Goods with quality and character such as you would be proud to present. An early selection is advised, as the choicest pieces always go first, and it's impossible to duplicate them.

Cigar Boxes—made of fancy wood and lined with aluminum to retain the freshness of the cigars. Made to hold 50 or 100 cigars. Bird's-eye maple, snake wood, mahogany, ebony, highly polished and beautifully finished—$5 to $20.

Stag Horn Novelties—ink stands, desk sets, pen racks, cigar jars, ash trays and many other useful articles. Latest ideas are here.

Brass and Copper Novelties—for the den—cigar jars, smoker sets, ash trays, etc.—very handsome gifts for men.

Manicure Sets—Specially purchased for the Holiday trade. Everything from the plainest to the most elaborate sets—$2.50 to $20.

Shaving Sets—Splendid Christmas gifts for gentlemen. You'll find the nicest goods and best values here—$2.50 to $20.

Mirrors—Hand, stand and triplicate—plain and elaborate—newest ideas in shapes and materials—75c to $25.00.

Travelers' Sets—Will be popular gifts this Christmas. We show an elaborate line in fine leather cases—$2.50 to $25.

Extremely Rich Leather Goods

GOLD AND SILVER MOUNTED PURSES, HAND BAGS, CARD CASES, ETC., SOME WORTH $35, $40 AND $50.

A class of goods that is seldom shown outside of such shops as Tiffany & Co. of New York. Their equal can't be found anywhere in Los Angeles—no, not even in the finest jewelry store. We invite an early inspection of these goods, as they have just arrived, are entirely exclusive with us—no two pieces alike—and are sure to be sold quickly, as we have marked them little more than wholesale cost.

Gents' Cigar Cases and Card Cases

Plain seal at $3.50—lizard, French calf, etc.—mounted in 14k. gold, sterling silver and gun-metal, ranging up to $25.

Beaded Opera Bags

Just two in this shipment; gold-filled frames, with rolled gold chains; real beads; $17.50 and $30.

Ladies' Hand Bags

In all the new leathers and colors, some fitted with miniature opera glasses and set with reliable watch, completely fitted with card-case, powder puff, mirror, purse, etc., 14k gold and sterling silver mountings; no two alike; $9.50 to $50.

Ladies' Purses and Card Cases

The swell plain leathers at $3.50; handsome gold mounted, sterling silver mounted and jewelled effects up to $40. Some are set with rubies, emeralds, almondines and other gems; by far the swellest to be seen in Los Angeles; all exclusive.

PUBLIC SERVICE.

SUMMARY OF THE DAY.

City Assessor Lewis announced yesterday that he will not consent to make a horizontal increase in property values in his next assessment "for revenue only." This year's increase, he says, may be $25,000,000, not more.

The City Clerk's report for the municipal year which closed December 1 shows that over $400,000 was collected on the license account alone.

In the quiet title suit of Andrews against Wheeler, involving a strip of land on the new Occidental boulevard, some of the peculiarities of the old surveys again were brought to the front.

Moneyed men have organized a company to exploit the pearl fisheries in the Gulf of California, and the work is to be carried on in an up-to-date and businesslike way.

AT THE CITY HALL.

"NOT FOR ME," SAYS ASSESSOR.

NO INCREASE IN VALUATION FOR REVENUE ONLY.

Thinks City's Present Income Sufficient to Bear Expense of Government—Sends Caustic Comment to the Council Anent the East Ninth Street Lighting System.

City Assessor Lewis has kicked over the traces, to the consternation of the inner circle at the City Hall.

He says that there will be no $50,000,000 increase in assessments this year, no matter how badly the politicians need the money.

He has also sent to the Council a caustic criticism on that body's action in establishing a street lighting system on East Ninth street from Main street to Central avenue.

"Waste of public funds" is what he characterizes the street lighting system on Central avenue.

"If you get a $25,000,000 increase you will be lucky," is his reply to the importunities of the big politicians and the little place men. These desire that the assessment shall be increased "for revenue only," in order that old positions may be maintained and new ones created.

"On some property the assessment will be increased 1000 per cent," said Mr. Lewis yesterday morning; "on other property the valuation will be no higher than it is this year, possibly not so high."

A horizontal increase is what the "organization" has asked. The Assessor's defi has created consternation for the reason that he has always been considered an "organization" man.

"The tax rate is too high now," says Mr. Lewis, "the city ought to be run on a dollar rate, bonds and all. A year ago the rate was $1.60 a hundred. This year the rate was cut to $1.20; next year it ought to be not more than $1.

"If I had some positive assurance that the rate would be cut, I might be more inclined to increase the valuation of real estate. A higher valuation would have a salutary effect in marketing our water bonds. But the property owners have some rights. Chief among them is that those in charge of the city government shall give them an economical administration.

"This year the lowered tax rate cut off $800,000 in revenue, but if that rate had been the same as last year the money would all have been expended."

This is the City Assessor on the tax rate. On the Ninth street lighting he has registered his protest in a written communication to the Council.

"As one of the property owners on that street," writes Mr. Lewis, "I desire to enter a protest against this outrageous scheme, not because of the expense of the lamp posts; that is only a small matter and an expense to be met but once. I am more than willing to pay my part of it; but the city will find that the bill for the electricity will amount to a large sum and will have to be met often, and that is why I enter this protest, because such expensive lights are not needed on the streets and are entirely uncalled for, except for the interests of a few speculators who are over-anxious to dispose of their holdings at an advance in prices and at the expense of the whole city.

"There is hardly any business done on that thoroughfare now, and if the city will continue to grow at the rate of 20,000 a year for the next twenty-five years, there will not be sufficient business on that street then to warrant such expensive lamps. The revenue from the property fronting on the street is hardly sufficient to pay for the sweeping and the repairing of said street, without mentioning expensive ornamental lamps that will have to be paid for by other sections of the city that are practically in darkness, with streets unfit to travel on, which would be very unfair and unjust.

"If this foolishness is allowed to go on, the burden of taxation is sure to come very heavily on the people, and outside districts, once lighted with ornamental lamps, may have to go dark.

"The opinion I hear very generally is that Broadway could get along very nicely with one-third less light and the public would never miss it. Too much light is worse than too little on a street. There can be no serious objection, however, to having the business center of the city well lighted, where property is assessed at from $1000 to $2000 per front foot.

"I hope your honorable body will look at this matter in the right light, as all sensible business men should do, and put a stop to this waste of public funds."

Two weeks ago Spook Howton presented the resolution for establishing a lighting system on East Ninth street. It was adopted without reference to any committee and the City Attorney was instructed to prepare the necessary ordinance.

Friends of the Mayor say that this was the price of Howton's affirmative vote in passing the Main, Spring and Hill street lighting ordinances over the Chief Executive's veto.

The property owners pay for the installation of the system on each of these thoroughfares and the city bears the expense of lighting the electroliers.

LICENSES MULTIPLY.

CITY CLERK'S REPORT.

During the municipal year which closed December 1 the City Clerk's office issued licenses amounting to $429,591.22. Of this amount about $20,000 was uncollected. But the total license receipts for the year exceeded $400,000.

This license account, which is the chief feature of the City Clerk's report, is expected to fill up a number of vacant corners in department appropriations. It is one means by which the Council can make up the present deficit.

The saloon licenses issued during the year have been the same for each month, 200. Restaurant liquor licenses have increased from sixty-four during last December to seventy-two for November. When the present Police Commission went into office sixty-nine restaurant liquor licenses were in force. The commission commenced a weeding-out process and in August only fifty-six restaurant liquor licenses were issued. Here came the turning point. The board suddenly assumed a more liberal policy and for November the number of restaurants carrying liquor licenses had increased to seventy-two. At the present time seventy-six restaurant liquor licenses are in good standing.

At the first of the municipal year fifty-eight wholesale liquor licenses were issued. This number increased until July, when seventy-two wholesale liquor licenses were in effect. But as the restaurant liquor licenses increased the wholesale permits went back. For November only sixty-six wholesale licenses were issued.

Miscellaneous licenses were issued for December of last year amounting to $8365. This amount has increased to $9611 for November. The quarterly license account has increased from $21,000 to $24,000.

The total expense of the Clerk's office for the municipal year totaled $17,534. The Custodian's department cost $16,126.

AT THE COURTHOUSE.

TITLE CLEAR ON BOULEVARD.

COURT HOLDS OLD SURVEYS ARE LACKING IN WORTH.

Lewis W. Andrews Fails to Get Ownership of Strip of Land for Which He Contended With Fred F. Wheeler—Old Tangle in Boundaries Is Brought Out.

Because the old Mexicans used the surveying stakes for hitching posts in the early days, there has been a twist in the surveys, and Judge Trask and counsel in the suit of Lewis W. Andrews against Fred F. Wheeler have had a hard time arriving at any understanding regarding title to a small but important strip of land on Occidental boulevard.

Wheeler has set out a pretty tract, but Andrews claimed title to a strip that runs about fifty-three feet on this boulevard, and the case was carried into court to have the ownership determined. Then followed a wrestling match on the part of Bernard Potter and Attorney Garrett, the latter representing the plaintiff and Potter appearing for the defendant, Wheeler.

It is not long ago that the land in the vicinity of the disputed territory was acreage, and when the city obtained land about there for a park its destiny as a residential district became assured. Wheeler claimed title by mesne conveyance from the city and the Canal and Reservoir Company to the Uncle Sam Oil Company in May, 1904, and, through his predecessors in interest, Andrews claimed to have held possession against all comers for many years.

According to the evidence, Ord & Hancock made the surveys and the latter laid out the city. After them other surveys were made, but somehow monuments were conspicuous by their absence. Ord, who was a lieutenant stationed at Los Angeles, made his survey at the behest of the city fathers, and was promised $3000 for his work. But when he demanded his money it was not forthcoming and so he withheld his field notes.

His map had no dimensions on it and, as it was made on a scale of eight chains to an inch, scaling it for distance was out of the question. He had set stakes at the corners of the blocks he had surveyed, and the City Council agreed to place in the positions stones for permanent monuments.

But there was delay in this, and meanwhile the Mexican residents were puzzling their heads to find out what the Americanos had shoved down the stakes for. A bright light suddenly illumined their intelligence—the good Americanos had put down the stakes for their convenience in staking out their cows and to restrain the predatory instincts of their broncos.

Whenever a cow would exhaust the feed within the circle of the tethering rope, that particular stake would be withdrawn and shoved down again in some more convenient position. The monuments never were put out and Ord's trouble with the city was compromised by Juan Temple taking over certain of the lots and paying the $3000 demanded. Temple got the lots, but when he went out to select them more complications arose.

It was in the early fifties that the Hancock survey was made, and between the time of his arrival in 1852 and the year 1859 he had surveyed almost the whole of the county from Mojave to the Colorado River, and for miles along either bank. In making a survey of the city he subdivided it into thirty-five acre lots, with streets intersecting the blocks. But stakes were again used and it is assumed that a mix-up again occurred through the Mexican hitching habit. The survey was carried well to the south and west of the present city boundaries, and the elaborate map that measured about ten feet long and six feet high was hung in the then Mayor's office.

When the Land Commission appointed by Congress to adjudicate titles allowed the city of Los Angeles only four leagues, instead of the sixteen claimed, the boundaries were placed one league in each direction, north, south, east and west from the old Plaza. John C. Nichols was then Mayor and he took the unwieldy Hancock map and drew lines one league from the Plaza in each direction in accordance with the decree, and then coolly produced a pair of tailor's shears and snipped off the exteriors of the map outside the four-league boundary, and thus wiped out field notes, title and every vestige of memoranda there was upon it.

These, and other difficulties of similar character, interposed to tangle up the property being fought over before Judge Trask. Counsel on either side tried their best to make something out of these old surveys, but the court was with them in the opinion that they were worth very little. But fortunately, the lands of the old Reservoir and Canal Company had been surveyed by one W. Moore, and some order was brought out of chaos by following this clew. The disputed territory lies between Sixth and First streets, and the dividing line over which the trouble arose divides two large lots of ground, each of the parties to the suit owning one.

By shoving the dividing line over where Andrews wanted it he got ahead just twenty-one feet, and Wheeler lost just so much. By shoving it over in the contrary direction the conditions were exactly reversed. Sixth street, it appeared, never has been absolutely determined, as there are variations in all of the surveys, differing all the way from seventeen to twenty-five feet. But there were some of the Moore monuments remaining, and though isolated and not conclusive, yet the court held that they were the only permanent monuments, the old surveys being absolutely indefinite.

Accepting these as a basis, judgment was given in favor of Wheeler.

COURTHOUSE NOTES.

BREVITIES MISCELLANEOUS.

ON PROBATION. Claud David, a young man from Paris, Ill., pleaded guilty to burglary before Judge Smith yesterday. He broke into the saloon of H. Matson, but got away with only a pocketknife. The court disliked to send a man to the State's prison for stealing a pocketknife, more particularly as there was nothing against the character of the defendant, and so he released David on probation.

MEXICAN PEARLS. The Mexican Pearl Company has incorporated for the purpose of pearl fishing in the Gulf of California with a capital stock of $1,000,000, of which $500,000 has been subscribed. The directors are: W. H. Killeby, Guaymas; R. T. Goodhue, D. Barker, J. A. Christy and F. E. Linn, Los Angeles.

GOT FIVE YEARS. Angel Garcia, the old Mexican who was convicted of an assault upon Rosalias Sosaz, a mere infant, was yesterday sentenced by Judge Smith to five years at Folsom.

LAND SYNDICATE. The Anaheim Land Syndicate has incorporated with a capital stock of $75,000, of which $25 has been subscribed. The directors are: S. Davis, E. L. Kornfeld, S. T. Smith and W. D. Blatner, all of this city.

TO SELL LIME. The Jameson Lime Company has incorporated with a capital stock of $300,000, of which $500 has been subscribed. The directors are: J. W. and I. M. Jameson, Tehachepi; C. A. Canfield and J. M. Danziger, Los Angeles, and J. A. Chanslor, San Francisco.

BUILDING MATERIAL. The Elder Building Material Company has incorporated with a capital stock of $250,000, of which $100,000 has been subscribed. The directors are: C. A. Elder, R. Morgan, A. W. Broda, C. Lloyd, L. R. Garrett, A. P. Thomson and H. D. Rodgers, all of Los Angeles.

NEW TRACT. The Cottage Terrace Company has incorporated with a capital stock of $100,000, of which $500 has been subscribed. The directors are: F. R. Strong, G. W. Dickinson, A. H. Beach, O. C. Gebauer and Louis Luckel, all of Los Angeles.

THROWN FROM CAR.

J. F. Crawford was thrown from a street car at Fourth and Spring streets yesterday and narrowly escaped losing an eye. A gash was cut across one corner so deep that three or four stitches had to be taken.

JACK LONDON'S VISIT.

During his stay in Los Angeles from February 18 to 28, Jack London, the well-known writer, will deliver his lecture, "Revolution," and also is scheduled to debate with Rev. B. Fay Mills on the doctrine of economic determinism.

THE TIMES' NEW YEAR'S NUMBER.

To be Out January 1, and Worth Waiting For.

Citizens of Southern California can do no better missionary work for the "Land We Love" than by sending a copy of the forthcoming Midwinter Number of The Times, to be issued January 1, to persons at a distance who are hungry for information about this marvelous and fast-growing section. This special issue, containing over 160 pages, with more than 50 full-page illustrations, will contain a vast fund of authentic information, compiled by experts, on our past growth, present prosperous condition and the bright outlook for the future. FULL DRESS
ATTIRE

The critical test of tailoring comes in full dress attire where every slight imperfection appears as a glaring fault.

Not one tailor in fifty understands the art of making full dress clothes, and even the best tailors seldom succeed in producing full dress apparel that is correct in every detail.

Thus it has happened that Alfred Benjamin & Co.'s Full Dress Suits and Tuxedo Suits are now used by all discriminating men. These superb garments possess a certain definite air of elegance, sharpness, dignity and richness which is combined with a marvelous perfection in fit. They are so utterly beyond the product of a tailor shop that comparison renders the tailor's efforts almost absurd.

Alfred Benjamin & Co.'s Full Dress Suits $35 to $50—the tailor's price $75 to $100.

Alfred Benjamin & Co.'s Tuxedo Suits to $42—the tailor's price $65 to $85.

Bear in mind our select variety of Full Dress Waist Coats, fancy vests, business suits and overcoats.

The new home of the Ebell Club where the first meeting was held Monday.

WOMEN'S CLUBS.

The Ebell Club is in possession of its tately new home. Last Monday aft-rnoon the first meeting was held in the lubhouse, and it was an occasion to ee and admire the glorious new posession. The Spanish Renaissance style f architecture, with cloistered patio etween the clubrooms and auditorium, as been carried out with rare artisic perception. The result is a perfect atisfaction to the eye, and a sort of tmosphere which comes from the realation of beauty and fitness.

The interior of the auditorium is the lassic Renaissance in pure white oesy of line and tone. The halls and earoom are done in Flemish oak, and here is a dressing-room, office and itchen on the first floor. On the secnd floor are the section-room, direcors' room, room for the Alliance rancaise, and dressing-room, the whole being arranged with an eye to onvenience, as well as beauty.

The cost of the building was about 22,000, and the lot about $10,000, Hunt Eager being the architects. The furishing is in charge of Mrs. Kate reenleaf Locke, many gifts having een received for this purpose. The tage is furnished with a new Steinway grand piano.

A large house-warming will be given n this new home early in January, ut the meeting last Monday was largey attended, and was most delightful n every particular. Coffee was served s the first refreshment in the new bode.

The musical which formed the programme was in the hands of two arists, Miss Jean E. Wakeman and laude Reese Davies, both pianist and ocalist sustaining their reputations to he full in the artistic values of the umbers given.

The full programme was as follows: (a) "Prelude and Fugue" (Emile Berard;) (b) "Gavotte" (Gluck-Brahms;) (c) Etude, "Juggiery" (Benjamin Godard,) Miss Jean E. Wakeman; "Recitative and Aria," "La Traviata" (Verdi,) Miss Maude Reese-Davies; (a) Etude for left hand alone (Pirkheri;) (b) "Minuet Antique" (Seeboeck;) (c) Etude, Op. 25 No. 7, Brillante Variationen (Chopin,) Miss Jean E. Wakeman; (a) "Margoton" (Sixteenth Century;) (b) "Spring" (Georg Henschel;) (c) "The Return" (Caro Roma,) Miss Maud Reese-Davies; Concerto Op. 47 (Schutt;) "Andante Tranquillo," "Allegro vivace," Miss Jean E. Wakeman; second piano, Miss Jessie Ware; accompaniste, Mrs. Blanche Williams Robinson.

A Hawaiian programme will be given at the Ebell Club tomorrow, a lecture with stereopticon views, Hawaiian songs and the exhibition of Hawaiian curios being anticipated. December 18, Robert J. Burdette will give his talk called "Holly and Rue," treating of Christmas uses and abuses.

School Decoration.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the University of Southern California held a fine meeting last Friday afternoon in the Conservatory of Music. Mrs. Crosswell gave a most entertaining and instructive talk on "School Decoration," her thorough artist's soul making this a favorite topic. She told of the interior decoration, the architecture of the building, and the arrangement of the school grounds so as to make a perfect whole, harmonious in all of its parts. She touched on many other special phases of school decoration, the subject to be continued at the next meeting.

The officers of the auxiliary are Mrs. A. B. Armstrong, president; Mrs. A. F. Speicher, vice-president; Mrs. J. S. Myers, secretary; and Mrs. H. E. Burmeister, treasurer.

What Clubs Have Done.

The Alhambra Wednesday Afternoon Club has had a series of lectures at which the high school girls have been guests, the time thus spent being credited to their class work. The high school boys were treated to a lecture on "California Forests." A bronze fountain in the business part of the town also stands to the credit of this club.

The Avalon Woman's Club is studying the flora of Catalina Island.

The Azusa Woman's Club planted over a hundred fine trees last Arbor Day with the assistance of the school children. This club has been discovering California geniuses among the artists, writers and musicians.

Carpenteria Woman's Club has turned its attention to village improvement, and hopes to see within a year a fine drive to one of the most beautiful of the beaches. The club has also raised $100 towards payment for a public hall.

Covina Monday Afternoon Club has a $3800 clubhouse, built by the members on land donated for the purpose.

The Saturday Afternoon Club of Downey is a study club, and has been carrying on a series of interesting monthly meetings.

The Woman's Improvement Club of East Whittier has been instrumental in having school grounds beautified, and shade trees and ornamental plants set out. They have purchased a brick building for use as a clubhouse.

El Monte Shakespeare Club denotes its time exclusively to the reading and study of Shakespeare.

Glendora Woman's Athena Club is working for the support of a public library established by the club two years ago. Running expenses are met by proceeds from entertainments and socials given by the club members. The ladies are also working on a quilt for a Christmas present to the Los Angeles Orphans' Home.

The Long Beach Ebell reports a busy year, and has just completed a clubhouse. It has also made itself felt along civic lines.

The Los Angeles Cosmos Club observes the fifth Wednesday as "Membership Day" for acquaintance sake. It has extended its membership limit to 150.

The Ruskin Art Club is putting all its influence toward the building of a permanent art gallery. The Thursday Afternoon Club of Los Angeles is studying history and landmarks.

The Wednesday Morning Club of Los Angeles was successful in having a neglected park planted in flowers and shrubs, and given the proper attention.

The Pasadena Washington Heights Study Circle has sent regular contributions of fruit and clothing to the Children's Home and to one of the hospitals.

The Friday Morning Club of Los Angeles assisted in the election of the non-partisan school board, and has taken a resolute stand in faira

Pomona Ebell Club attractive year book of tory and landmarks.

YOU all know, without being further told, that there is but one Redondo—one place where you can enjoy all the good things that your most fastidious tastes may demand; but we just want to remind you, before it is too late, that you are missing the Golden Opportunity of your life if you do not own a home, a business lot, or in some way identify yourself with this busy, strictly up-to-date, prosperous little City. Redondo has increased in population over 100 per cent. in the past two years and with such a man as Mr. Huntington at the helm and his able lieutenants to further the every interest of this ideal spot, and with the natural advantages enjoyed by absolutely no other Coast town, Redondo cannot help but become one of the largest commercial, as well as "Home Cities," in Southern California. Hundreds of thousands of dollars are being spent on the streets alone for grading, sidewalks, oiling, etc., as well as many other municipal improvements being under way at this time. A beautiful Union High School building will soon be built in the center of "Tent City Grounds," which property has just been acquired for this purpose. Seventy-five homes are in course of construction, and lots of other things are going on that will surely interest you.

Go to Redondo, and go quickly, while you still have some of our choicest property to select from.

We are the sole agents for Mr. Huntington's Redondo property.

LOYAL MASONS AND WHAT THEY'VE DONE.

MASONIC interest throughout the State centers in the achievement of Hollenbeck Lodge, No. 319, of Boyle Heights, which within the year has completed and handsomely furnished one of the finest lodge homes on the Pacific Coast.

Three years ago a site for a lodge building was chosen by the Hollenbeck Masonic Temple Association, on East First near Cummings street. The site was approved by the Boyle Heights Masons and purchased. That is as far as the project progressed and the association paid taxes on the site for two years.

With the election of Leo Youngworth as Master, a new era began for the Hollenbeck Lodge. With a determination that knows not failure, bonds were sold and a building was soon commenced. Money for the structure was subscribed almost entirely by lodge members and the effort was great.

On July 29 of this year, the cornerstone was laid with fitting ceremony, and the work of construction commenced in earnest under the direction of Architect William J. Bleisner.

There were those who believed the estimated cost of the building was more than the lodge members could pledge themselves to expend. The undertaking seemed doomed to fail. Rallying nobly to the cause, the members pulling together, succeeded in completing the structure at a cost of $20,000, and the building was dedicated on Thursday. The structure was erected for the Boyle Heights Masons by the Hollenbeck Masonic Temple Association.

With the completion of the structure another predicament faced the members. The lodge home was far handsomer than was at first planned. The furnishings for such a structure must be in keeping. This necessitated an expenditure of another $3000, which, with the original cost of the property, brought the valuation of the lodge realty to $28,000. This figure almost took the breath from some of the members.

Furnishings of the finest were supplied and the hall presents a handsome interior, as the frescoes are dainty and artistic.

The lodge has a membership of more than 200 and an average attendance at each of its business meetings of thirty. The association is one of the livest in the city and much is planned by the members for the future.

Officers of the Hollenbeck Lodge are: Leo V. Youngworth, Master; E. A. Talbot, Senior Warden; J. A. Smith, Junior Warden; W. J. Sanborn, Senior Deacon; S. H. Brooks, Junior Deacon; Harry Knox, Senior Steward; D. M. Powers, Junior Steward; Will A. Knighten, Chaplain; J. Will Dick, Secretary; Peter Johnson, Treasurer; George Ellis, Tyler; M. C. Nuner, C. A. Charlton and Charles Batchellor, Board of Trustees.

REDONDO.

BIG POWERHOUSE LIKELY.

REDONDO, Dec. 9.—The Los Angeles and Redondo Railway Company contemplates the installation of a large power plant in Redondo. As more and heavier cars are to be placed in operation, it is necessary to use more power to facilitate them.

Mrs. Helen D. Harford, national organizer of the W.C.T.U., will speak in the Methodist Church Sunday morning, and in the Congregational Church in the evening.

Redondo Lodge, F. and A. M. has elected the following officers: W. M., J. C. Gillespie; S. W., William Sprinkle; J. W., Charles Grassel; secretary, A. M. Harter; treasurer, Peter Brown.

Redondo Hive, No. 2, Ladies of the Maccabees has elected the following officers: Past commander, Mrs. Herring; commander, Mrs. Sprinkle; lieutenant-commander Mrs. Hinman; record keeper, Mrs. Nidig; finance keeper, Mrs. Easterday; chaplain, Mrs. Hathaway; sargeant, Mrs. Chadwick; mistress-at-arms, Mrs. Lacey; sentinel, Miss Jessie Arnold; picket, Mrs. Usrey.

Prof. Moore of Geneva, N. Y., has been a visitor at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Cate for part of the week.

Mr. and Mrs. George Anderson and children have returned home after visiting for two weeks with relatives in San Diego county.

S. D. Barkley and little son, Deal, have gone on a trip to Searchlight.

I have been treated by Dr. Schiffman for years. I have tried all his different methods, and can say unhesitatingly no dentist or physician has ever operated with such success or skill. In extracting teeth he did it without any pain to me. It is a great pleasure to me to recommend him and his method of treatment.
MILO M. POTTER,
Prop. Van Nuys Hotel, L. A., and Hotel Potter, Santa Barbara.

Ten years ago a reputable dentist of Virginia told me that a certain molar tooth could not be satisfactorily saved, and that it would probably not be of service for one year. It has not only served me for ten years as Dr. Schiffman saved and crowned it, and comparatively speaking, without pain. I sing his praise.
OWEN M. ANDREWS,
Pastor M. E. Church, South, Cor. 6th and Mateo sts.

It gives me great pleasure to state that Dr. Schiffman extracted an impacted wisdom tooth for me, which had been giving me great annoyance for years. It was extracted absolutely without a particle of pain to me. It was easily worth 100 times the amount paid.
ROBERT MARSH,
Of Robert Marsh & Co., 202-203 H. W. Hellman Bldg.

On account of some unfortunate experience I had in the extraction of my teeth I became a great coward in this respect. Today Dr. Schiffman extracted one of my very refractory teeth without causing me one particle of pain. D. K. TRASK,
Judge Superior Court, Los Angeles.

Several years ago Dr. Schiffman did some crown work for me which has proven entirely satisfactory. The work was done painlessly and with great skill. It gives me great pleasure to recommend him.
IRVING R. SMITH,

Flexible Rubber Dental Plates

Have many advantages over the old, thick, cumbersome, ordinary rubber plates and even over gold plates, being much lighter and thinner. These plates are flexible only a trifle thicker than heavy writing paper, fit closer and adhere better to the roof of the mouth. Particles of food and small seeds cannot get under them. They will last longer, are stronger than any others and will not break, as they will give first, being flexible. Dr. Schiffman's own process, and made only by us.

You may think it's impossible to get a good suit made to order for only $15.00, but a glance at one of these high-class, perfect-fitting Scotch suits will make you change your mind. It's not the price you pay for clothes that makes the fit possible—it's the "knowing how." The hustling Scotch Tailors have learned the art of good-clothes making from A to Z, and can fit you just as perfectly as the tailor who charges you three or four times our price. $15.00 pays for a handsome suit of fine Scotch woolen here—same goods would cost you $25 to $30 anywhere else.

the spur from Las Vegas, and [illegible] see Johnnie wake up," said a grizzled Desert Rat to Nomad.

The writer met the Sky Pilot in the big store at Johnnie Sunday night, November 26. A committee of miners selected the hymns. Old Hundred, Coronation, Holy City, Jesus Lover, Rock of Ages, and Nearer, My God, to Thee, were on the list. In the audience we had a man from Montrose, Scotland, a cowboy from the Gila River, Arizona, a lad from Cornwall, a Death Valley prospector from Kentucky, a Chinaman, born in San Francisco, a Latter Day Saint born in Old Mexico, and an up-to-date angel from Los Angeles and John Yount, who was raised at Manse.

In 1876 Yount, Senior, was on a journey by prairie schooner from Oregon to Arizona, with wife, eight children and 200 head of stock, when an outlaw Indian killed with arrows, his freight horses, and Yount was compelled to drive down his stake at Manse. His nearest neighbor being at Indian Creek, fifty miles away.

H. R. Finley, aged 79 years and eight months, died at Manse, Nye county, Nevada, November 19, 1905. He was the son of a Presbyterian minister and came to the Golden Gate in '50 or '51. Gold was sought for on the west slope of Sierras in the Bret Harte country and in Esmeralda, Nev., in the Mark Twain region. Mr. Finley was a Pony Express rider on the historic 2000 mile trail from St. Joe to Sacramento, and at various periods during the past thirty years took up the quest for the Lost Breyfogle mine in Death Valley. He told the writer that his grandfather fought in the struggle for independence, and his father, who died at age of 96, in the war of 1812. H. R. Finley was a veteran of the Civil War, with an honorable record.

Jack Baxter and Cherokee Bill were interviewed in regard to camps of "Outlaw Indians" at Ash Meadows and Pahrump. The "outlaws" are hard working men and give no trouble when separated from Jim Crow, or one crown Cyrus Noble whisky.

Renegade Indians years ago, horse and cattle thieves and murderers, outcasts from various tribes, made common cause, chose a chief, and erected their wigwams near by the flowing springs of Manse, Pahrump and Ash Meadows. There are about twenty-five families and no man or woman of the religion of Jesus has ever cared for the physical, intellectual, moral or religious welfare of this outlaw tribe of the Amargosa Desert and Death Valley.

DIVORCE CASE OF CURIO MAN.

CATALINA PIONEER SUED IN SAN FRANCISCO.

Young Wife of William M. Hunt Claims He Was Cruel and Cold to Her, Making Her Take Drugs—He Threw Money at Her, She Alleges in Her Complaint.

William M. Hunt, who has been identified with Catalina Island for nearly twenty years and is the veteran curio man there, has been sued for divorce by Ellen E. Hunt, his young wife. The suit was filed yesterday in San Francisco.

She was a distant relative and much his junior. They were married in San Francisco in 1898. Hunt is a man of education and much intelligence—one of the few outside property holders on Catalina—but of a testy temper. She charges him with cruelty.

In her filed complaint she stated that she had to leave him in September, 1904, on account of his cruelty, and that since then he has refused to permit her to return to him. Their home was at Avalon. Since Mrs. Hunt left her husband, she has been residing with her mother in San Francisco. She says that property owned by him is worth over $100,000. For alimony she asks $100 a month. The only charges of cruelty made by her are that when she asked Hunt for money for household expenses he angrily threw it at her; that he forced her to take a drug which poisoned her system; that he threatened to put her in an insane asylum, and that for a long time before separation he was cold and distant.

WIGGINS WORKING.

Chamber of Commerce Looking Brighter Since His Return—Early Banquet Arrangements.

Since the return of Frank Wiggins, the Chamber of Commerce has taken on an unwontedly bright appearance. New display cases, new exhibits, rejuvenated exhibits, and new and unusual specimens of Southern California products are to be seen.

Arrangements are progressing rapidly for the annual banquet of the chamber, to be given on February 22, 1906. Indications point to a "largest ever" attendance. The committee has already been appointed, and is composed of Walter E. Barnwell, Louis F. Vetter, Perry Widener, Joseph Scott and C. W. Fleming. Mr. Vetter will have charge of location and catering, Mr. Scott of the speaking, Mr. Widener of the menu cards and Mr. Fleming of invitations and decorations.

The reception to Bishop Conaty will probably be held on the evening of December 20.

ARIZONA STATEHOOD.

Gen. A. J. Sampson, Leaving for Phoenix, Says Joining With New Mexico Would be Unjust.

Gen. A. J. Sampson, who resigned recently as United States Minister to Ecuador, after a service of eight years, will leave tomorrow with Mrs. Sampson for their home at Phoenix, Ariz. They now are at No. 1307 Orange street.

Gen. and Mrs. Sampson have visited in Los Angeles from time to time for the past twenty years, and are strong admirers of the city, although they give their first allegiance to Phoenix, their home city.

"Ninety-five per cent. of the population of Arizona will thank The Times for its stand against the joint Statehood of Arizona and New Mexico," said Gen. Sampson yesterday. "Such a union would be most unwise and unjust. A hundredfold more preferable would be a union with Southern California to form one State, or to remain a Territory for many years to come."

PUPILS' RECITAL.

An appreciative audience gathered at the Memorial Baptist Church, corner of Twenty-third and Grand avenue for a pupils' recital, given by Mrs. S. Etta Young. Especially noteworthy was the work of Miss Vera Best in her "Naughty Zell," which captivated the audience. She responded with "At the Party," a pretty child's piece. Others who took part in the pleasing programme were Hazel Hufford, Earl De Mond, Clelia Van Pelt, Frances Rider, Dora Thornborn, Nellie Strowser, Margaret Burkhart, Mrs. Harry Wheeler and Lola Strowser. Vera Best as Bobby Shafter and Lola Strowser as Marie, and Clelia Van Pelt as "The Little Friend," delighted the audience with their pretty love-making. Musical numbers were given by young women of the church.

Wanted--A Salesman!

This is the cry that is going up from the great commercial world.

There are plenty of goods to sell--there are plenty of people to buy--there are too few who really how to sell.

Do you know what Salesmanship is? Here it is--a pod of peas:

SALESMANSHIP = P OWER
to
EOPLE
to URCHASE
ROFIT
that which you have to sell. = PLENTY

Unless that last pea is in the pod (profit) there will be no soup.

This power can be developed in every normal person--the poor salesman can become strong, the salesman can become much stronger.

HOW?

First---By Intensifying the Personality.

This is done by training and developing the positive forces of body, mind and soul—such as strength, symmetry, activity, endurance—perception, reason, judgment, memory, imagination, concentration, will, faith, ambition, kindness, enthusiasm, confidence, etc.

The sum of these forces equals your character and health—your personality.

Confidence is the backbone of all business dealings—it rests on personality.

The Sheldon System gives the first practical, systematic method of training each of these forces ever known to the business man.

Second---By Becoming Better Judges of Human Nature.

The ability to read character—size up—take the mental measure of others, is a necessity. The Sheldon System gives the first practical training in the science of character-reading for business men ever known.

Third---By Becoming Better Logicians.

The ability to analyze the article for sale, for salient selling points, and presenting points or features in a logical way, is made more necessary every day of strenuous A selling talk that sells must be an analytical, logical talk. The Sheldon System only practical instructions on business logic ever known.

Fourth---By Acquiring a Better Knowledge of the Human Mind.

You desire to reach the will of the customer, so it is important to know the steps that will. A salesman must secure attention, arouse interest, create desire and The order-taker simply waits on people who have already resolved to buy. (Are taker?)

The Sheldon System makes plain the laws that govern the workings of the reference to a sale.

Fifth---By Acquiring More Expert Knowledge

On general business subjects—such as system, cost, buying, store management, window dressing, advertising, wholesale, retail, specialty merchandising, on promotion, etc. The Sheldon System is a clearing-house of ideas on these topics, fresh from the most successful experts in the world.

Knowledge is Power—power is worth money. The Sheldon course of instruction on Scientific Salesmanship and Business Building constitutes the first real commercial literature. It is a correspondence course easily mastered, intensely interesting and thoroughly practical. Thousands of the best business men—proprietors, managers, salesmen, clerks, etc.—are enthusiastic students—hundreds of them are in Los Angeles. It positively increases business more than anything ever known. We can prove all this—give us a chance.

Interesting literature sent on request.

ON NORTH BANK OF COLUMBIA.

Jim Hill is Coming to a Portland Terminal.

Double Track to be Built Down from Wallula.

Harriman Leaves New Line High in the Air.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND (Or.) Dec. 3.—According to the Oregonian, the Chicago Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad, with the aid and assistance of that philanthropic gentleman, James J. Hill, is coming down the north bank of the Columbia River into Portland. To enable this feat the better to be accomplished Mr. Hill and his Northern Pacific associates will build a double track down the river bank from Wallula, or it may be that the four lines of steel will extend still farther toward the heart of the Inland Empire. Great tales come with the official announcement by the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul sent out from the New York office, and they are supported by admissions made by Northern Pacific men who should be on the inside, whether they are or not.

J. J. Hill

There is no doubt that the St. Paul road is coming to Portland, for the official announcement made yesterday definitely brings the road as far west as Wallula. This announcement is borne out and verified by the fact that as many as twenty-five surveying parties known to be in the employ of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul are operating between Lolo Pass and Wallula. Tideflat lands have been purchased in Tacoma and Seattle. President A. J. Earling was recently in the district looking over the ground and perfecting his plans. All of these things show conclusively that the road will come.

In all the chain of circumstances up to this time there has been one link missing—the distance between Wallula and Portland. While the other roads were busy buying rights of way, securing options on large tracts of land in and around Portland for terminal grounds, running surveys for bridges and seeking the easiest grades, the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul line has rested dormant, evidently not wishing for tracks or terminals or any property farther west than Tacoma, Seattle and Wallula Junction.

All that is now explained by the story of the double track and trackage agreements planned by the Northern Pacific, and it is said that the information comes in a reasonably direct line from Northern Pacific sources.

AFTER THE LONG HAULS.

The Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul has no great desire, so it is argued, to invade Portland, establish terminals here, or reach out to the Pacific from its present western terminal simply in order to compete against the Northern Pacific and the Oregon Railway and Navigation Company for the local business arising in the wheat belt of the Northwest. The road is not after the local traffic of the Northwest tributary to Portland, but wants the long hauls of Portland and Oregon lumber, and the produce of the Washington mills at Tacoma and Seattle and way points in exchange for the transcontinental freight from the East destined for the Orient. It wants to take back to the East those things that are grown and manufactured in the West, and to bring to the task cars loaded with export goods. This fact is responsible for the lack of interest in the purchase of extensive terminal properties here. This is the reason the trackage agreement was so quietly and so easily made, so the story goes.

If any supposition entered into the scheme it could be taken for granted that President Earling called upon President Hill and discussed the question of an entrance into Portland. At that time President Earling perhaps told Mr. Hill that the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul was headed for the West and that it was the intention to come to Portland. It was perhaps pointed out that the company was not after local business but wanted the through traffic in freight and passengers and that it would perhaps be better for both roads to enter into an agreement than to fight. It was perhaps hinted that if a trackage agreement was made by which the Northern Pacific line could be used from Wallula down the river, no effort would be made to share in the local business of the Northwest, but on the other hand if no such concession was granted, then the St. Paul line would come in on its own track, forcing trackage rights along the north bank according to the provision of the Federal law and also that of the State of Washington. It is known that these results have followed whether there was such a meeting or not between the two presidents.

WALLULA PACIFIC'S PLANS.

The Wallula Pacific, recently incorporated, seemed for a time to hold the key to the situation, but from recent stories it is playing a lone hand in the game of chance. L. Gerlinger, the president of the road, states that he does not know who is behind the road; that he has been given power of attorney by a New York capitalist, behind whom stands some unknown power, and that he has been instructed to buy right of way and lay plans for a line from Wallula to Portland. In pursuance of this plan, Mr. Gerlinger has been surveying a route along the north bank and has finished that part of the job. He is now buying right of way, and already has paid the cash for quite a strip of land. In those places where it is possible by the nature of the ground, he has paralleled the line of the Northern Pacific, but where the mountains encroach upon the water he has brought his grade stakes up to and coincident with those of the Northern road, evidently expecting to force trackage when the construction begins. It is further stated that the road will cross the Columbia River within some miles of Vancouver, and so lead into Portland.

According to the story that is now told of the Wallula Pacific, it was at first incorporated by Harriman influences to block the efforts of the Northern Pacific to come down the river. Later developments have convinced the Harriman people that the Hill forces have the upper hand, and they have, therefore, withdrawn their support from the infant road, leaving it high and dry in the cold air of the inland country. It is known that the O. R. and N. has refused aid to the Wallula Pacific, at one time declining to lend or provide an engine and a few flat cars for preliminary work. This state of affairs would indicate that it is not Harriman money that is buying Wallula Pacific right of way.

School children grow up in America with little or no conception of the marvelous natural attractions of their own country, but their school books are full of descriptions which tell about the more striking features of Europe and other foreign countries. It is a matter of universal knowledge that thousands of public men, both of national and State reputations, throughout the East, have little or no personal knowledge of their own country. Great financiers in the East make innumerable trips to Europe but are as unfamiliar with the western part of their own country as they are with Brazil or Australia.

The work of the coming convention will be to further combined publicity from all the Western States.

This movement, however, is subject to criticism from certain points of view—not in a design to hinder it, but to point out the difficulties that must be surmounted before successful consummation is possible.

In the first place, as stated by those who know in the local Chamber of Commerce, such a movement calls for the outlay of a large amount of money. City organizations and sectional bodies have almost all they can do at present to maintain the burden of home expenses. Any grant of money from the State of California calls for a special act of the Legislature, and if help is to be gotten in this way, the Legislature must be invoked through the formal channels.

For another thing, extraordinary care must be taken that selfish motives do not interfere with the work. This does not necessarily mean grafting by individuals, but it might also include the allowance of sectional prejudices, the predominance of district over district, or even of State over State.

The third and final difficulty which looms up in front of the proposed undertaking is the scarcity of willing spirits who will not only begin the work, but who will keep it up, in cold weather and in warm, through sunshine, rain or snow. In the beginning of such things, the enthusiasm usually runs high. Every man wants to get into the worthy cause—and incidentally hopes to get into public notice. But by and by, when the sheen of novelty has worn off, and the interest of the day turns elsewhere, warm hearts begin to grow cold and the enterprise usually suffers, pines away and sometimes perishes utterly.

For another thing—as one of the best known promoters in the West pointed out yesterday—for years Southern California has been doing this very thing, while other districts have been reaping a sort of surplus benefit from her unremitting effort.

Nevertheless, the idea is a good one, and if grafters are kept out, if sectional differences are buried, if money can be found to carry it on, and if interest is maintained, the idea will be well worthy of support.

Tom Richardson, manager of the Portland (Or.) Commercial Club has devoted a great deal of time to this subject. In discussing it he said:

"At first glance it may seem difficult to get down to a practical basis in handling such a subject as this, but I believe that a good many practical ideas will be presented for consideration. Now, I know a number of cities on the Pacific Coast would join others equally interested in gathering together say thirty of the best-known descriptive writers in America and have them make a tour covering perhaps sixty days, or even ninety, viewing the more attractive features of scenic America. Take a syndicate composed of 100 of the leading newspapers and magazines of the country (one, of course, in each city) who would subscribe for these articles—have a combined fund subscribed by the advertising departments of the different railroads—let the commercial, real estate and financial interests of the different cities and sections as represented through their commercial bodies also contribute and at the same time look out for the comfort and convenience of the correspondents. As a result, it would soon be the proper thing not only to describe but to publish matters of interest relative to American scenes worthy of visit. The natural rivalry between the different newspapers and magazines of the country would create an appetite for knowing more about America, and I can see no reason why it should not be a matter worthy of consideration in the President's message.

"If hundreds of millions of dollars are going out of this country to be spent in Europe, while we have a more advantageous climate and grander scenes, isn't it worth while for the United States government to adopt a plan which will make American scenery an American asset?"

Joe Duncan Gleason, a young Los Angeles artist who made the sketch for the San Pedro breakwater, is now at Manzanillo, Mex., having been employed by the Harbor Commissioners of that country, to make a similar sketch for the reconstruction of the harbor at that place.

In a letter to a friend he says: "This is the trip of my life. As there is no railway over the mountain, we are obliged to make the journey on horseback. Every foot of the way is interesting, intensely so, with high mountains, and deep barancas, through groves of banana and cocoanut trees, rice fields, coffee plantations and sugar cane, with old smoking Colima towering far above all, and always in sight.

"We left the train at Tuxpan and were met by the Mexican whom Col. Smoot had sent to meet us, with horses, pack mules and servants. We made quite a cavalcade. We were soon in rough country, and as the sun rose we witnessed the most beautiful sight it has ever been my fortune to behold. The mists blew up from the cañon, and the clouds hung down over the volcano, and over all were the rosy tints of dawn. We passed many donkey trains laden with salt and giant powder. We passed through forests of tropical trees, with parrots and plumed birds flitting through their branches and screeching at us.

"We had breakfast in a thatched palmleaf hut, with little naked 'kids' staring at us. Mother Eve was not there to 'dress 'em up,' or even make them aprons. Passing through some of the groves we saw real naked brown men climb the tall trees for 'coco de agua.' It is a very refreshing drink, and entirely different from the milk of the dry cocoanut in the States, as this is taken from the green nut."

THE THIEVES' CLUB OVER GOLDFIELD.

Miners' Union Will Not Allow Development of Mine Because It Cannot Steal—Blighting Conditions in Nevada Camp.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

GOLDFIELD (Nev.) Dec. 6.—A special commissioner of The Times has been in Goldfield investigating the preposterous tyranny of unionism—tyranny that is throttling the future of what should become the greatest mining State in America—Nevada, with its hundreds of miles of highly mineralized mountain ranges.

The freeze-out tactics of Standard Oil, the strangle hold of the trusts, the unrelenting grip of a bulldog at the throat of an adversary are child's play compared with the domineering methods of the Miners' Union at Goldfield.

The great Florence mine, which has the largest body of ore in sight of all the Goldfield properties, can't produce a pound of gold. It is absolutely tied up, so far as any production is concerned, because the Miners' Union will not permit the owners to establish a "change room" (an apartment wherein the miners are stripped and searched on coming out) at the mine.

Why won't the Miners' Union agree to a "change room?"

Because the union knows that a change room will curtail opportunities to steal gold.

Why is the union secretly preparing to wage war against the contract system of developing and operating the mines of Goldfield as it attempted to do at Tonopah in the early days of that camp?

Because the union knows that miners working under contract will do a day's work in order to earn a big day's pay, while union labor under the daily wage system can skin through with about six hours' work, call it a shift and draw down $4 a day, the highest wage paid in any mining camp in the United States.

Why does this alarming condition exist in Goldfield?

Because the miners who failed to control the State of Colorado and who were driven out of that State at the point of the bayonet, have made Goldfield their headquarters and are seeking to reëstablish the dangerous tyranny which was overthrown in Colorado by United States regulars.

These are the serious questions that are facing the mine owners of Goldfield today and holding capital and enterprise in check. The mine owners know full well the answers, but with clenched teeth and whispered curses admit that they are powerless.

Where are the boom, the rush, the influx of capital that was expected to come with the winter season and the advent of the railroad? Why are the streets of this bonanza gold camp deserted, in comparison with the conditions at this time a year ago?

The answer is only too plain to those who have their fortunes at stake in the future of Goldfield.

"Our hands are tied," said a man prominent in the management of the Florence mine to The Times representative. "We can only go on quietly developing the property, blocking out our ore and await the time that this union tyranny will be overthrown, for it surely will come and I am afraid that it will mean the importation of nonunion labor, stockades and a repetition of the Colorado troubles. We insist upon a change room and this the union will not listen to. Without a change room we would be robbed of thousands of dollars daily, just as the Reilly lease on the Florence was robbed, many of the miners getting away with $4000 or more in a few days' time. Things look quiet on the surface now but serious trouble is brewing with the union and we are not blind to the dangers."

LEASERS SUPPORTING CAMP.

Were it not for the leasers, Goldfield would be a dead camp today and unless some phenomenal strikes are made in the near future even this nourishment will be taken from the young prodigy. When the camp was sick a few months back the Reilly lease on the Florence came like water to a dying prospector, giving new life to the seekers of gold. Men rushed madly for leases on all properties within range of the big find. A few groups of claims were swamped with leasers, as many as thirty-two having been given on the Atlanta group alone and shafts went down like a colony of ground animals digging for homes.

The mine owners, knowing the serious conditions which threaten the future of the camp, are more than willing to see their property opened up and developed by leasers and are contented with the 25 per cent. of what the leasers take out during the six months that they are allowed to work. But the Reilly lease expired and now the hundreds of other leasers are praying for another strike and wondering why the Florence people are not continuing the rich mining which Reilly opened for them. Ore was taken from that lease worth $40 a pound. There is still ore of that value in the Reilly drifts but the Florence people know that to mine the stuff with union miners and without a change room will be to tolerate robbery of the most brazen kind and this they are not willing to do.

THE STEALING.

In the case of the Reilly lease the miners made no secret of their "high grading," speaking of it as a "snap," and boasting of the big amounts of high grade ore that were daily stolen. Miners were found with leather sacks hung from the shoulders across the abdomen in which ore was to be secreted, but because the bags did not contain any rock at the time of discovery nothing could be done except to discharge them. Later when the general public became aware of the big steals that were being made daily at the Reilly lease and when public opinion denounced the robbery, some of the miners tried to shift the crime on to Reilly himself, and openly stated that he had told them to help themselves as his lease was about to expire and he could only get a certain amount of ore out of the ground anyway. If this statement was not a lie why was it that Reilly managers had to discharge many men daily, getting new ones all the time and keeping the force on the anxious seat?

The writer has seen this wonderful $40-a-pound rock and has talked with miners who admit that they stole it and knows who the assayers are in Goldfield who do "high-grade" work. He has heard the question of the change room discussed by union miners and he is convinced that they as a class will steal whenever they can and all that they can, and will fight any attempt to institute methods which will detect them in their crime.

The change room is used the world over in mines where the ore is of such a character that it will pay the miner to steal it as he works. The room is near the top of the shaft into which the miners go when coming off shift. They are compelled to disrobe, hanging their working clothes on hooks for inspection and then passing through a guarded door to an adjoining room where their street clothes are kept in lockers. The union attempts to put the matter on a high moral plane, claiming that the change room is an insult to their manhood, but any one who has studied the low-browed, shifty-eyed type of the banished Colorado miner can see plainly the insult paid manhood by such a stand on the part of such men.

"I ain't afraid of the change room," said one union miner to the writer. "Let 'em shove us through it and if the watcher don't learn to keep his eyes shut and take his rake-off we'll simply run him out of camp. But while I don't care, there are a lot of these fellows who have identification marks of record on their bodies that they would not want any man to see and the man who saw them would in some cases be very liable to grow cold before morning."

That unionism controls Goldfield today cannot be doubted. Men are run out of camp on the average of one a week by union miners alone. Members of this order tramp the hills in search of "scabs" at work with pick and shovel, hammer and drill, and when "scabs" are found they are cursed, threatened and warned to leave at once. The lowest wage is $4 a day and no merchant, barber, saloonkeeper or other employer can run his own business or dare say that his soul is his own. But while other unions simply retard the growth of Goldfield, the Miners' Union threatens the very life of the camp.

T. W. Woodbridge, with his wife and family, arrived in Goldfield November 6. Woodbridge had incurred the displeasure of the striking miners at Cripple Creek. Upon his arrival he registered at a hotel, making no secret of his presence, and proceeded to look up old Colorado friends and make himself at home in Goldfield. He was waited upon by a committee from the Miners' Union and told that he would be given one day to leave and his life was threatened. He and his family left on the early morning train. This is but one case of the many since the Colorado desperadoes gained control. The daily news sheet of Goldfield explained "editorially" that as the facts on both sides of the case were not known, "he—reserves judgment on the act." When such things happen week in and week out what is the judgment of any American citizen?

NEVADA'S CANCER.

The future of Goldfield as a mining camp does not depend so much upon the permanency of its mines—for there are wonderful indications that big mines are there and that they will prove permanent—as upon the ability of the mine owners of Goldfield to conquer this alarming tyranny of unionism and by forceful operation cut out the growing labor cancer that threatens the whole State of Nevada.

HARD CUSTOMERS.

Contact with these union troublebreeders, particularly with the fugitives from Colorado, is convincing testimony of the dangerous character of the men with whom the mine owners have to deal. The miners in control of the union's order there are a tough lot, hard customers, with bitterest hatred in their hearts for law and order. To see them at work in the drift, plugging away with hammer and drill in a sullen, lazy stupor from which they awaken only at sound of the tread of the shift boss, is to realize how dead is the life and love of life within them.

For most of them history would tell the tale. They are hermits at heart, made so by disappointments which they were not able to overcome. To them the past is a forbidden subject and for them there is no future beyond the struggle for the largest amount of wage for the least amount of exertion, the money to be spent for exhausting, periodical sprees. Most of them see no further than the end of their drill head. Two miners will work side by side in a drift for days and say nothing to each other beyond a discussion of union plottings or a tirade of curses against the trusts and the oriental laborer. Few among them ever read beyond a glimpse at the funny sheet of the Sunday papers and most of them never enter a postoffice to receive or send mail. Water is scarce in Goldfield, but that is not the reason that they seldom bathe their bodies. They like to be dirty and they eat like pigs.

These remarks do not refer to the ignorant foreigners who come to the United States to mine and with no other end in view, for workmen of this class have not been allowed to enter Goldfield. The union knows too well that to admit them would be to break the union's control. The union tyranny in Goldfield is not in the hands of ignorant men, but is exerted with cunning and treachery by miners who have sought trouble with mine owners for long periods of years, since first they gripped a single-jack.

More Pay for Consuls.

"Put none but Americans on guard," is the declaration that guides Secretary Root in his selection of men to fill all consular appointments, no matter how humble the place may be.

The statement has been made at the department that not a single foreigner has been appointed in the consular service since Mr. Root became Secretary of State. Secretary Root thinks that such a policy will benefit the service.

There are a number of small consular agencies where the compensation, in the shape of fees, is so small that but few Americans can be induced to take them. In such cases reputable natives have been appointed, but where vacancies in this class of appointments have recently occurred they have not been filled. Foreigners would naturally take little interest in the development of American trade abroad, but, aside from this, the time of strained relations might come, when Secretary Root believes the loyalty of the foreign consular agent to his native country should not be put to the test.

With the pressure of the American business world behind him demanding proper representation abroad, the Secretary hopes Congress will grant more liberal compensation for this class of needed business representatives, and thu make it possible for him to send competent American officials to fill these places.—[Washington Post.

Closing Out Sale

WE mean just that—closing out! The old Columbia, after twenty years successful business in Los Angeles, is going to shut up shop. We've got to get rid of thousands of dollars' worth of goods by January fifteenth. The Santa Rosa Vineyard Company must open here by February first. Thirty-five days left--just thirty-five! Looks as though we'd "have to hurry," and we want to tell you you'll "have to hurry," for we've slashed prices without regard to values--and this splendid stock of ours is moving mighty fast! It is a solid fact that money never went so far in buying good clothing as it is going here and now--every day at the Columbia. No such values were ever before given in Los Angeles--and it will be a long time before you'll get them again. Come in Monday. Don't wait until later in the week. Get the best of it. Fifty cents at this sale is equal to a dollar elsewhere.

Motormen and Conductors
$18.00 Uniform Suits, Now - - - $13.75

We've just fifty blue uniforms, for Los Angeles Railway motormen and conductors. They come in medium and heavy weights, made according to the specifications of the Los Angeles Railway—built just for that. You can have them now in medium or heavy weights at $13.75 a suit—regularly $18.00. Remember, these suits come in any size—but you'll have to get in Monday, for at this price they'll be snapped up in a hurry.

Substantial White Shirts
Were 75c and $1.00; now Choice 50c

About forty dozen left. White shirts that we have been selling as special values at 75c and $1.00 each. To close out the lot, we've marked them, choice, 50c. You will rarely find a shirt to equal these at a dollar, search where you may. Now they're 50c. Get in Monday. They'll soon be gone. It's a good time to stock up on shirts. Every man needs a good supply—and these will always be good style.

however, that when he himself hard up he tried his exchequer by methods brought him before the bar seems to make it pretty was no infallible system which he won so heavily Carlo, but simply a prod- of good luck. If he really infallible system he would recourse to it again to make his old age—he is now 68— getting it out of other peo- by specious promises that carry out. Associated with him in his get-rich-quick enterprise was a bald-headed old clergyman, the Rev. Vyvyan Henry Moyle, whose plausible tongue, and aspect of venerable piety made him a valuable ally at the shrine of Mammon. He is charged with swindling, too.

Between them they organized the South and Southwest Coast Steam Trawling and Fishing Syndicate. Their fishing fleet consisted of a couple of unseaworthy old steamers, which were purchased for a few hundred dollars apiece, and a few fishing nets. They never caugh any fish, it is alleged but they did catch a lot of credulous investors. As an easy way of making money, infallible systems for breaking the bank at Monte Carlo, or schemes for getting gold out of sea water did not compare with their fishing business. Annual profits of between $1000 and $1500 were promised on every $250 invested in the "syndicate." They had obtained $35,000 only when the police swooped down on them.

Some Dubious Diamonds.

It is an established fact among jewelers that some of the well-known stones generally accepted as genuine diamonds are not such, while about others there is a difference of opinion among the experts themselves. "The fact is," said a Sansom street diamond dealer who makes this statement and who is particularly well informed on the historical and scientific sides of the subject, "that any transparent stone composed entirely of carbon is, in the eyes of the man of science, a diamond. But for the dealer there are many questions of color and quality, and from this point of view a stone composed of pure carbon might be no nearer what he calls a diamond than a lump of coal, which has practically the same composition.

"Many experts refuse, for instance, to put Brazilian stones in the class of true diamonds, though the Braganza, one of the Portuguese crown jewels, is such. That stone weighs 1680 carats, as I remember the figures, and is as big as a hen's egg. Considered as a genuine diamond, it would be worth over $200,000,000 perhaps; but the question is not, after all, important, because it is not likely ever to come upon the market. Indeed, there cannot be said to be a market, in the ordinary sense, for such a stone as that, and if it was ever offered for sale its price would depend on other things than its computable value. Another dubious diamond is one weighing 367 carats, owned by the Rajah of Mattang, Borneo. Such men as have seen this stone and are willing to pass an opinion are divided on the question. The genesis of the stone is also involved in doubt, which is curious, because practically all the large and well-known stones are of known origin and history.

"After all, this matter of genuineness is within certain limits one of dispute among dealers, and it is not of importance to the general public because it concerns only the very large and famous stones which are not for sale. In the ordinary stones of commerce quality varies greatly, but there is no difference of opinion, as to genuineness. It is either a diamond or it is not."—[Philadelphia Record.

FLOATING BIG SECURITIES.

J. P. MORGAN AND KUHN-LOEB SELL $2,800,000,000.

Testimony of Messrs. Schiff and Perkins Reveals Immensity of the Banking Business in Issuing Securities—No Parallel in Other Callings—Figures are Gigantic.

[New York Times:] It is seldom that facts have come to light which bring out greater distinctness and magnitude of the business transacted by the financial community than those which have appeared from the testimony of George W. Perkins of J. P. Morgan & Co., and Jacob H. Schiff of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., in the insurance inquiry. With a frankness that is seldom obtained, except from the witness stand of a great legislative investigation, both men approximated the gross business done by their concerns in the original sale of securities for definite periods. Mr. Schiff saying that Kuhn, Loeb & Co. in the last five years had sold to the market securities aggregating $1,300,000,000, and Mr. Perkins telling the committee that the gross sales of the Morgan firm in the four and a half years which he had been connected with it amounted to the even more stupendous sum of $1,400,000,000.

These figures are so gigantic that it is a little difficult to obtain any basis of comparison, and the fact that the banker in handling millions of securities is dealing with certificates of indebtedness or ownership of great corporations instead of with their tangible assets tends to make one forget that his is just as much a productive business as the business of the man who digs from the ground or manufactures or transports. For illustration, let it be supposed that a railroad desires to build 100 miles of line or to lay out millions of dollars in eliminating curves and grades and bettering its equipments. It has not, presumably, the money in hand and must, therefore, borrow against such of its assets as are not otherwise pledged or create a new stock interest and thus invite more people to become joint owners of its property.

But how is this to be done? The railroad itself has neither the facilities nor the talent—if the recent experience of the Pennsylvania system in trying to market a large part of its own securities may be taken as a criterion—to handle the new issues itself. Moreover, it needs the money which it is proposed to have to spend within a certain definite time, and failing to obtain it when needed, the road must suffer seriously in its extension or improvement projects. So the banker comes in, first as underwriter, guaranteeing with his associates and upon the good name and business reputation of his firm that the railroad shall obtain its needed money within the specified time.

Thus the banker contributes the economic utility of time just as truly as if he undertook to perform the actual physical work within the contract limitations. He is therefore a producer, and the sum of his transactions represents his contribution to the aggregate business of the country.

So it may be fair to make a comparison between the annual "turnover" of such firms as Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and J. P. Morgan & Co., and the gross earnings of some of the country's great corporate enterprises, although it will be impossible to extend this far into the business world, as distinct from the world of finance, for the reason that the great mercantile concerns do not report their earnings in such shape as to make them available. It is obvious, however, that a gross business in the original sale of securities alone, averaging $260,000,000 a year in the case of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., or $311,000,000 a year in the case of J. P. Morgan & Co., is immensely in excess of the business of the great mercantile establishments.

The only earnings that approximate these in magnitude are those of the great railroad systems and some of the large industrial corporations, but in all this list, save only the Standard Oil Company, which does not report its earnings, the billion-and-a-half-dollar United States Steel Corporation is the only one whose gross earnings appear largely in excess of the sales of securities by the banking firms mentioned. The steel corporation earned from sales in 1902, $560,510,088, in 1903, $536,572,871, and in 1904, $444,405,431. Of the railroads, the Pennsylvania heads the list, with gross earnings in 1903 from its 3618 miles of track east of Pittsburgh, amounting to $122,626,419. The Union Pacific in 1903 earned from its 5344 miles of track $54,004,819. The New York Central, standing next to the Pennsylvania among the railroads, earned from 3490 miles of track in 1904, $79,573,305; the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fé, in 1903, earned $66,467,612 gross on 8300 miles of track, while the Baltimore and Ohio, from 3978 miles of track, earned gross $65,200,262; the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul, long known as "the market leader," earned on 6800 miles of track in 1903, $48,688,433. The Chicago and Northwestern earned $53,696,450 gross in 1904 from 7412 miles of track, and James J. Hill's road, the Great Northern, $41,324,649 in 1904 from 5951 miles of track. Among industrials it may be noted that the American Smelting and Refining Company, in the year ended April 30, 1905, reported gross earnings of $10,506,683, and the International Mercantile Marine, in its last fiscal year, gross earnings of $28,846,992.

So the comparison might be continued indefinitely, and the annual business of the Morgan firm and of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. would still stand as expressed by the sales of securities alone far in advance of that of the greatest corporations in the country save only the United States Steel, and, presumably, the Standard Oil. Mr. Schiff testified that the commission charged by his firm on underwritings was uniformly 1 per cent. on the gross amount of securities handled. This represents of course only a portion of the bankers' profit, for to it must be added the profit on that portion of the underwriting which the banking firm retains for itself, and such profits as it subsequently realizes on its personal investment on the securities which it puts out. It must be remembered also that the flotation of securities constitutes only one branch of a great banking business, although of course it is the principal branch. If the foreign exchange business, money lending business, and pure market operations of a great banking house were added in still more surprising results would be apparent, results which when expressed in figures are almost inconceivable from the viewpoint of one who thinks that four, five or eight partners handle the entire executive management, and that the details of the business are intrusted to a force of employés which in many instances would not make up an adequate complement for a good-sized dry goods store.

INNER HARBOR TRAC

The Inner Harbor Tract directly adjoins the property of the $1,500,000 syndicate which is to dredge canals through the tide flats west of Long Beach, making here one of the finest harbors in the world.

INVESTMENT FROM THE TIMES OF AUGUST 26, 190
" * * * While our people have been going crazy over real speculation in beach resorts, it is strange that one seaside has hitherto been almost entirely overlooked, although tha undoubtedly offers greater prospects for rapidly increasing within the next few years, and without any danger of reactio any other seaside section in Southern California—or inland for that matter. It includes not only San Pedro and W but Terminal Island and the upper part of the bay between W ton and Long Beach. There are going to be big things doing abouts within the next couple of years. Yet you can to eligible lots in and around Wilmington Bay for a fraction price asked at places that can never be anything more than resorts."

INNER HARBOR TRACT

DEVELOPMENT Things are already doing between Long Beach and San Pedro. A dredger is already here; operations are about to begin. Realty values, already stimulated by the stupendous project of the Syndicate referred to, are rising rapidly. It is only a question of months when values will have fully doubled.

TRANSPORTATION The Pacific Electric's new double-track line from Long Beach to Wilmington and San Pedro will parallel the Inner Harbor Tract on the South. The Southern Pacific and Salt Lake roads already pass near this property. Three lines thus assure rapid transportation to the tract, making it an ideal spot for investment or a home.

DR. HARRISON & CO.
Specialists for MEN

We make lasting cures in all curable troubles. If you consult us you are sure of getting what you should have through a correct and thoroughly scientific treatment.

We treat and cure Varicocele, Hydrocele, Stricture, Piles, Fistula, Blood Diseases, Contracted Diseases, Loss of Vital Power, Kidney and Bladder Troubles.

OUR MEDICAL JOURNAL Free

Downstairs at our entrance, 202½ South Broadway, you can help yourself to our medical journal. An extensive description of our special work is given. It contains full information, which we cannot publish in our advertisements. If you live out of the city, write for one.

Our Success Unquestioned

By our advanced and improved methods we are making cures in cases that have been unfortunate in consulting incompetent men. Our examinations of cases presented to us are so thorough and searching that errors of diagnosis are never made; thus all our treatments are given understandingly, based on the latest researches of medical science. Kindly remember that CONSULTATION IS ALWAYS FREE.

Varicocele

WE GUARANTEE AN ABSOLUTE AND PERMANENT CURE in every case we treat of varicocele. We will show to any man wishing to be cured a dozen leading business men of Los Angeles that we have cured. This fact, with our GUARANTEE of a cure, ought to convince men that they can be cured of varicocele.

Stricture

This trouble we treat successfully by our improved method, which never fails to bring about a cure. Electricity or electric belts cannot do this trouble any good. When you employ either you throw your money away. Call and let us explain the nature of the trouble, and how you can be permanently cured.

Piles, Fistula, Rupture

DR. HARRISON can and will positively cure every one of these troubles placed under his treatment. If you are suffering from either it costs you nothing to call and talk with him; his methods of treatment fully explained; hundreds have been cured by him after they have suffered for years.

STRICTLY RELIABLE

Kidney and Bladder Trouble

There are few men of 25 years of age and over that have not some trouble with kidneys or bladder. More have some form of bladder trouble, usually taking the form of catarrh, inflammation of the mucous lining of the bladder, or of the neck of the bladder, involving the prostate gland. With men of middle age and older, it often becomes a very serious trouble, even to a fatal termination. Such a condition should not be allowed to remain. A skillful physician should be at once consulted and his advice taken. Without doubt the best and safest man to consult is an educated specialist. Ability and skill and common sense should go hand in hand in treating this class of troubles. If the disease has not taken too firm hold, creating serious complications, nearly every man can get relief. DR. HARRISON & CO. have been very successful in this class of troubles. As proof of their ability to cure these troubles they will glady refer to some of the leading citizens of Los Angeles, whom they have cured of apparently incurable cases. They will be glad to receive anyone wishing information regarding these troubles, and will cheerfully explain the cause, nature and results of such trouble.

Contracted Diseases

By this we mean specific blood poison, urethral inflammation, stricture, local ulcers and swellings. We have warned men against neglect of treatment or unreliable methods of treating this most serious disorder. Patent medicines and treatment by drug clerks are decidedly dangerous experiments, and should under no circumstances be resorted to. The cheapest and best course is to come directly to us, as we have the ability and experience necessary to do for each case exactly the right thing at the right time. You thus avoid dangerous complications, which might through poor treatment become a lasting annoyance and oftentimes assuming a dangerous character. Every patient under our care is thoroughly cured before he is discharged. All who come to us receive courteous treatment. Consultation and examination free.

We are both graduates of the best colleges in the United States and have registered and complied with every letter of California law. Any man doubting the above can see our diplomas and state, county and city certificates at our office.

MT. LOWE FIRE.

d is cold and the forest rangers made a calm and careful survey. say only one or two hundred were burned over. Some say should read two or three thousand. It is probable that both of estimates are widely erroneous, that the burned area will range where near a thousand acres.

worst damage done, aside from burning of the buildings and the to the great cable, was apparin Las Flores Cañon, which now ed from end to end.

THEORY OF ORIGIN.

did it start?" was the question that arose to the lips of hundreds watched the great volume of that shot up from the flames. origin of the fire is not definitely and may never be. A peculiar is that fire broke out in two almost simultaneously, at the Echo Mountain and also clear at the bottom. The first theory that the wind blew down the crematory about 6:30 o'clock morning, and that the gale knocked the crematory over carried sparks from there clear bottom of the mountain.

second theory is that the gale blew at daylight knocked over branches which fell across the heavy power wires that the mountain side, and thus the wires to cross or to ground. of sizzling light was seen along the mountain side, bright thread. Then flames up at the top of the mountain wire, and also at the bottom.

BREAK CHECKS FLAMES.

last evening some of the men came down from the top of the said the flames were all un-, but the wind was at a gale and there was constant from the sparks. The forest worked like fiends, and it was the hardest sort of work that observatory was saved. The and others saw the flames toward the observatory, and axes they cut a wide swath chaparral. The flames came on this firebreak and there ing a big force of workbegan working on the cable. was not badly damaged. used on the mountain-top destroyed. The machinery power-house is valued at per-messages were sent to the headquarters of the Pacific Electric in Los Angeles early in the morning and within an hour or two the company had perhaps 200 men at the foot of the mountain. Soon they had made the toilsome ascent up the mountain sides and then began their battle with the flames.

The Rubio Cañon Water Company and the Las Flores Water Company also got out all the men they could, and three or four hundred men were engaged in fighting the fire. The strong wind, which started at daybreak, made the fight a hard one.

HARD TO GET MEN.

It was hard to get men. The water companies raked and scraped together all the gardeners and men of all work that they could find in Altadena. For the water companies the fight meant much. As far as is known the Rubio Water Company, which draws its supply principally down Rubio cañon, was unharmed. The flames did not enter Rubio at all, and only touched its edge once.

But it may prove that the Las Flores Company has been hit a hard blow. The worst of the fire was in Las Flores cañon, and it may be found that the tunnels and pipes of this company have been badly damaged. Last year a fire did much damage in Las Flores cañon, and the territory not burned over then was within the fire zone yesterday.

F. S. Allen, an architect, who lives in Altadena and is secretary of the Rubio Water Company, said that his company was untouched. Mr. Allen says the reports of the fire have been greatly exaggerated. He avers that the total loss won't be over $10,000 or $15,000, and that not more than 150 acres have been burned over. Others who were on the mountain top all day say that both the area and damage are much greater. One of the Pacific-Electric men said the loss might aggregate $300,000.

SCHINDLER'S AUTO DASH.

One of the features of the day was the race that General Manager Schindler of the Pacific-Electric Company made to get to the scene of the fire. In an automobile, Mr. Schindler ran clear up the steep grade to a point near the mouth of Las Flores Cañon, over a 15 per cent. grade in places.

The pet alligator that has been seen by many on Echo Mountain, was roasted to death. He lay on the ground with his toes turned to the smoky sky.

Chickens and pigeons also were burned to death. A boy caught a young rabbit which was too dazed to try to escape.

Aside from the tremendous volume of smoke which shot up in great puffs, the fire was devoid of spectacularity from the valley below, and from Pasadena. The bright glare of the flames could only be seen occasionally.

During the morning hours a noise as of thunder came from the mountaintop. Some thought it was thunder, and it is believed that there was one loud clap of heaven's artillery. The other thunderous sounds came from the dynamite explosions started by the rangers in their efforts to stop the flames, and there also was a louder cannonading that came from mighty rocks rolling down the precipitous sides of Echo Mountain.

NO INJURIES REPORTED.

So far as could be learned last evening no one was injured and no one was in serious danger. At all times it was possible for men to make their way up and down the mountain sides. Probably, though, after all has settled down will be learned stories of danger and of heroism on the part of rangers and the other men who fought desperately to stop the flames before they got beyond control.

The Pacific-Electric Company will have its incline railway in shape as soon as possible, probably in a day or two, if the cable is not too badly damaged.

At dark last night, F. S. Allen, A. McNally and other leading residents of Altadena asserted that the damage will not be as great as supposed by many. They say that most of the damage is to the buildings and to the railway company. "I have just come from the mountain," said Mr. McNally, "and I believe that the Las Flores water system—that is, its pipes and tunnels—are not damaged. There will be water right along. Of course the water may be dirty for a while."

DAMAGE TO RAILWAY.

"The damage to our property will range from $10,000 to $20,000," said General Manager A. D. Schindler, of the Pacific Electric, on his return late last evening from the fire.

"As far as I was able to ascertain today, our electrical machinery is not badly injured, the principal loss being in the destruction of the car barns and the buildings at the top of the incline. If the generators are not badly injured, as I have hopes, because of the rapidity with which the fire passed, the loss will range about $10,000. If the machinery proves to be a total loss the figure may reach $20,000, but will not exceed that.

"Work of reconstruction will begin at once, and by the first of the year we will have the line in operation again. We could resume even earlier than that, but traffic to the mountain is light just now, and we shall give the machinery a thorough overhauling.

"I received the alarm early in the morning from Pasadena, and left about noon for the scene of the fire, where we had congregated a large force of men to fight the flames and protect our property. It was a hard climb up from Altadena, the ascent from Rubio Cañon especially.

"At the same time that the upper trestle of the incline burned out, the supports of the sheaves over which the cable ran to the hoisting drum, were burned away, allowing them to fall, and the heat softening the cable caused it to stretch and part of its own weight and go writhing down to the bottom like a huge snake.

"While the buildings at Echo Mountain were burned, there was practically no damage done to the track, save right at the car barn, and on the incline, over the burned portion of the trestle, where the rails dropped."

LONG BEACH.

BIGGER BUILDING FOR BANK.

LONG BEACH, Dec. 9.—Announcement was made by President James B. Heartwell of the First National Bank this morning that the bank and the Citizens' Saving Bank had secured 113 feet frontage on Pine avenue, adjoining the bank building and extending north to the alley, making their holdings 150x75 feet. Upon this will be erected a five-story brick block for which plans have been drawn. The new purchase was made from W. M. Craig and Ryder Bros. of Pasadena. The frame buildings now occupying it will be moved or razed in time for work on the new structure to begin February 1. The present three-story bank building will have necessary changes made to conform to the new addition. The two banks will occupy part of the corner. The upper floors will be devoted to office suites, entrance to them being on Pine avenue. The building will be steam-heated and equipped with two elevators. The price paid was not stated, but was over $100,000. The First National Bank began business in Long Beach June 26, 1900, with a capital stock of $25,000. The first statement issued showed deposits of $7000. Today its capital stock is $100,000 surplus, $60,000, and resources $1,150,000. The Citizens' Savings Bank began business February 1, 1901, and has resources of over $600,000.

Statements in Utterance are Not Official.

Stern and swift is the rebuke that e California Fruit Growers' Exchange has visited upon R. J. Grassly, agent at Des Moines, Iowa, whose toundingly asinine method of marting oranges, as revealed in a recent cular to the trade, has caused the change's competitors to chortle in e.

In no uncertain tones the management of the exchange tells Grassly that was a "fool" circular; he is rounded sharply for statements as to the ning "liberal" crop of navels, and wer range of prices" and other fool ngs.

n other words, Grassly has been anked with a large, flat hand, as the lowing letter addressed to him and ned by B. A. Woodford, manager the exchange, attests:

A circular letter of yours under te of November 24 is being passed und here in California by our comitors; and, for us to say that this is ool circular, is expressing our opin- mildly.

We have a communication from ott at Porterville with reference to letter, in which he states that he nnot imagine where you got your as as to the Tulare county business your statements from him, as he s he never wrote you in the world. I may say that your statement t we had orders for 700 cars of fruit be shipped not later than the 12th of vember, is entirely without any ndation, the true situation being t we had less than 250 orders in d for shipment up to November 17. You also state in this circular that shipments this season up to date vember 24) were 385 cars. As a ter of fact our shipments this sea- up to and including November 24 e 782 cars.

do not want to hamper your opions by saying to you that you t issue no circular to the trade hout submitting it to this office for roval, but unless you can stick e closely to the truth than you have s in this circular of the 24th (prod the copy that is shown up here ot a forgery) we shall certainly e to make such a rule in your case. We await with interest your explaon in this matter, and expect that will so conduct yourself in the ter of issuing these circulars from on, that there will be no room for cism of your actions from this ferring to the report that Grassly in receipt of $7500 a year for his ices as agent, F. Q. Story, presi- of the exchange, declared that it untrue.

e gets paid $125 a month," said Mr. y, "or it may be possible that he ves $150, but absolutely no more the latter figure."

. Story took occasion to say that circular sent out by Grassly was ne "fool" order. He called attenthough, to the fact that such statements, coming from an agent, and without the authority of the head office, could have no effect on the price at which fruit would be sold.

In a statement to exchanges and associations, the head office has sent out a circular showing that Grassly sold last season in the Des Moines district 144 carloads of citrus fruits, at an average of $639.11 a car net f.o.b. California, every shipment included, while the exchange as a whole sold 14,219 cars at an average of $501.39 a car net f.o.b. California, every shipment included.

Manager Woodford states that the exchange does not pretend to sell all of its fruit f.o.b. California, but will sell f.o.b. usual terms, or for cash California acceptance, or delivered, or in any way to get the most money.

SANTA ANA.

SCORES RUN HIGH.

SANTA ANA, Dec. 9.—Co. L's official target practice scores, returned today to the brigade headquarters, contain some excellent records. Capt. L. L. Vestal leads the company with a score of 128 points, entitling him to a gold stripe and giving him the rifleman class qualification. This high score was made with 47 points at 200 yards, 42 points at 300 and 39 points at 500 yards. Quartermaster-Sergeant Thompson, with a score of 121, secures a silver stripe and eight others, Sergt. Worden and Privates C. C. Cozad, Copelin, Griset, Heil, McBride, Slocum and W. W. Wilson, win bronze stripes.

For the whole company the summary of scores is: Riflemen, 2; marksmen, 8; first class, 4; second class, 7; third class, 18; fourth class, 13.

SANTA ANA JOTTINGS.

Tryouts were held last night at the High School assembly hall to select speakers for the coming debate wit Long Beach on the question, "Resolved, that the English form of government is more representative than that of the United States." Lemuel Robinson won first place, with Miss Dora Saunby second. The alternates were Philip Dodson and Retta Deck. The date of debate with Long Beach has not yet been set.

Maggie Apablasa of Anaheim filed suit today for divorce from Juan V. Apablasa.

A football game scheduled for today between Santa Ana High School and Throop Polytechnic Institute of Pasadena was called off by Throop. Some of the players of the latter school were unable to be in the game and the manager was unwilling to play unless his full team could be ou'

Mark Twain's Philosophy.

From the days when, in "Innocents Abroad," Mark Twain first broke upon a public which has never since failed him, Mark Twain has retained the gift which he acquired in California and Nevada, which he took to himself and made part of himself. The sound, the broad and the kindly philosophy which lay behind it, has been long in finding recognition, but it has found it at last. Mark Twain, the philosopher, was always behind Mark Twain, the jester, but it was not until the humorist dropped further into the background and the philosopher came more to the front that the world has commenced to recognize this fact and to rate him as one of America's great of human nature and of the life of the American people remain with us for many y [Seattle Post-Intelligencer

Santa Ana—The Substantial

FOR THE HOMESEEKER

If you are looking for a place to make your home, why not investigate the claims of Santa Ana?

Santa Ana is a city of homes, and has a population of 8000 industrious and law-abiding citizens. If you have a family of children to raise and educate, you can not fail to be impressed with the ideal conditions to be found here. School facilities are unsurpassed, with fully accredited public schools from the kindergarten to the high school. There are five large grammar schools conveniently located, and the high school, with all branches of work accredited at the State University, has an enrollment of 825 students.

Santa Ana has no saloons. On the other hand, it boasts of flourishing church congregations of nearly every denomination, each supplied with its house of worship.

Work is plenty—for the mechanic, the farmer, the day laborer. Not only can the head of the family find employment, but in times of harvest and fruit packing there is always demand for more workers than can be obtained. Hundreds of Santa Ana boys and girls make enough money in their school vacations to pay their expenses for the year.

Think it over, if you are a homeseeker. GOOD SCHOOLS, NO SALOONS, ACTIVE CHURCHES, PLENTY OF WORK, FLOURISHING CITY, REASONABLY-PRICED HOMES. These are Santa Ana's claims for your making your home within her boundaries.

FOR THE INVESTOR

Men whose opinion is worth while will agree in saying that there is no safer or more remunerative investment than to buy real estate in a growing locality.

This opportunity for investment is offered in Santa Ana and Orange County realty today.

Prices of real estate in Santa Ana and its environs are primarily based on actual worth. The value of a ranch is rigidly computed on its ability to give the investor a just return upon his investment. Business property is rated according to the income which can be derived from it. Real estate in Santa Ana is not manipulated by wildcat speculators, nor is it subject to disastrous "boom" features. Property is conservatively priced, and with the steady and sure increase in values is absolutely certain to bring the buyer a big advance in a short time.

If you are looking for a safe and sane place to invest your money in small or large amounts, come to Santa Ana and find out actual conditions for yourself. Learn for yourself that Santa Ana is a thriving business city. See the evidences of substantial citizenship in the public improvements. Visit the surrounding country and be assured by personal investigation that the growth of Santa Ana is backed by the richest farming country in California. Every reason for Santa Ana's substantiality can be seen in the city itself and in its environs.

On last Wednesday, November 22, Santa Ana, "THE SUBSTANTIAL," held open house for 20,000 visitors, who were surprised and delighted with the magnificent showing made in the "Parade of Products." Every kind of fruit, grain, vegetable, nut or miscellaneous product shown in the long array of floats that day can be found in Santa Ana or its immediate vicinity at any time.
Visit Santa Ana any day, and if there is a serious purpose in your coming any reliable real estate man will show you what Santa Ana can do to prove its claim as "THE SUBSTANTIAL."

BUSTLING BEAVER.

Beaver has a population of 2000, is well supplied with mercantile establishments and every street is a boulevard in width, bordered by large shade trees that are watered by the little streams of water that flow down the gutters.

This feature of Utah cities is worthy of extensive imitation. The plan of the Mormon founders of all Southern Utah towns was to have plenty of room—not over four lots to the block, that every resident might have room for fruit and garden and a corner lot.

Very wide streets, with rows of shade trees and gutters, kept clean and cool by streams of clear cool water, form a picture of beauty and restfulness not to be met with elsewhere. Nearly all the homes in this little city might pass for originals of "The Old Homestead."

Engaging a team and services of its owner for the trip, we fared forth to the south, ascending by an easy grade the western range of hills that form one side of the splendid Parowan Valley; crossing which at its northern end and climbing the eastern slope brought us to the Sevier River at Orton a stage station, from which a drive of twelve miles landed us in Panguitch the county seat of Garfield county.

Panguitch is at the junction of the Sevier River and Panguitch Creek. This town is a place of about 1000 population, has good stores, many substantial brick residences and a large modern brick school building that would be creditable to any city.

The Panguitch Creek, which heads at Panguitch Lake, is noted for its trout, ranging from one to four pounds in weight. The strings brought in indicate that the fish always must be hungry.

Making an early start we followed the course of the Sevier River some miles, then turning eastward ascended the high plateau, which gives rise to the east fork of the Sevier River and marks the beginning of the pine forests of this section, also the northwestern edge of the vast coal and oil fields that underlie the red sandstone, which, beginning here, extends with few breaks to the plateau of the Grand Cañon region.

The cañons are colored in all the shades of red, pink, yellow, brown and purple with large white rock cappings supported on the black belts of coal that promise an abundant supply to all regions west when contemplated railroads are completed.

On the plateau are forests of splendid pine and cedar, covering large areas; the cañon bottoms show a more varied growth of both the evergreen and deciduous trees, and rising through and over the masses of green are the spires, domes, walls, turrets and roofs of sandstone carved into the semblance of cities, castles and even human and animal forms, by the action of wind and water.

CHARMING VIEWS.

From this the beginning of the rocks of the Carboniferous period to Tropic, next on the route, the landscape presents an ever-changing and charming succession of views and the thirty-five mile drive seemed all too short when at last we reached the cheerful residence of Mr. and Mrs. Ohlstrom, our hosts in Tropic.

This little village nestles in the upper valley of and at the source of the Paria River. Georgetown, Cannonville and Henrieville are villages within a few miles distance along the same stream, all seeming thrifty and contented. General farming, sheep and cattle raising are the industries followed. An abundance of fine fruit is easily raised in this valley, many apple trees being literally loaded at the time of our visit.

From Tropic to Escalante, our next stage of about thirty miles, we drove over a plateau and through splendid stretches of pine forests, and passed over coal beds of from two to twenty feet in thickness, reaching Escalante in the evening and securing comfortable accomodations at the Blake home, in care of Mrs. Heaps.

Escalante is the center of a large grazing country, has a population of about seven hundred, with comfortable homes, fine stores and school buildings, new town hall and a future of steady growth assured.

There are some Moqui cliff dwellings in a cañon about three miles south and a coal mine that is being worked. Securing saddle horses, we set out to the southeast, toward the Colorado. After crossing the Escalante Creek, a very considerable stream at this point, we encountered the first of the Paleozoic rocks in a fine grained shale of the upper Devonian era that carries a large percentage of oil seepages occurring lower down on this formation that cover acres.

Our mission to this section was to definitely determine the nature of the formation and extent of the field, from its eastern edge westward to the line of the Salt Lake Railroad.

Taking the clearly defined ledges of the upper Devonian and Subcarboniferous formation as our guide, we rode westerly through this wonderland down to the Escalante Creek at our crossing place, 300 feet in width up past its western wall, sculptured with the strange symbols and pictures of a long forgotten race, over the Spencer flats, an immense sandstone plateau with its petrified trees and billions of spheroidal petrifactions, called in the vernacular of the ranges "marbles" of sizes from one-quarter to three inches in diameter, verily the small boy's paradise.

Down through the piñons and cedars to Escalante town we made a brief visit to hospitable friends there, thence over the towering Table Cliff Plateau through thousands of acres of mast-like pines, a night's rest at a ranch house where the cheery welcome we always met dispelled the chill of these high altitudes even more effectually than the roaring fire of pitch pine knots.

A bounteous supper and dreamless night's rest under the heavy woolen blankets, a hearty breakfast, a ride over the plateau through an atmosphere that made one enjoy living, through flocks of sage hens the size of small turkeys, which gazed at us unafraid, and so on down to Panguitch—open hearths and a supper of trout flanked by all the fruits and vegetables of the region.

INTO KANAB COUNTRY.

Leaving this town early on the following morning, we rode southerly to the village of Hatch, once almost destroyed by a sudden rise of Asay Creek, a good sized feeder of the Sevier River, but now substantially rebuilt on higher ground; thence up on the Markagunt plateau, where at the watershed one may stand and cast a stone north into the Sevier and south into the Virgin River; thence down a beautiful valley to Seamen's ranch, a stop for the night, and on down into the Kanab Cañon, whose alternating bastions of dolomite lime and white and red sandstone made a scene never to be forgotten, and then finding again the formation of the Devonian and Subcarboniferous periods with the coal and oil that underlie them, finally landing in Kanab, the county seat of Kane county, a gem of the foothills.

With the McAllister Hotel as headquarters, we made daily trips over the valleys and hills that in the near future are destined to produce much wealth from the mines, agriculture and live stock.

Kanab has a population of one thousand or more with the fine homes and schools common to all the Mormon settlements, wide tree-bordered streets, with running water in the gutters, loaded orchards and bounteous alfalfa, grain, and vegetable crops.

This town and the neighboring town of Fredonia, seven miles to the southward, are the centers of a large sheep and cattle industry that is growing steadily, owing to the mild winter climate and the abundant supply of water and pasturage.

Southeast and east of these towns lies Buckskin Mountain, about fifty miles in length, of great scenic beauty covered with splendid forests, recently converted into a national park by the United States government.

BIG GAME PRESERVES.

The buffaloes to form part of the game preserve arrived recently, and a further supply of 250 are on the way. Deer are plentiful, and venison is a frequent dish at Kanab and Fredonia.

The country eastward from Kanab along the Vermillion cliffs to the Paria River presents perhaps the finest profile of the Carboniferous period west of the Appalachians. The shales and coal measures extend westward from the Colorado to just west of Kanab without a fault, the flexure resulting from the upward pressure of the Archaean rocks being merely undulations, presenting no faults till the Toroweap fault west of Kanab is reached. This is 700 feet in height. The next fault to the west being the Hurricane of 1800 feet.

It is in the level section east of Kanab toward the Paria River that several groups of Los Angeles and Pasadena investors have located some thousands of acres of the best oil lands, covering the carboniferous formation. These people are engaged in preparing plans for the development of their holdings, with prospects of success, judging from numerous croppings and seepages, east, west and south, of their locations.

Our final trip up the Paria River to Tropic, thence once more to Panguitch, Beaver, and the railroad was done in good time, the driver, Thomas B. Davis, of Beaver, covering nearly six hundred miles in four weeks without accident or material delay.

In review this section might well be called the Pennsylvania of the West. Even the most superficial study of the geology and croppings will convince the initiated that since the building of the Salt Lake line only a short line to the eastward is necessary to open a region from which millions of dollars can be taken in coal, minerals, fruits, grain, oil and live stock.

The inhabitants of the region are industrious, sober, intelligent, progressive and hospitable, having fine homes and schools, and anxious to welcome desirable settlers.

Hundreds of Sample
. . Dressed Dolls . .
GOING SO FAST---YOU MUST HURRY

Such a doll sale! We never imagined there were so many doll buyers in Los Angeles. Every little girl likes the Hale dolls best of all.

No wonder. They're dressed so cutely that even the older folks are delighted. And what a variety! Big ones, little ones, dressed in all sorts of fashions. They're samples from one of the big doll houses and there are hardly any two alike. It's because prices are so low that they are going so fast. In most cases, the dressed dolls are fully one-third below the regular. Still, bring the children whether you mean to buy or not. We want every little girl in Southern California to see the Hale dolls.

Richest Furs Way Below Value

An Important Sale on Monday

Another big attraction at Hale's, Monday, will be this sale of furs. There are so many different styles we can only hint at a few of them. Prices in all cases are exceptionally low. We can state with confidence that no fur prices you will find in Los Angeles are so favorable.

FUR BOAS, $3.50—made of Stone marten, rich and thick, 36 inches long, three tails; a bargain at the price.

Scarf of mink with mink head ornamented at neck and mink tails at the bottom, lined with plain satin; a rare bargain at $6.

Beautiful scarfs of mink, sable and Siberian squirrel; they vary in length from 36 inches to 54 inches; lined with finest quality of satin with or without tails. Prices range from $7.50 up. Every one worth fully 50 per cent more than price asked.

U.S.C. WINS FROM POMONA.

Fastest Football Played on Local Gridiron.

Good Feeling Manifested by Both Elevens.

Hard but Clean Ball Results In Close Score.

U.S.C. defeated Pomona, 6 to 4, yesterday afternoon at Fiesta Park, in the fastest game of football ever played on a local gridiron.

A college crowd saw the game, and there were perhaps not a dozen people in the crowd who are not attending, or have not attended, either of the two schools.

Streamers of cardinal and gold bunting adorned the crowded U.S.C. section of the bleachers and the wave of bright color was pleasing. Stationed in front of the rows of bright-faced eager Methodists was an orchestra that attempted to play. The music of the human voices smothered the feeble tones of the band and the palm was given to the yellers, who opened out with a lung power that would have made a dozen double bass horns look small.

From the first the Methodists were confident, and showed their enthusiasm as the players came on the field by bursting into song. Everybody took part, and as the harsh slogan of the 'varsity floated over the field, all knew the local contingent had wiped out forever the old feud with Pomona.

Pomona, 300 strong, occupied the north side of the grand stand. Scores of pretty girls decorated the crowded benches. Blue and white bunting was in evidence everywhere throughout the section. The crowd was essentially Pomona's best.

The Claremonters sang sweetly and there was melody even in the yelling as the iron-lunged men gave place to the co-eds who told in song just what the gridiron warriors, from the Congregational College, intended to do.

On time Pomona kicked to Ochoa of U.S.C. For a brief second the ball fell among the Methodists. The fumble was recovered and the teams braced for the first down.

As the signals were called and the intent of the determined players was witnessed, the grand stand burst into a long wave of color in which the blue and white of Pomona showed strongly against the brighter colors of the local college.

At once the best of spirit was manifested, and both sides endeavored to cheer for the heroes of the other as gains were made on the gridiron below.

Ochoa, the idol of the Methodists, earned plaudits by running the ball back often for 25 yards through a crowded field. Jack White, the plucky little halfback, was cheered to the echo. Every man played as he had never played before, and the crowd saw a spectacular contest.

Early in the game the superior strength of the Methodist line was manifest. Pomona opened slowly, but certainly, and showed the effect of the severe battering administered by the U.S.C. backs. Burek, for U.S.C., repeatedly hit the blue and white line for distance, and the ball was rushed down to the Pomona 5-yard line before the middle of the first half.

After losing a chance to score by fumbling, the Methodists again worked the leather into easy striking distance of the Pomona goal, and Burek, bucking like a wild bronco, went over the line for the first touchdown. Elliot kicked a difficult goal. Score: U.S.C., 6; Pomona, 0.

The second half, though not quite as spectacular as the first, showed the dogged determination of both elevens. Repeatedly each team was compelled to kick. Always the Methodists were obliged to guard against the booting propensities of Metcalf, who, after trying several times for a field goal, was successful when only a few seconds remained for play.

The field goal ended the chances of Pomona's scoring, and on the kick-off U.S.C. gained a distinct advantage, and the blue and white goal was again in danger when time was called.

After the contest the gridiron was filled with the Methodist rooters, who yelled themselves hoarse, cheering their successful team.

There was enough good playing on both sides to send every one home happy, U.S.C. glad that a touchdown had earned them a victory, and Pomona happy that a field goal had given them their meed of praise.

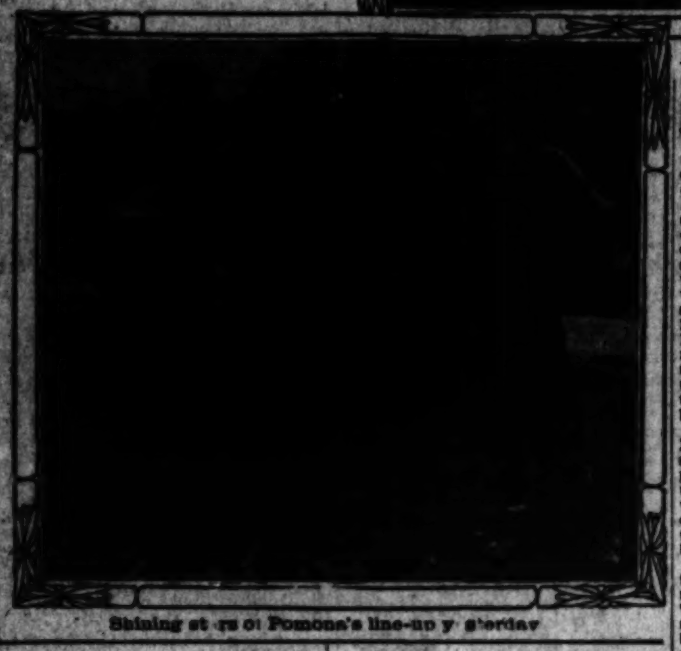
GAME IN DEAIL.

PLAY IN FIRST HALF.

U.S.C. won the toss and took the south goal. Wharton kicked off to Burek, who fumbled but recovered. Two tries in the line got nothing, and Ochoa punted 25 to Wharton. Spurgeon got 1, but Moorman failed, and Wharton attempted a goal from the 40-yard line. The ball went short and Ochoa ran it in 5. Ochoa failed twice and punted in 40 to Wharton, who ran in 15. Chritton got the ball on a fumble, and Ochoa punted another 40. After two short gains Wharton kicked 45 to Best, who ran in 10. White and Ochoa each got 2, and then Smith got the ball on a fumble. Wharton punted 45 to Ochoa. White made 2, Ochoa 3, White 2 and 1, and Burek, pulled by the whole team, got 15. Ochoa made 1, White and Burek 2 each. Valle went in for Spurgeon.

Ochoa made 1 and 2, Burek 2, White 4, Ochoa 2, Burek 2 and 4, and then Burek went over for a touchdown. All these plays were plunges in the line. Elliott kicked goal. Score, U.S.C., 6; Pomona, 0.

Ochoa kicked off to Baird, who ran in 15. Pomona could not gain and Wharton punted 40 to Ochoa, who made a pretty run of 25 yards, being finally tackled by Wharton himself. Ochoa made 4, Burek 1, White 2, Burek helped by Chritton, 2 and 4. U.S.C. was off-side and lost 5. Ochoa tried a goal from the 31-yard line, but the ball went very wild. Wharton punted 30 from the 25-yard line. On the next play Ochoa fumbled and Pomona got it. Wharton got away from 10 outside his right end. Moorman made 3, Chisholm 1 twice, Vail 3, Baird hurdled for 2. Pomona fumbled and Haigler got the ball. White made 4 and 2, Ochoa 1 and Burek 2. Best got off a long quarter-back kick which Wharton gathered in. Two exchanges of punts ended the half, during which U.S.C. lost another 5 yards for off-side.



Shining stars of Pomona's line-up yesterday

THE SECOND HALF.

Ochoa kicked off short to Wharton, who ran the ball in 20. Baird got 2, Chisholm 5 by a fine hurdle, Moorman from position 2, Chisholm 1, but Moorman failed to make distance, and U.S.C. got the ball on Pomona's 50-yard line. Boeckman and Burek failed to gain, and Ochoa made a poor 20-yard kick. Pomona lost 5 yards on two mixed-up affairs, and Wharton punted 25. U.S.C. lost the ball on downs. Pomona failed also, and on the third down the pass to Wharton was poor. He tried to run with the ball and almost made up the distance, but U.S.C. [illegible] Ochoa and White failed to gain, and Elliott punted outside at [illegible]-yard line. Baird and Moorman failed, and Wharton punted 25. On the first play Pomona got the ball on a fumble. Chisholm and Baird could do nothing, and Wharton punted 40. There was a mix-up on the catch, and White was sent out for slugging. Charles Haigler took his place. Elliott punted 40, and Pomona lost 15 more for holding. Valle made up 5 of it, and Wharton punted 40 to Best.

Two more exchanges of punts resulted in a slight gain for Pomona, as Wharton's last punt got past the U.S.C. backs. Burek got 2 on a split buck, Haigler 3 on a hurdle, Ochoa 2, Chritton 1, Haigler hurdled for 3, and Ochoa got 2. U.S.C.'s progress was stopped by a fumble. Miller went in for Lane.

Elliott punted 40. Valle got 1, Moorman 3, Chisholm 3, Valle 1, Chisholm 3, but on the next try Pomona lost the ball on downs. Cass went in for Broeckman. Elliott punted 30. Chisholm got away around his right end for 20 on a fake kick. Valle and Baird could not make enough, and Wharton punted 40 to Best, who got it back 15. Bailey went in for Nicholson. Cass made 2, and then Moorman gathered the leather on a fumble. Sourwine went in for Halliday. Chisholm made 2 and Moorman 1, and then Metcalf tried a goal from the 45-yard line. The ball went short and Ochoa downed it at the 15-yard line. Elliott punted 40 and Wharton ran in 10. A bad pass for a kick lost Pomona 15, and Wharton punted 40. Cass got 3 and 2. Miller 2 and 2.

Pomona got the ball on a fumble. Metcalf tried a goal from the 35-yard line, and the ball went wide to the left. Elliott punted from behind his goal line to his 40-yard line. Baird made 5 on a way-out play. Valle got 2 and Baird 3. Moorman made 1 and 1, and then with ball on the 35-yard line, Metcalf kicked a perfect goal.

Ochoa kicked off to Pomona's 20-yard line, and after Wharton had punted 25, time was called.

WILL GATHER IN NEW YORK.

Major and Minor Leagues to Hold Meetings.

Chance to Growl Again Over Bones of Contention.

Minors to Lay Draft Proposal Before Majors.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] New York will be the capital of the baseball world next week, for not only will the National League magnates get together and make a little history, but a special meeting of the National Association of Minor Leagues has been set for Monday. The national commission will have a session, and club owners of the Eastern League will hold their annual meeting.

It will be a notable gathering of baseball men, and doubtless many of the old bones of contention between the majors and minors will be gnawed over once more. The principal topic of discussion will be the draft question. Minor league club owners are still insisting on legislation, providing for the drafting of only one man from each class, a minor league club and a new schedule of draft prices. Negotiations to this end were badly bungled last winter, and Howard Griffiths, the Jersey City baseball man, was blamed for his refusal to accept a compromise. His arbitrary action in refusing to meet the majors half way was one of the causes that split the minors into two factions, one led by Griffiths and the other by Pat Powers. Griffiths' adherents seem to be in the majority.

The special meeting will be held Monday for the purpose of formulating a proposition for new draft rules. This proposition will be laid before the National League later in the week, and will be put up to the American League during the annual meeting to be held in this city at a time not yet announced by President Johnson.

In the interval between the two meetings the minor association annual meeting will be held at San Francisco. The minors appear to think that conditions are now favorable to their plans, but they may encounter more stubborn opposition than ever from the American League on account of enmity between Johnson and Griffiths. They will not receive a final answer until February, as the American League meeting will not take place until late in that month.

WHAT THE MINORS WANT.

The National League may agree to the minors' demands, as it did last year, the club owners knowing full well at the time that the American League would block legislation, for the Johnson organization had already declared its intentions. In that way the National League gained the good will of the minor league magnates without binding the organization in any way, as the American League's consent was necessary to make the proposition a baseball law.

Briefly stated, the minors ask for a one-man draft from class A leagues, $1500 to be paid for each player thus secured. At present two men can be drafted for $750 apiece. The American League proposed a compromise, offering to raise the draft price to $1200 per man, two players to be drafted from each club.

BICYCLISTS IN LAST STAGE.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—More than 400 miles behind the record established by Miller and Waller six years ago, the nine teams of bicyclists who have been whirling around the saucer-shaped track at Madison Square Garden since last Sunday at midnight were today plugging along on the last stage of their long journey. Even at this late time, when more than 2000 miles have been covered, only three-tenths of a mile separated the leaders from Logan and Downey, the seventh team; Galvin and McDonald in eighth position followed one-fifth of a mile behind Logan and Downey. Dorflinger and Dussol, the French riders, were trailing along ten miles in the rear.

The score at 8 a.m.:

Bedell-Bedell, Root-Fogler, 2038 miles and 4 laps; Vanderstuft-Stol, Maclean-Moran, 2038.3; Hopper-Hollister, Downing-Bowler, 2038.2; Logan-Downey, 2038.1; Galvin-McDonald, 2037.9; Dorflinger-Dussel, 2028.5.

ATTELL GETS MATCH.

FIGHTS BOWKER IN SPRING.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Abe Attell will go to England in the spring to meet Jem Bowker, with whom he has been trying to get a match for two months. As Billy Day, a friend of Attell's, has some business abroad the fighter intrusted the making of arrangements to him. Day has informed Attell that Bowker has agreed to fight him before the National Sporting Club of London on next Derby night. The men are to weigh in a 122 pounds at 2 o'clock on the day of battle for a purse of $2500 with 75 per cent. to the winner and 25 per cent. to the loser. The rounds are to be limited to 20 of 3 minutes each, and Attell is to receive $300 for expenses. At present Attell is engaged in three-round bouts before local athletic clubs and also has dates in Baltimore and Philadelphia.

M'GOVERN AND NELSON AGREE.

LITTLE MEN TO FIGHT IN PHILADELPHIA IN JANUARY.

Quaker City Promoters Count on Biggest Crowd on Record for the Class—Nelson's Manager Dictates Long End of Purse and Terry Unwillingly Gives In.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] After much sparring between Joe Humphreys and Billy Nolan managers respectively of Terry McGovern and Battling Nelson, a date has finally been set for a meeting between these two fighters.

They will meet in a six-round bout January 26 at the Light Guard Armory, Philadelphia. Joe Humphreys announced last night in Boston that he had accepted the conditions by telegraph. Nolan practically dictated the terms of 80 per cent. of the gross receipts. Nelson is to receive 45 per cent. and McGovern 35 per cent. Nolan informed Humphreys that the bout would be declared off unless McGovern agreed to take 10 per cent. less than Nelson, and that was the point that caused the match to hang fire, Humphreys finally giving in at the request of McGovern, who is anxious for the fight.

It is believed that the greatest crowd that ever witnessed a six-round battle between little men will journey to Philadelphia for the McGovern-Nelson meeting. Prices will be reasonable, the promoters figuring on receipts of from $15,000 to $18,000.

STUDENTS PROTEST.

TAKE GAME TO FACULTY.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Columbia may have football after all. The "grads" have taken the matter up as well as the student body, and will appeal to the court of last report, which, in this case, is the board of trustees, the body which really controls all things at the school on the heights. This sentiment of the graduates found expression at a meeting held at Columbia University Club.

There was a great deal of surprise manifested when it was learned that the student body had taken its troubles to the faculty committee. It was stated that the students had gone to the faculty because in previous cases where they had anything to protest against they always went to the faculty, and did so this time for fear of incurring the displeasure of that august body. The resolution passed at the club meeting said that the action in regard to football had been hasty and unwarranted and requested an early reconsideration of the matter.

"SLATS'" WINTER JOB.

HAS A BALL TEAM.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

BAKERSFIELD, Dec. 9.—Irt "Slats" Davis, who was attacked by members of the Los Angeles team while umpiring a game in that city recently, will winter in Bakersfield. He has accepted a position with Silverwood's department store here and on behalf of Harry Thomas has organized a baseball team, to be called the Del Montes, and "Slats" will be captain and play first base. He secured a pretty fair line-up from professional and amateur players who make their home in Bakersfield. Tom Harrell, formerly of Merced, Tom Burke of Los Angeles, Charles Bustilos, Harry McCue, a machinist, who played with Sacramento recently; William Hogan, who played with Oakland all last season; Busher Charles Day and Hutchinson, a veteran of St. Louis Browns fame, have been signed by Davis.

Capt. Haff Improves.

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Capt. "Hank" Haff, the well-known skipper of cup-defending yachts, has been at the German Hospital for a fortnight under treatment for stomach trouble. His physician, Dr. Max Einhorn, says that he is improving.

BREATHLESSLY AWAIT NEWS.

What Will Court of Last Resort Do to Football?

Gridironers Not Hopeful of Camp's Suggestion.

New Rules Proposed by Coach for Conduct of Game.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] In breathless expectancy the entire football world is awaiting news of some action by the court of last resort looking to a modification of the rules of the game. After all that had been said by way of general comment, everybody is anxious to have something tangible in the reform line placed before them. The nearest approach to it thus far is the suggestion made by Walter Camp that a gain of ten yards instead of five be required for a first down. Very few students of the game are able to see in this a panacea for present ills unless other modifications accompany it. It is the opinion of many that without other changes in connection with the adoption of the new rule the situation would be even worse than it is now.

The following suggestions are offered by one coach as a solution of the problem: First, a rule should be enacted limiting the side not in possession of the ball to five men on the scrimmage line, all other players on this side to be at least five yards back of the scrimmage line when the ball is put in play. This rule would permit interference to form and plays to get under way, as they cannot now with an aggressive secondary defense, and end runs would become possible. A second rule would concern the side in possession of the ball and would state that in all plays the player carrying the ball must cross the line of scrimmage at least five yards outside of the position held by the player who put the ball in play.

To this rule for the sake of variety, strategic play and other considerations essential to the game, an important exception should be made. This exception would state that in one play of the three allowed to gain a first down, the runner may be unrestricted by the provisions of this rule. Such a provision would compel at least normal strength in the line, would prevent the players in the line from leaving their positions at once to back up the ends, and would permit of such variations as is essential to strategic play.

The tendency of these modifications would be to decrease the weight and increase the activity of the scrimmage line. Strong, heavy tackles will be more essential than heavy guards and centers. Guards and centers would be chosen for their ability to tackle on the ends, and for their agility in getting into interference and assisting the runner.

YALE BLACK LISTS.

HYPOTHECATION'S WAGES.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW HAVEN (Ct.) Dec. 9.—[Exclusive.] Hard upon the publication of the promised black list of the names of students whose allotted football-game tickets were found in speculators' hands, the students of the Yale Medical School have passed pointed resolutions denouncing O. B. Garnsey, a student in the department, who was one of those named. Fifteen students and graduates are on the black list, but all save Garnsey and D. C. Johnson, 1908, are exonerated by the management of intention to speculate. The other thirteen have proved by affidavits from friends that they personally acted in good faith and that their tickets found their way to speculators through fault of friends.

Nevertheless all fifteen are to be denied future rights to apply for tickets to Yale football games. The medical school resolutions are to the effect that such an act on the part of any member of Yale University is a breach of student etiquette and a violation of a university principle, and that a man guilty of such an offense is unworthy of being a member of Yale University. Garnsey is president of the Freshman medical class. His home is in Waterbury, Ct. Johnson says he erred through not knowing the prohibitive rule and that he tried to rebuy the tickets he had sold.

GOING CRAZY OVER SPEED.

A. G. Vanderbilt is After the World's Record.

Building New Car of Double Hundred Horse Power.

Many Motoring Events Next Year—Trade Talk.

Already motorists are wondering how many human sacrifices will be made to the God of Go-Fast on the sandy altar of the Florida beach this winter.

Last year's cars were by all means powerful enough, but to such a white heat of intensity has the interest of the multimillionaire motor car men attained that what was regarded as wonderful power last winter will be hopelessly outclassed this season. The latest announcement by Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt crystallizes several rumors into the definite fact that his new surprise car, when completed, will develop something like 250 horse power upon a weight within the 2250-pound limit already imposed on competing machines.

Just what a young switch engine like this can do on a straight stretch of smooth beach, provided some fool of a man can be found with the ability to steer it is only food for conjecture, but the predictions of two miles a minute are generally accepted as reasonable. Alfred Gwynne, it is believed, has too good sense to try to pilot the thing himself, and it is doubtful if any one else will have the nerve to fully let it out.

So far as horse power goes, Vanderbilt will have the honors in a walkover, but big engines do not always run harmoniously, and some of the smaller affairs may do better work. Willie K. skipped out to Ormond a few days ago to try a new car which he has had made, and is said to be out for the record.

John T. Brush, the New York baseball magnate, is reported in the market for the fastest things on wheels that $15,000 will buy in Europe, and Joe Tracy has a similar commission.

Further, it is learned that Lancia will be on hand with a big new Fiat; Sisz will have another bigger Renault; Duray a new De Dietrich; Clifford Earp another six-cylinder Napier; Jenatzy another big Mercedes, and last, but by no means the least, Auguste Hemery, reinstated after an unexpected abject apology, is to be in the honor hunt with a rebuilt 1906 Darracq.

This is by far the finest aggregation of drivers that ever got together on the Florida beach, and the southern exodus of wealthy men interested in fast motoring will be a record-breaker in numbers as well as on the course.

Mortimer Roberts, who was legislated out of a place in the Vanderbilt cup trials after the pluckiest feat of driving a broken car that ever made automobile history, will try again at Ormond.

Roberts and his mechanic drove into fifth place in the elimination tests after a bad breakdown, persevering most gamely after the accident. The battery box broke, and the mechanic held the wet batteries between his knees, the acid burning him frightfully. The battery wire was broken from its fastening and the mechanic with commendable courage, held it in contact until the live terminal literally cooked his fingers, but the pair earned their reward and qualified, only to be thrown out by the commission. Harry Houpt, New York agent of the Thomas, felt ill-used about the matter, and will send Roberts and his mechanic to Ormond this winter with a view to demonstrating what the combination really can do in competition with some of the other makes of machine that were chosen to replace it for the Vanderbilt race.

Next year there will be so many big events that the manufacturers who desire to make a showing in all are likely to find their hands more than full.

First come the Florida beach races in January, then the Palm Beach autoboat tourney; then the Havana meet; then another on Pablo Beach near Jacksonville, and next a meet on Col. E. H. R. Green's new beach near Galveston. The usual grist of hill climbs at Eagle Rock, Worcester and other similar resorts will precede the Glidden Tour which is to start at Buffalo and turn at Quebec, taking in Toronto, Montreal, Maine, Mt. Washington, Champlain and the Hudson Valley. The Burrell tire test, the six-day nonstop endurance run; the economy tests of the New York motorists, topped off with meets at Old Orchard Beach, the Crawford Notch Hill climb and other events to be arranged more fully later provide a varied and extensive programme of automobile sport for the year.

The E. R. Thomas Trophy race, the Cape May and Atlantic City beach races, the Home Industry competition, and elimination trials in the fall, ought not to be forgotten.

When five years ago John Wilkinson, then superintendent of a bicycle factory, united four wheels with a skeleton frame and drove the affair by an air-cooled motor he had little hope and less expectation of a great automobile factory in the future turning out cars by the thousand and employing many hundreds of men.

H. H. Franklin of Syracuse, N. Y., did foresee the prospect that lay in the fertile brain of Wilkinson, however, and organised the business, the first Franklin cars coming forth from a small workshop. Small additions were made from day to day until a huge factory stands where there was only vacant land, and Wilkinson is the superintendent. Now the air-cooled pioneers are working 1200 men at a shift night and day endeavoring to catch up with their orders.

Importers and American makers are locking horns in dire earnest. It is predicted by those who followed the bicycle game from inception to dissolution that the craze for foreign goods will eventually give way as the American article comes up to standard, but the importers do not seem to be worrying much over the prospect. Hollander & Tangemen, New York agents for the Fiat have ordered $12,000,000 worth of cars for delivery during the next ten years.

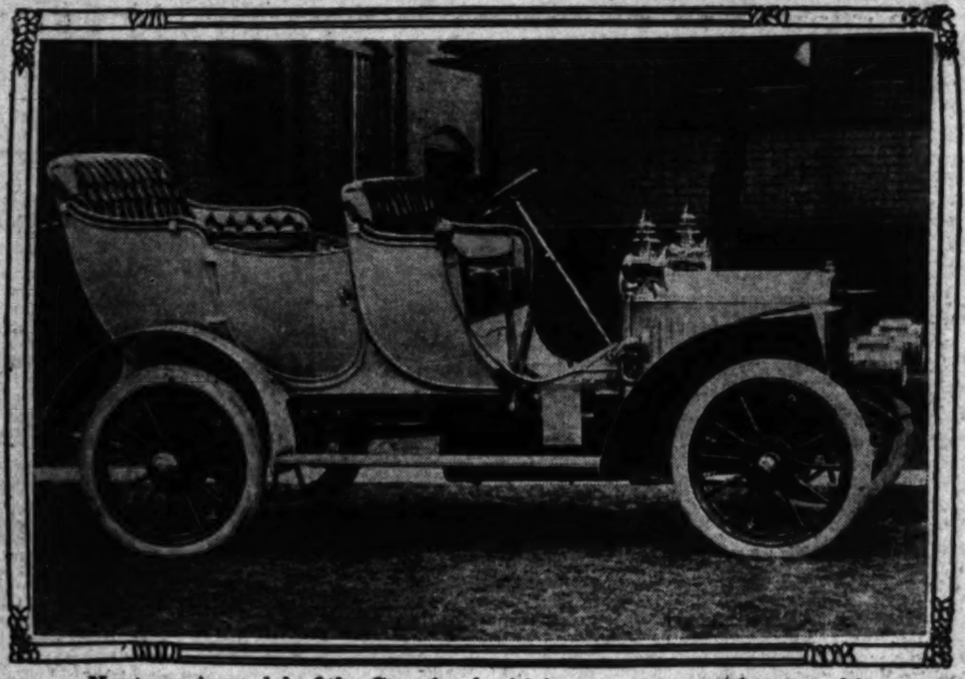
Makers and automobile agents sometimes ask what is the use of hill climbs, races, endurance contests and the like, when they are selling more cars than they can make, or get as the case may be.

A partial answer is to be found in the experience of the Frayer-Miller people whose creation won the Long Branch non-stop endurance contest last summer in rather sensational style. From obscurity, that one victory placed the car in the front rank, establishing the saneness of the air jacket and forced-draft system of cooling. In consequence the concern is doing a big business.

King Edward has added another car to the royal stable of automobiles. It is a big English Daimler, making seven of the make now in the royal garage.

Numerous accidents around New York in which the rattleheadedness of foreign chauffeurs is mostly to blame have given the American driver a great boost. He may not be quite as "tony" but he is steadier, and far more reliable.

President E. J. Conill of the Cuban Automobile Racing Association denies emphatically the report from Havana that there is a likelihood of the races in Cuba scheduled for next January being called off for want of funds.



Next year's model of the Cleveland which experts say will score a hit.

TRADE NOTES.

SIX CYLINDERS NOW.

It is safe to say that the most conspicuous feature of the great automobile show that has just been held in London was the six-cylinder engine. It would hardly be correct to call it a novelty, for the Napier Company of England has used it successfully for the past few years, but it has now been taken up by that oldest and most conservative of makers, Panhard et Levassor of Paris, as well as Clement and the Gladiator Company, and the makers of such well-known English cars as the Ariel, Belsize and Rolls-Royce. Eighty per cent. of the Napier output for 1906 will be six-cylinder cars.

It is now universally admitted that the four-cylinder engine is superior in both operation and durability to one of any lesser number. It is mechanically balanced and of smooth, even "torque" or effort. It has greater flexibility; as soon as one cylinder stops pulling, another takes up the work.

The six-cylinder does more than this; the impulses caused by the cylinder combustions overlap each other; in other words, a fresh cylinder starts in to work when the last one to fire has completed but two-thirds of its stroke. Here is the true effect of a two-cylinder, reciprocating steam engine with its cranks set "off center"—there is no dead point.

As the pioneer of this type, the six-cylinder Napier has been closely watched by motor experts, and it is but fair to say that it appears to have proved an unqualified success. A late performance was the result of a wager made in London that a car of this type could be driven from the company's depot in that city to the agency in Edinburgh, a distance of 440 miles, without changing from the fourth (highest) gear or slipping the clutch. The car won handily, although it was necessary to run it for several miles at a speed of five miles an hour, owing to impeding traffic.

Two baby Reos were sold in Pomona last week. Another went to a Redlands man.

The difference between "secret" football practice and public football practice is that we get more minute and elaborate details about the former than we do about the latter.

MOTOR MEN GET BUSY FOR BIG HILL CLIMB.

FROM now on until the day officially set for the gathering of the automobile clans on our own Eagle Rock road, or the Riverside Box Springs grade—or perchance the Elysian Park testing ground for all local demonstrators—not much will be doing in the motoring field but hill climb.

Plans for the biggest event the local dealers have ever put through, are being formulated. The character of the contest is such that each agent will conclude he has a show in some class or other, and there is every prospect that the event will be anything but an empty honor for the car that wins it.

Motor men sometimes contend that victories in these endurance runs, hill climbs and long races are not worth what they cost, but year after year the manufacturers continue to come forward with inexpensive cars built specially for the kind of competition they are to enter. That does not look much like it were a losing game.

As for the value of hill climb, Walter Cosby might prove a good witness. Cosby's car, the Premier, was practically unknown here before the recent Riverside hill climb. It won that event and Mr. Cosby will have little trouble doing business with all the cars he can get henceforth, just in consequence of the good showing his machine made in that competition.

Too much praise cannot be given the policy of enforcing fair competition between untripped stock cars. What the purchaser wants most to see, if he be a thinking man—and few men with enough money to run automobiles are anything else—is what the machine he looks at in the garage will do with a load in it. He has found that out partially by demonstrations on the hills, but probably feels that he perhaps in his inexperience, did not get the best out of his car there was in it, and even if satisfied on this regard, he is always keenly interested in a flat competition between machines in the hands of experts under as near touring conditions as possible. Tests such as this, are worth something and class with the long transcontinental tours in proving the worth of an automobile under adverse conditions.

The demands of a hill climbing course are several, and their variety accounts for the non-acceptance of several proposed courses that interested parties have suggested. The grade must be neither too easy nor too abrupt; it must have the length, preferably about five miles, and it must be a first class road. The turns preferably, should be gradual. Box Springs Cañon fills the bill pretty well, but it is rather far from Los Angeles, and some of the nearer courses may be selected on that account. One thing is sure; it will be hard to beat the Box Springs grade by any other argument.

The Cleveland concern certainly stole a march on some of the older makers this year in elegance of design. Their car for good looks is as racy as can be, and reminds one somewhat of the sweeping lines of the White Steamer, which was a pioneer in this style of body architecture.

The Cleveland, which is handled locally by A. P. Worthington and sold by Sammy Thels, presents several unique features worthy of comment, aside from the handsome appearance of the car well depicted in the accompanying cut. The power plant is a four cylinder vertical motor 4 1-8 by 5¼. Sims-Bosch ignition, interior make and break spark. The igniter points are of imported nickel alloy. The magneto is direct geared to the motor, and there is an automatic spark advancing device that is said to save the motor and transmission many hard knocks.

A simple float feed carburetor with compensating air device, affording perfect mixture at all speeds is said, working with the ignition system, to make the motor more flexible than any yet devised to run by gasoline. If this be borne out by the demonstrations, the Cleveland people have a good seller.

Shaft drive to through bevel gearing with universal joints and special nonthrust and lubricating devices are features. Three speeds forward and a reverse are provided by very simple gearing.

Wheel base is 104 inches. A specially constructed floating rear drive axle is provided which is said to be a most successful innovation.

Walter H. Seavey, a wealthy motorist of Boston, has shipped his 1906 Stevens-Duryea car to Los Angeles and will use it running about Southern California this winter.

A load of the new Franklin cars containing one of the six-cylinder models left Syracuse, N. Y., yesterday consigned to Ralph C. Hamlin, the agent in this city. The model B will be viewed with considerable interest by the motoring public, as it is already a much-talked-about machine.

The 1906 Packard arrived last Monday, and Bert Dingley, the Western Motor Car Company's demonstrator, has been kept busy running it over the hills ever since.

The wagon is rated at twenty-four horse-power, and performs equal to some makes that are listed at forty. It is one of the handsomest machines ever shown here; is splendidly finished and embodies a number of radical departures from past practice that seem likely to establish themselves with the motoring public. The wagon starts readily from the spark, even over night. The transmission is carried just ahead of the rear live axle. Propeller shaft, universally jointed, is employed. The motor is perfectly balanced and finished up to the very best French standard. The mechanism seems delightfully simple; there is little to get out of order. The car seats six very comfortably. It weighs 2650 pounds and is built to stand rough roads. Nearly all the purchasers, paid or prospective, have had a ride in it, and they seem very much taken with the demonstrations.

Three Packards have been sold by the Western Motor Car Company to local purchasers for Christmas presents—a handsome gift truly, as they cost $4150. The Western Motor Car concern was able to get only ten of them, the output being limited.

Some talk is being heard in favor of selecting the long pull from Pasadena up to Altadena as a course for the coming hill climb. This road is noted for deceptive grades, and it is said to be all a good car can do to take it on the high speed. Alvarado street has been suggested in this city, provided proper arrangements can be made, but a longer course would be much better. The Sycamore Grove hill is also mentioned.

Mr. Huntsman of the firm of Huntsman & Sheldon, Tucson, Ariz., was in town yesterday trying to close for an agency of the Reo. Kirt L. Hart of Phoenix is also in town on the same errand.

Roads above Newhall are reported in fine condition since the rains, and those desirous of a short tour might do worse than try a spin over them.

The going all the way up the valley is so good that a prominent automobile man suggests some one try to lower the Los Angeles-San Francisco record by the inland route.

L. T. Shettler spent several days last week in San Francisco on automobile business. He reports the total sales of the Reo in California during the past year up to Friday night were 262. The documentary evidence to back the assertion is forthcoming, and any one who can disprove it can shake down Shettler $1000 worth.

The San Francisco dealers are forming an association founded upon a deposit of $1000 each as forfeit for living up to their agreements, and it is said all will go in. No funds have been set aside for the purchase of long bowies with which to knife each other before the association is a month old, and it looks very much as if an unholy conspiracy to undo the unwary purchasers' purse strings were really in prospect.

There has been considerable "knifing" done in certain quarters here, and members of the trade would be more than glad if some feasible way to stop it suggested itself.

If motorists generally appreciated the value of a reliable speedometer, few cars would be without this equipment. It is a safeguard against speed violations, enables one to strike an average pace on a tour and in many cases shows the mendacity of the speed claims of the car maker. The best ones embody distance indicators for both total and trip mileage. These can be used to check up the manufacturer's statements about gasoline consumption.

At least two American makers have announced six-cylinder cars as stock 1906 models and their arrival on the Coast is awaited by the motoring fraternity with a great deal of interest.

Charles Strong of Brewery Gulch, Ariz., has just purchased a Reo sixteen horse-power car for mining work in that hough country.

THE LITTLE BUNCH OF RAH-RAHS

A lad matriculated in the college in our town,
With a little bunch of rah-rahs in his throat.
He wasn't up on class-room rules, but had the gridiron's down,
And a little bunch of rah-rahs in his throat.
He wore a dinky little cap, so jaunty and so neat, oYu could hear his gaudfy sweater as he sauntered down the street,
And likewise hear the rainbows that he wore upon his feet,
And the little bunch of rah-rahs in
his throat.

In all athletic branches he essayed to do a stunt,
With his little bunch of rah-rahs in
his throat.
He'd sure have made the 'leven had he not been such a runt,
With his little bunch of rah-rahs in
his throat.
But he never missed a football game,
and my, how he could root!
The girls around him couldn't hear a locomotive toot;
He had a horn, a megaphone, a cow-
bell and to boot
That little bunch of rah-rahs in his
throat.
Where'er he went the people knew he was a college boy
By the little bunch of rah-rahs in his throat.
It made his heart exultant bound in mad, unbridled joy—
That little bunch of rah-rahs in his
throat.
To run a team without his aid the coaches dare not try,
He roused the brave eleven when he gave his fiendish cry,
But in the class-room not an answer ever did get by
That little bunch of rah-rahs in his throat.

You'd think the cigarettes and pipes
he smoked would suffocate
The little bunch of rah-rahs in his throat.
But such an end was not to be, though quite as sad a fate
O'ertook the bunch of rah-rahs in his throat.
'Twas just before Thanksgiving Day
the great misfortune came,
He caught a cold and grew so hoarse
he scarce could speak his name;
Oh, wasn't that an awful thing, to sit clear through the game,
Without a single rah-rah in his throat?

CLASSY ENTRY FOR DOG SHOW.

PASADENA'S CANINE EXHIBIT HAS SOME GOOD ONES.

Boston Terriers Lead the Long List, and Fred Herr's Newly-imported Dogs Will be Benched for the First Time Here—Collies Showing up Well in Numbers and Class.

A grand total of 250 entries has already been received for the Pasadena bench show, and the books are now closed.

The Boston terrier leads the list with over forty entries, which include George Fred Herr's four newly imported Bostons, and Leo R. Walters's Walton's $500 bitch.

Next in order of representation comes the fox terrier with nineteen represented. There will b a livly scrap for awards in this class when the foxes get into the ring. R. C. Halsted's dog, Checkers, who whipped a scrub Newfoundland on the street yesterday, will have to meet three of his own sort from the Wandee Kennels of Menlo Park, and as many more of W. W. Stetheimer's San Francisco prize winners. If the checkers do not get scattered, somebody may break into the king row.

The collies are sixteen strong. Lovers of this handsome variety will have their eyes satisfied for once. Those entered are as near the collie ideal as any ever exhibited on the Coast, and six of them already have long show records. William Ellery of San Francisco will bring Southport Philosopher, probably the sire of more prize winners than any collie in America; a typical show dog that should give George R. Albers' Verne Tommy a rare run for his money. Tommy was illustrated in The Times last Sunday. He is by Arthur Letts's Ravenswood, and no mean competitor to face in any ring. Mr. Ellery also brings Gladys May, winner in Boston last year. She will go up against Mr. Albers's undefeated Verne Tottie.

Cocker Spaniels and Irish Setters are tied for being next most numerous in the entry list. The breeds are unusually well represented; however, almost every kind of dog recognised in the list and many seldom seen are being groomed to look their prettiest in Pasadena December 13 and 14, Wednesday and Thursday of this week.

KING EDWARD GIVES A CUP.

Offers Splendid Trophy to American Yachtsmen.

New York Yacht Club Chosen for Custodian.

Any Boats that Classify to be Eligible.

BY STINSON JARVIS.

In former years the only yachting trophies that America could get on the other side of the Atlantic were those which she won through the superior speed of her pleasure vessels; but now the cups are coming by way of friendly gift. It marks a new era in the annals of sport that King Edward of England now gives to American yachtsmen a trophy which is to be held by the New York Yacht Club and raced for in American waters. At the meeting called to express the club's acceptance of the King's offer, Commodore F. G. Bowme presided and former Commodore Lewis Cass Ledyard proposed the following resolution:

"The New York Yacht Club desires to express its deep appreciation of the gift of his Majesty, King Edward VII., of the cup to be known as the King's Cup, and accepts the terms and conditions of the gift. The club recognizes with sincere gratitude the honor thus bestowed upon it. His Majesty's keen interest in the sport has ever been regarded with admiration by American yachtsmen, and his powerful influence in maintaining its best standards and highest traditions has been as effective in American as in English waters. The club will always cherish with pride the trophy thus committed to its trust."

The conditions which the King attaches to this cup are for a number of reasons highly interesting to the yachtsmen of the whole continent. Incidentally, they compel the New York Yacht Club to be a little more democratic, and for the first time in history admit yachts of other institutions to compete in its private club regattas; so that if Mr. Thomas W. Lawson now wishes to built a yacht to secure the most coveted American trophy, there will be no further possibility of keeping him out, as was done in the case of the intended defender of the America's cup, the Independence. The conditions are as follows:

First—This cup shall be known as the King's Cup.

Second—The cup shall be forever held by the New York Yacht Club, to be sailed for annually. The name of each yacht winning it and the name of her owner shall be suitably inscribed thereon, and each winning yacht shall receive from the New York Yacht Club a suitable medal or other trophy to commemorate her victory.

Third—Races for this cup shall be sailed under the racing rules of the New York Yacht Club as the same shall be from time to time in force, including the rules for measurement and time allowance, except as otherwise provided in these terms and conditions.

Fourth—Any yacht belonging to any yacht club in the United States in good standing shall be eligible to enter in these races, provided that in the case of a single-masted vessel, she shall be of a waterline length of not less than fifty feet, and that in the case of a vessel of more than one mast, she shall be of a waterline length of not less than sixty feet, but these limitations of dimension may be from time to time altered by the unanimous action of the flag officers of the club, taken not less than ten months prior to the race to which such alteration shall be applicable.

Fifth—The courses and dates and any other conditions of the races, not inconsistent with these conditions or with the racing rules of the club, shall be determined from time to time by the flag officers; but unless circumstances shall arise which in the judgment of the flag officers make it inexpedient to do so, the races shall preferably take place over one of the courses off Newport during the annual squadron cruise of the club.

Sixth—All races for this cup shall be sailed without time limit.

Seventh—Entries for these races must be in writing and must be lodged with the regular committee of the New York Yacht Club within forty-eight hours before the time of starting.

ENGLISH RUGBY.

Salt Lake Correspondent Who Knows the Game of Old Gives Out Timely Pointers.

SALT LAKE CITY, Dec. 1.—[To the Editor of The Times:] On page 2, Los Angeles Times for November 30, I notice that some colleges have decided as a protest against the brutality of the present intercollegiate game, to adopt the British Rugby. Your correspondent, whoever he was, has made a slight mistake in his naming of players. I have seen in England many intercountry and international matches played under the Rugby union laws and also during my sojourn in Manchester have seen innumerable league matches and cup tries under the auspices of the quasi-professional northern Rugby league. That league is divided into two divisions, No. I and II, sixteen clubs in each, the two top clubs of No. II displacing the two bottom of No. I at the end of each season. This league possesses the cream of British Rugby talent. There are fifteen players on a Rugby (English) team, occupying the following positions:

1—Fullback.
4—Three-quarterbacks.
2—Halfbacks.
8—Forwards.

The fullback occupies the same position as does, in a sense, the wayback or college Rugby. The three-quarterbacks are the attack or main attack as they generally do about 80 to 90 per cent. of the scoring. They should be fast, able to pass well when in motion, also able to kick, punt, drop kick with either foot, also good tacklers; the halfbacks should possess lively nimbleness and nerve; it is their duty to place the ball in the scrimmage and to be ready to get it immediately it has been "hurled out" and to decide in the fraction of a second whether to make tracks with it himself or pass it to his comrade or to pass it to the nearest of his lower line of waiting three-quarterbacks. The forwards, eight in number, should possess weight, which counts in scrimmaging, but with speed added to it, as speedy forwards with the ability to double even if lacking in weight, can make their prowess felt in the loose, open rushes. English Rugby players wear simply a jersey and pair of knickers and seldom, if ever, wear shin guards; bare at the knee like their "socker" comperes. I may say that the game is faster, more open, more spectacular than the college Rugby, more opportunities for good individual runs and intricate passing when on the move, also no substitutes allowed once the game is commenced, under any circumstances no interference allowed, nor any signals allowed which would give any side possessing the ball undue advantage over the other; also no player can be obstructed or interfered with in any way or form unless he has the ball in his possession; no jumping at or on players is allowed and English Rugby, although rough, is so open that all dirty slugging and other such like underhanded play is easily detected. Although in all Great Britain there are fully ten Rugby clubs for every football club in the United States, and the season there lasts fully twenty-eight weeks, yet more fatalities have happened in the United States already during the last short six weeks than have occurred at Rugby matches in all Great Britain for over fifteen years. One reason for this alarming disparity is that in England they don't "monkey" with the rules, but thoroughly enforce them, and if that was done here I think that less fatalities would occur, even in the brutal intercollegiate game. But why so, as for English Rugby, why not take up real football, namely, the association or "socker" game. As an Englishman and a socker enthusiast, I have no wish to see socker displace college Rugby, as the latter will be a fine game when it will be civilized but to play both socker will even help to develop good kickers, for the Rugby game and socker can be played all winter, and if the college athletes will take it up and play it to the end of March, say, it will help them to keep in fine trim, not only for field and track events, but also for rowing, baseball, distance and especially cross-country running, as speed, stamina, good wind and endurance are the chief qualifications for a first-class socker player. The game is an ideal one and although as strenuous in one sense as college Rugby, is yet pastime recreation, and if football is not that, then it has failed, utterly; failed in its purpose as a game and deserves to be totally abolished. Socker neither discriminates against the heavyweights nor eliminates the lightweights, and there is room for all on the same team. The slim lightweight has as equal a chance of becoming a star player as the cumbersome, beefy giant. Hoping that the schools and colleges will at least give this fine, clean game a fair trial, they will never regret it.

REPORT GOOD SPORT.

GEESE AT FAIRVIEW.

A number of local sportsmen left last night for Fairview Hot Springs in Orange county to stay over until tomorrow morning, with hopes of bringing back good bags.

White and checker-breast geese are reported feeding on the new grain about Fairview, and some of the hunters have hopes of bagging a few.

Guests of the hotel had some fair duck shooting on Newport Island last week, ducks, rails and a few geese being found. The island is preserved by the hotel.

"AUTO" GET QUAIL.

SPORT AT MONTE VISTA.

Not all the quail are dead yet, although Billy Ruess and Ed Herwick did their best to thin out the visible supply above Monte Vista not long since.

The gentlemen, with their wives, drove up the San Fernando Valley in a Reo car, and were fortunate in striking a big band of birds at the start. They soon had all the shooting the law allows, and came home well satisfied for once, taking their pictures with all possible expedition so as to bear witness to the truth of the story.

There has been a great deal of hunting done from automobiles this fall. They afford the best of all conveyances under ordinary conditions, and are therefore largely used by the class fortunate enough to have one at their command.

The entrance fee for each event, except the Dewar Cup race, is $20. The Dewar race entrance fee is $50. Entries will close January 3, 1906. Applications for entry blanks should be addressed to W. J. Morgan, No. 116 Nassau street, and from the same source any additional information may be obtained.

Several eastern clubs are said to have Louis Nordyke of the Tacoma team under consideration. Pittsburgh is said to be thinking of drafting Nordyke.

LOCALS GET THIRD GAME.

Hard Swats at Proper Time Get the Money.

Pitcher Hall Surprises Fans With Two Hits.

Fitzgerald is Slugged all Over the Lot.

Los Angeles, 3; Tacoma, 2.

Hard swats by the locals were the features of the third game of the Coast championship series yesterday at Chutes Park and these same hard swats, coming at timely moments, won the game for the locals.

We had to use two pitchers to do it, though, for Dolly Gray, who went in first, was wild and after he had given his third base on balls, he took a seat on the bench and Hall was put in. This one had everything after he became accustomed to things, and had the Tigers swinging their heads off after they had gone one inning with him. Up against such pitching, they had no chance and lost because things came right for us at the tail end of the game.

Fitzgerald pitched for Tacoma, and while he did not go to pieces in any one inning, enough slams were made off him to get the money, but it took good baseball and a little luck to beat him in the end. The fair-sized crowd of fans didn't go to sleep over the play, for it was generally sharp and snappy and the struggle was exciting all the way. Ross was in catching again and Busher Ellis played left field, but aside from these changes the line-ups were the same as in the previous games the past week. The day was a bad one for the Santa Ana sandstorm made the air yellow and the sun was entirely obscured before the game ended.

The locals commenced on Fitzgerald in the first act. Bernard drew a pass, went to second on Ross's safe bunt down the third-base line, and after Dillon had sacrificed, Brashear scored both men with a hard double against the center fence. There was nothing more doing for us until the seventh, when Schlafly rapped out a double went to third on Graham's low throw to catch him off the base, and scored on Dillon's neat sacrifice at first base.

The Tigers got their first run on a pass, Brashear's error and a long fly, and the second on a single, a sacrifice and a single right back. The score:

DROVE TOO FAST.

COST HIM MONEY.

W. D. Wise of this city was arrested last Sunday for breaking the speed ordinance up Sycamore Hill. The auto-sleuths, by their wholesale arrests on Pasadena avenue, have stopped fast driving on the level stretches of that thorougfare and have turned their attention to such cars as are powerful enough to take the hills at a fast pace on the high gear. Few drivers think of speed regulations when their cars are flying up a stiff grade.

The mechanical generation of the sparking current is slowly but surely gaining ground in this country; it is practically universal in large cars abroad. A storage battery that will do half of what the makers claim for it is an exceptionally good one, while dry cells, used with a multiple vibrator coil, are quickly exhausted. Magnetos and dynamos of American manufacture have been too cheaply made to be satisfactory, but a great improvement in this direction is promised or 1906.

Premier
THE QUALITY CAR
WINS

At the great Riverside Hill Climbing Contest, Thanksgiving day, the Premier ran the 3 8-10 miles up the 7 per cent. grade in 6 min. 43 3-5 secs., or at an average speed of 35 miles per hour, being the only machine to cover the distance in less than 7 minutes.

This climb was made with our regular stock, 16 horse-power runabout, which sells for $14.00.

Our touring car, which carries five people comfortably, sells for $1650. For speed, endurance, economy of up keep and operation they have no superior, and as many records show, there are few its equal.

If you are looking for a superior article in the shape of a motor car, let us show you the Premier and give you a Premier demonstration.

DUCK MECCA IS IMPERIAL.

Hunters Confirm Reports of Hot Sport There.

Local Gunners Still Score Limits Regularly.

Many Gadwell of Great Size Being Dropped.

No better evidence of the splendid supply of shooting material in Southern California this season could be asked than the testimony of several ranchers from the Imperial country, given last week.

These gentlemen say the ducks, always plentiful around the lower Colorado, are swarming like blackbirds this winter. It would be no trouble at all for a good shot to kill 300 a day on the big lake below Calexico were there any excuse for such slaughter, or any manner in which he could dispose of the birds.

Sprigs, widgeon, spoonbills, mallards, teal, gadwell, are all reported plentiful. On the shallow mud sloughs around Calexico an unusual number of gadwell have been seen feeding, and they are fully up to the traditions of the breed as regards fatness.

The general invitation to local sportsmen, given by the Brawley ranchers last week, was quite generally accepted, and many limit bags of birds have been shipped up to local dealers. It is said to be a hard game on a man's morals, as the temptation to break the limit is ever present, and in most alluring form.

In some of the Brawley-Imperial country the making of a big bag is rather difficult. There is so much water everywhere that the ducks are scattered, and one or two shots is all a man can get, the hunting being a matter of "jumping" birds by walking about, which becomes arduous when one has fifteen or twenty fat sprigs bumping about in his game sack.

Locally the duck hunting is holding out splendidly, and, although it is well into December, the good shots are getting the limit with regularity even when not first choice. Last winter it was harder to bag twenty than it is to get fifty nowadays.

The Ballona clubs are still bringing 'em down as of yore, although surroundings are not what they once were in that section. On the Cerritos and Pasadena clubs, limits were bagged last Wednesday by several gunners. The Pasadena club recently put in several new ponds, and is getting rather more than its share of mallards on some of these.

R. E. Ross has kept track of his bag on the Cerritos club this season, and finds that to date he has killed an even fifty mallards in perhaps 250. Most of the Cerritos membership have passed up the festive "spoony" this fall, though on some of the other clubs he is in dire danger on every appearance.

Getting the limit in the Bolsa section has become an old story. Last Wednesday the usual number of fifty-bird bags were loaded onto the 3:30 o'clock car at Bolsa Beach from half a dozen clubs. Godfrey Fritz, William Frick, J. Morrison and another Christopher club member fired over that preserve in the morning, and found the flight quite all that could be asked, all kinds of birds being in evidence.

The Chico members are killing quite a few mallards, and some canvasbacks are occasionally seen speeding over the ponds. The prevailing depth of water in the Bolsa clubs is about one foot, which is too shallow to appeal to the festive "can," though it is quite the thing for such bottom rakers as the sprig, which enjoys standing on its head and grubbing about for the grain or seeds that have sunk to the mud. Mallards are fond enough of this character of living, and divide with gadwell the honor of being at present the biggest birds on the Bolsa marshes. Some gadwell of huge size have been reported, one being said to have dressed over two and a half pounds, and as big as an average mallard.

The birds are attaining their winter plumage now, and are fast becoming things of beauty. Earlier in the season the immature males are of soberer color, and do not make nearly as pretty a string as now.

Teal continue plentiful everywhere. There is no losing the spoonbill; he comes early and stays until the last.

On such of the clubs as have patches of black peat bog, snipe are beginning to make their appearance. The elusive "jack" is one of the few birds that will tempt a duck hunter out of his blind in lulls of the flight. As yet no bags of much consequence have been reported, but several gentlemen have succeeded in bringing down enough of them to furnish the meat for very pleasing breakfasts when served upon toast done to a golden brown.

Quail are steadily becoming harder to catch. Not many are being killed, and the hunters are beginning to realize that under present conditions the birds "have it on them."

New clubs in the Bolsa district are coming along handsomely. The Sunset club hopes to get in a little shooting late in the season, with good luck; its levees are contracted to be finished within a month, and three weeks more should fill the ponds.

The Canvasback club's levees are now practically up and a good flow of water has been uncovered in its ten-inch well. Blinds are being built, and a contract for the house let, which makes it quite probable the members will be shooting by the first of year.

CHICAGO CUBS MAY GET SELEE.

VETERAN MANAGER IS RECOVERING HEALTH AT DENVER.

His Old Club Counts on Getting Him Back, Provided Neither Boston, Brooklyn nor Cincinnati Hooks on. Capt. Anson's Stock Troubles Ended by Sale of all His Holdings.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Dec. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Frank Selee may manage another prominent-winning team in the National League. Just before leaving for the East to attend the National League meeting Charles W. Murphy, president of the Chicago Club, received a letter from the veteran baseball manager who is now in Denver. In his letter Selee said he has almost entirely recovered from his recent sickness and expects to be in perfect health when the baseball season opens next spring.

While President Murphy would not commit himself on the subject, it is said to be safe to say that Selee will be seen in harness with the Cubs next year, unless several clubs in the National League which are now trying to secure the veteran manager's services should offer inducements favorable enough to lead the Chicago management to part with their old manager. It is known that Garry Herrman is anxious to secure a manager in place of Joe Kelly, who resigned as manager of the team several weeks ago. Selee is partial to Cincinnati and would just as soon go there as to any other club providing suitable arrangements could be made with the Chicago club for his release.

The Boston and Brooklyn clubs are also after Selee, and in the event of his not hooking up with the Cincinnati Reds he may go to either of these two eastern clubs. One thing is definitely settled, however, namely, if Selee does not go to some other National League club he will be with the Cubs again next year, either as manager or "scout."

Capt. A. C. Anson, former head of the Chicago National League Baseball Club and at present City Clerk, has settled his long-standing difference with the club over his stock and has sold his holdings (on which he has not received dividends for years) to the new owners. Capt. Anson's holdings amounted to something like $12,000, and he was paid par value for his stock. The troubles of Anson and his stock are well known to the public. For years Anson made annual pilgrimages to the offices of the Chicago ball club at the end of the year to ask for his dividends, and as often as he made the trip he was told that the club had declare no dividends for that year.

RECORD RUN.

NARRAGANSETT TO GOTHAM.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] What is believed to have been a record run of the route was made recently from Narragansett Pier, R. I., to New York City by Albert S. Church in a 24-horse-power Fiat touring car. Mr. Church made the run of 189 miles over the different roads in 7 1-2 hours actual running time. From Narragansett to Sayford Junction the roads were in wretched condition, being frozen and rutty, but toward New Haven they improved and were fairly good from that point into New York.

Several Were at Very Short Odds That Kept the Betting Sports from Gambling on Them—Feature Race of Card Taken by Borghesi—Some Good Beasts Scratched.

All records for months were broken yesterday at the Ascot Park races when six favorites won the six races. Three of these were at fierce odds that few of the gambling sports could accept and they had to play their money on something else that lost. On the whole the gamblers on the ground made about an even break on two races at least, when they played Ninnasquaw in the second race and Borghesi in the fourth. There were several "good things" that never won, of course. The time made was excellent.

Results:

Futurity course: Alencon, 107 (Walsh,) 3 to 10, won; Retador, 104 (Lawrence,) 30 to 1, second; Regal, 112 (Waterbury,) 5 to 1, third; time 1:10¼. Graphite, Vindicta, Ding Dong II and Rubiana also ran. Cutter, Elgora, Couer de Lion, Belle Kinney, Philanthropist, Inspector Halpin and Kittie Crews scratched.

Mile and a sixteenth: Ninnasquaw, 99 (McDaniel,) 3 to 5, won; McGranthiana Prince, 108 (Davis,) 5 to 1, second; Wyefield, 99 (Hogg,) 25 to 1, third; time 1:48¼. Graceful and Hot also ran. The Borgian scratched.

Six furlongs: Handzarra, 112 (McDaniel,) 1 to 2, won; Retropaw, 95 (Harris,) 50 to 1, second; Big Ben, 116 (Fisher,) 3 to 2, third; time 1:13¼. Eugenia Burch, Capitanazo, West Brookfield and Susie Gooding also ran. Masterson scratched.

One mile: Borghesi, 103 (Kunz,) 13 to 5, won; Rubric, 106 (Buchanan,) 3 to 5, second; Varieties, 96 (Harris,) 8 to 1, third; time 1:40¼. Dekaber, Sais, W. H. Carey, Lillie B. and Capias also ran. Eugenia Burch and La Londe scratched.

One mile: Old Mike, 99 (McDaniel,) 3 to 2, won; Golden Green, 95 (Notter,) 3 to 1, second; Rostof, 100 (Aubuchon,) 8 to 1, third; time 2:09. Courant, Fortunatus and Chickadee also ran. Position scratched.

Five and one-half furlongs: Good Luck, 112 (Buchanan,) 11 to 20, won; Mr. Budd, 97 (Preston,) 15 to 1, second; Peeping Tom, 110 (Walsh,) 5 to 2, third; time 1:08¼. Sheriff Williams, Col. Bronston, Toller and Diana also ran.

WIND BRINGS BIRDS.

SPORT IN PEATLANDS.

Yesterday's shoot of the Bolsa Clubs resulted in a number of big bags being made, a "Santa Ana" of phenomenal force keeping the birds moving briskly all morning, and preventing them from sitting out on the ocean as is their habit when bombarded beyond endurance inland.

The storm is reported one of the worst known in many months and quite a number of poorly constructed gun club levees were washed out by the waves raised in their ponds.

Teal were unusually plentiful, and made up a goodly proportion of the limit bags that were scored on the Chico, Lomita and Blue Wing Clubs, all of which reported a great shoot.

Large turnouts will be the rule today. Yesterday afternoon Ed Tufts, W. H. Holmes, Felix Notman and Frank Schumacher left for the Pacific preserve. John Haugrwaas and E. Golter, among others, are shooting over the Recreation Club this morning.

M. F. Amestoy and brother both killed the limit on the Lomita. M. F. did not leave the city until yesterday morning. Four limits were scored, but shooting in the wind was a new experience to many of the members, and the shell average per bird ran high in consequence. Gradwell were seen in force, and some huge ones were killed.

SO DIFERENT.

TALE OF A SWAN HUNT.

Sportsmen were telling a tale on two wealthy clubmen yesterday that will bear repetition.

The gunners in question were coming in off the marsh yesterday morning—Ed and Bill, let's call them—and a teal got up out of the creek. At the shot, a big swan rose—the rarest of game—and both fired. The great bird sailed on, mortally wounded, and fell a hundred yards ahead. Then began a running fight in which each hotly claimed he had killed it, and when they came into the clubhouse, holding it between them, the debate waxed warm and furious, until another member wondered why the two nimrods were fighting so hard for a chance to pay a $50 fine, that being the penalty for killing a swan.

Then it was so different. Each tried his hardest to pass the buck, and nobody yet knows who killed that swan.

SASSY SWIMMER.

WOULD BEAT THE WORLD.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Dec. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] M. W. Handy, the amateur swimmer who recently broke a number of world's records in a handicap race, is going to New York to meet Daniels, the New York Athletic Club crack. Handy expects to win the amateur championship of the United States by defeating Daniels and Marquard Schwartz, the St. Louis swimmer. His manager has arranged an eastern trip which will get him into New York shortly before the holidays.

Dates have been secured with Yale and Columbia, though it is not known what swimmers will compete. Handy has ambitions to be a world's champion, and if any foreign tank experts are heard from while he is in New York, he will give them a chance to take the spray from his famous Australian crawl, which is his swimming stroke.

SPEED CONTESTS.

AUTOS TO FLY IN FRANCE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Paris correspondent of the New York Herald telegraphs:

"Of course the principle feature of life in Paris this week has been the auto show. In connection with this topic I might report that the section of construction in the Chamber of Syndicate de Automobile, on being consulted by the Automobile Club de France, has pronounced in favor of speed contests in 1906. In view of this decision the Automobile Club de France will probably organize a race. There will be three big events next July, organized by the clubs the Coupe des Bandages and the Circuit European and a course to Vitesse."

GAME NOTES AND COMMENT.

BY THE SPORTSMAN.

By long odds the biggest thing of the week in sportsmen's circles, was the conviction of that arch-enemy of the game laws, L. G. Zaiser, on the time-honored charge of having too many ducks in his possession.

Whether the rails spread on Zaiser's "underground railway" or the gas-bag of his "airship line" became pricked, will probably never be known, but the fact remains that after many escapes of the scot-free order, the veteran offender at last was "pinched" with the goods and forced to pay a fine equal to the profits on illegal handling of ducks for many months to come.

Mr. Zaiser not only broke the law pretty frequently—Deputy Fish Commissioner Pritchard says constantly—but was indiscreet enough to boast about and even petitioned the Governor to remove Pritchard for "persecuting him"—only fancy! If there is a height of impudence, surely this must be the peak of it!

Mr. Zaiser has been in court many times on various charges alleging infraction of the game and fish laws of the State, but police court juries and legal technicalities have served to get him off, until he probably thought himself proof. The example is a wholesome one, for some of the law abiding dealers were beginning to chafe under the limit restrains in view of Zaiser's apparent ability to do business.

The game laws were made to be observed, and stiff fines are the only thing that will make some people respect them.

Incidentally, the scene in Judge Rose's court, when sentence was pronounced upon Zaiser, bordered upon the ludicrous. The gentleman, prepared for the worst while expecting the best, brought only $100, and Attorney Jud Rush had to go surety for his pungling up the remainder. Pritchard has haunted Zaiser's dreams o'nights; in every sack of ducks he has seen the portly figure of the deputy fish commissioner looming up large and dreadful.

The non-enforcement of the laws in San Francisco where an abominable state of affairs exists, is said to be one of the excuses Mr. Zaiser makes. It is not one that will carry much weight until two wrongs make a right, though by some, it might be construed as an extenuating circumstance.

The California Fish Commission might well inquire into the situation in San Francisco. Bad feebly expresses it. The commission dealers are openly violating the law, and the commissioners seem unable to do anything to stop them.

What Do You Think of Our New Line?

We have just placed our order for fifty of the above cars for the coming winter and spring trade. Expect our first shipment about January 1, 1906. Our cars will arrive thereafter as rapidly as they can be supplied by the Wayne Automobile Co., whose extensive plant is being overtaxed by the advance demand for these popular and economical machines. The Wayne cars for the coming year are bigger, stronger and better than ever. Nothing more need be said of them. The satisfaction of the present users of the Wayne cars is the best guarantee of what our new cars will do for their owners. We invite your closest inquiry into the matter of the afore-mentioned satisfaction. Do you know one driver of a Wayne who regrets his choice of car? It will pay you, before placing your order, to have a talk with us. Let us show you! We have one, model "B," four-cylinder, 24-28-H.P. touring car, with cape-top, glass wind shield, extra large gas lamps with "Pres-to-lite" tank, extra large wheels (32-inch with 4-inch tires,) extra casing and two extra inner tubes, and other extras, the whole costing near [illegible]. This car has been driven less than [illegible] miles and we can sell it at [illegible]. It is a bargain worthy your consideration. See it! See all of the

How I Treat Men

I Have But One

Kind of treatment to offer you, and that is the right treatment for your particular condition. MY WAY is thorough and searching, and is given only in MY OFFICES.

Training and Experience of the right kind count for much—this is especially true in the intricate and complicated conditions peculiar to MEN.

FUNCTIONAL DECLINE, ORGANIC WEAKNESS, I COMPLETELY CURE WITHOUT TONICS

This condition is commonly termed "Weakness," and most physicians trace its cause to the prostate gland for want of better knowledge of the true condition and the actual cause. By powerful stimulating tonics they produce temporary activity, which results in a more weakened condition after the first effects, which is only a drug effect that should be avoided.

VARICOCELE

I cure soundly and completely in 4 to 6 days. The treatment I offer you is painless and one that will not only strengthen but preserve the reproductive system.

STRICTURE

I have devoted years of special attention to this condition. My treatment softens and relaxes the diseased membrane and the formation is completely destroyed in a few days.

CONTRACTED DISEASES

A permanent cure is the only cure. This can be obtained only by thorough local treatment, properly given; no after-effects follow, such as Stricture, Ulcerations, deep-seated Inflammation and Bladder Troubles.

PERSONAL — HAVE YOUR HANDS HONESTLY read and the many future events of your life accurately prognosticated by the celebrated skilful SCIENTIFIC PALMIST, acknowledged by hundreds of the best intellects, his patrons, as the finest and most remarkable reader of hands in this country, and pronounced superior to Cheiro.

PROF. C. IRVIN ALTHOUSE,

PROF. ALTHOUSE'S readings, which are thorough and scientific, have nothing in common whatever with the fictitious readings of illiterate humbug palmists, psychics, fortune tellers, etc., who scarcely know one life line or mount from the other. A satisfactory reading can only be had from one who has thoroughly mastered the laws of this wonderful science through years of critical study, [illegible] ed out. Careful advice given in domestic, love affairs, etc. Also of financial success or failure, changes, deaths, investments, vocation in life, and any other important things you should know.

PROF. ALTHOUSE read the hands of E. H. Sothern, who says: "I find your reading coincide with Cheiro's," and "I am greatly interested in scientific palmistry." Paul Gilmore, actor, says: "I want to express to you my keen appreciation of your reading; it is by far the most scientific I have ever had." Burton Holmes, formerly read by Cheiro, says, "Your reading is the most interesting I have yet had." Juliet Crosby, actress, says: "Prof. Althouse has given me a most helpful, complete and satisfactory reading." Tod Sloan, famous jockey, formerly read by Cheiro, says: "Your reading is the most complete I have ever had, and can say for your work that it is wonderful." Also read hands of Admiral Schley, Gen. Chaffee, Senators Clark and Pettigrew, Baron Rothschild, Huntington, Ysaye, Joaquin Miller, Susan B. Anthony, Sousa, Innes, Kryl, Chiaffarelli, Creatore, Modjeska, Marlowe, Caruso, Sembrich, Gadski, Warde, Kidder, Jefferson, Edison, Hobson, Wilton Lackaye, Nat Goodwin, Maxine Elliott and hundreds of others.

Intelligent high class patronage solicited—those capable of appreciating the superior qualities of a fine reader. ALL READING STRICTLY CONFIDENTIAL.

ASTROLOGY AND THE HOROSCOPE.

PROF. ALTHOUSE has given many years of critical study to, and is an experienced practitioner in the science of MODERN ASTROLOGY, the casting of horoscopes, etc. THE HOROSCOPE is decidedly a guide in life and shows remarkable things when properly cast. Scientific predictions on all questions of life made by this science, as calculated through the trained judgment of Prof. Althouse—WILL STAGGER THE SENSES. PROF. ALTHOUSE IN HIS LARGE AND SUCCESSFUL PRACTICE has acquired a varied experience of his fellow-men in life; HIS WONDERFUL PROFICIENCY IN HAND READING AND CASTING OF HOROSCOPES enables him to see for the future, both the good and the evil. THE MOST PRIVATE CONFIDENCES ARE REPOSED IN HIM, AND HIS ADVICE IS SOUGHT IN THE MOST DIFFICULT AND CRITICAL CIRCUMSTANCES. Daily and evenings, Sunday, 11 to 3. STUDIO PARLORS, [illegible] S. MRS. MASSON, the noted palmist of London, Eng., may be consulted at 522 S. SPRING ST. (Suite 11,)
by those desiring CAREFUL, CONSCIENTIOUS AND SCIENTIFIC HAND-READINGS FROM ONE OF THE FOREMOST PALMISTS OF THE DAY.

The earnest student and thinker will soon learn, in his investigations along psychological lines, that what pertains to occult phenomena proper, can readily be distinguished from crude and oft-exposed SLEIGHT-OF-HAND TRICKS, the most common of which is the telling of the subject's name, age, etc. AFTER HE HAS HIMSELF WRITTEN THAT INFORMATION.

PALMISTRY, HONESTLY PRACTICED, WILL NOT tell your name, but it WILL give you information of considerable greater value in every day life.

Your vocation, your present line of work, matters of health, marriage and domestic life, financial conditions and ways and means of climbing out of a rut of ill luck into wide paths of success and prosperity can all be told you through scientific palmistry WITHOUT A SINGLE QUESTION, WRITTEN OR VERBAL.

MRS. MASSON DOES NOT CATER TO IGNORANT SUPERSTITION, BUT TO THE FINEST INTELLIGENCE.

FOR SALE—MINERAL WATER BOTTLING BUSINESS. This is thoroughly established and fully equipped. The business is complete in every detail, including horses and wagons, bottles, trays and pumping plant; on a good paying basis and is open to investigation. Price $2500, part time. Is netting $10 per day now.

MILLINERY, $375.
Fine little business in near-by town; clears $300 per year net; rent only $10 per month. Good stock and fixtures.

WANTED—ENERGETIC YOUNG MAN with plenty of push who would invest $800 in an established business that is netting over $400 per month; must have the best of references as to character and that natural business ability which makes a man successful. To such a party we are in position to offer an exceptional opening. The business will stand a thorough investigation and has an immense future.

PARTNER IN PLANING MILL, $2500.
This is an exceptional opportunity for a man to get into a fine business. The mill is located in the suburbs and in a section that assures it of a great future; want incoming man to look after the office details of the business. Come in and talk the matter over with us if you are looking for a good opening.

MEAT MARKET, $500.
The very best of fixtures; rent $30. This place is actually worth more than is being asked. It is only doing a business of $20 per day, but this is all cash trade over the counter. If in the hands of a live man who would put on wagon, trade could be nearly doubled.

We have a fine list of markets, groceries, rooming houses, ranches and opportunities of all kinds.

"OPPORTUNITY, MASTER OF HUMAN DESTINIES AM I."

I present a number of sound, reliable business opportunities today. These propositions I have carefully investigated, and I can cheerfully recommend them to those who are looking for exceptional business openings. Come in and see me if you find anything that interests you here. I have dozens of other propositions not mentioned in this column.

PAYING CIGAR STAND.
—$1500—
This is a regular bargain, rent only $35 per month. The lease is a good long one; business is now clearing $175 per month; better investigate this.

BUILDER WANTED WITH
—$2000 TO $3500—
A reliable business man desires to form partnership with practical builder; to build and sell houses on the installment plan; will invest from $3000 to $5000 if reliable second person can be found who will invest a similar amount; this is a timely chance for the right man. Big profits are certain; investigate.

ONE-HALF INTEREST IN GROCERY AND LIQUOR BUSINESS.
—$12,500—
Something doing here; this business is now yielding big dividends; other profitable lines besides groceries and here's a golden opportunity to get into a progressive business; easily worth more money.

GOOD GROCERY CHANCE.
This store is doing a business of $125 per day; 3½ years' lease at $20 per day; no better grocery opening in the city; this is one you should go after. It will sell quick.

DRY GOODS AND GENT'S FURNISHINGS; SNAP.
ONLY $400.
This is really the bargain of the day; a $600 stock of dry goods and gent's furnishings, including fixtures, will be sold for $400; concern is now doing a business of from $70 to $90 per week; 2 years lease at low rent; there are also 3 good living-rooms; you couldn't invest $400 to better advantage.

EXCELLENT GROCERY OPPORTUNITY.
—$2000—
The stock will inventory from $2000 to $2500, in a good town near Los Angeles; doing a business of $1500 per month and absolutely netting 15 per cent.; this will be sold only to the buyer or no sale made; rent is very low and other expenses in proportion; will trade. This is something that deserves an immediate investigation. One of the best things I have listed for some time.

COAL AND WOOD YARD.
$1500 AND INVENTORY.
Establishment is doing a business of $800 per week; handles hay and grain; has been established for years; it is one of the most profitable businesses of its kind in the city. If I were looking for this class of business, I would jump at this particular proposition.

FINE RESTAURANT.
—$1600—
This is good opportunity for a practical man; the location is a particularly good one; the rent is low; business now clears [illegible] per month; could you do better anywhere with $1600?

FRED A. POLLOCK,
305 O. T. Johnson Bldg.

YOU CAN'T GET RICH WORKING FOR others. They walk plank; you sink in mire. Walk on solid ground; learn to make profitable real estate investments. Get my book; price 25c. It may be turning point in your life. W. A. CARNEY, room 422 Stimson Blk. 10

FOR SALE—½ INTEREST IN OLD ESTABlished real estate business, fine office on ground floor, large list of good property, horse, buggy and automobile, and some good lots; fine opportunity to get an established paying business. Address R, box 74, TIMES OFFICE. 10

FOR SALE—SALOON, GOOD FIXTURES, fine location, doing a splendid business; will take for the whole what the license is worth; there is fine new cash register, large safe and everything that goes with a first-class saloon; this is a snap. F. M. FORTUNE, 244½ S. Broadway, room 11.

WANTED—STATE MANAGERS IN OHIO corporation manufacturing household necessity making some important changes and has some State managerships open for business; salary $1800 per annum; commission and office expenses. Address [illegible] MANAGER, Ontario Bldg., Toledo, O.

FOR SALE—LIQUOR LICENSE RESTAUrant, seats 100 people, big trade; good prices; clears over $400 monthly; over 3 years' lease; the best-supplied and fitted restaurant in city, on the main principal street; investigate now. TUCKER & MARKS, 135 E. Second. 10

INVEST YOUR IDLE MONEY, MUCH OR little, where it will return you an immediate income. BETTER THAN REAL ESTATE, BETTER THAN MINING; best investment in the West. The price of a common city lot will make you rich. Its local, you can see it; we can show you. No fear of contradiction. Get a list of our stockholders. They are business people. You can't turn it down. Look into it before opportunity is gone. Telephone, write or call for particulars. We promise you shall not be worried. We present the opportunity and the facts; it's then up to you. Nothing like it ever offered here before. Immense profits! Immense advances! It's a monopoly. We make good in every statement. We guarantee. Bank guarantee, if you please! No matter how little you have to invest, see us; no matter how much, see us. See us before it is too late. We mail particulars immediately on request.

NOT A MAGICIAN

An Explanation of Margaret Graham's Wonderful Psychic Powers

"You are a magician," exclaimed a prominent business man of Los Angeles who had called on Margaret Graham at her parlors, 539½ South Broadway, one day last week. He had reached a point in a certain business scheme where all seemed dark before him. Success or failure depended upon his next move. In sheer desperation, having read of Mrs. Graham's remarkable powers, he invoked her aid. He began to explain the dilemma in which he was placed, and the points upon which he wanted light.

Mrs. Graham stopped him almost before he opened his mouth. "There is no need to tell me all that," she said; "I will not only advise you in regard to the difficulties you are placed in, but I will tell you what those difficulties are."

And she did. If Mrs. Graham had merely listened to her caller and then given him the advice he asked for, he would doubtless have been very little impressed. Anybody can give advice after a question or a problem has been laid before them.

Under such conditions the business man might or he might not have concluded to follow Mrs. Graham's advice, as one would do with any friend or counsellor.

But when he was told not only what he wanted, but why he wanted it; when he was enlightened not only as to the proper course he should take, but the circumstances which made that course advisable, it impressed him deeply.

It was at this point that he exclaimed, as outlined in the beginning of the article:

"You are a magician."

MARGARET GRAHAM.

The main thread of this article may be dropped for a moment, to add that the business man followed Mrs. Graham's advice and acted upon the information she gave him.

As the result the mountain of difficulty which oppressed his mind was rolled away almost instantaneously, and a policy was instituted which brought him great remuneration. The prominent business man—the fact that this is a much-abused term shall not be allowed to prevent its use when it is the truth—is now a firm believer in Mrs. Graham's powers and consults her whenever a difficult problem comes up for solution.

The visitor's exclamation was natural enough, and was perhaps warranted by the wonderful display of power; but as a matter of fact there is nothing magical about what Mrs. Graham does, nor does she claim that such is the case. There is much that is mysterious, according to our present lights, but there is no magic, as the term is commonly understood.

This is easily susceptible of explanation. Why is not one man you meet on the street as strong as another?

Why is not a certain woman of your acquaintance as beautiful as a certain other woman? Why is one person more endowed with brains than another?

As a matter of fact we are all differently endowed. To a gifted few things are possible which are impossible to the average person.

The person who adheres to certain beliefs and insists that nothing else is probable or even possible is the real skeptic, although he firmly believes that he is orthodox.

Such a man would declare it to be impossible for Mrs. Graham to tell the business man what he had come for.

He will cheerfully admit that Smith has the money-making faculty, that Jones has the true spirit of a poet, that Thompson can make friends easily while Brown cannot; but he will not admit that one person possesses more than another the faculty of divination.

Intelligent reasoning people know better. Many things have happened, wireless telegraphy by way of illustration, to convince us that there are more things 'twixt heaven and earth than are dreampt of in our philosophy.

Some people are backward, diffident or even afraid to take advantage of the powers possessed by Mrs. Graham. They class her work with "fortune-telling" and similar sops to the vulgarly credulous.

But—

We hire one man to bring in coal because he can do it better than another; we hire another man to dig a ditch for the same reason; we engage a trained lawyer or physician because he KNOWS MORE about certain things than we do.

Then, if any person is possessed of certain mysterious powers which we do not possess, the use of which will do us great good, why should we not avail ourselves of them, as we would engage ourselves of the services of a lawyer, a doctor or a laborer?

Mrs. Graham has a charmingly womanly personality. She makes no pretense to being other than exactly what she is.

Her very presence inspires confidence. Many a burden has been lifted many a mind has been illumined, many a failing fortune has been rejuvenated and placed on a firm basis in the quiet atmosphere of Mrs. Graham's consultation rooms.

AIR BLAST STRIKES FRUIT.

High Wind Shakes Orange Trees Severely.

Sand Drifting Over Tracks Delays Trains.

Storm General Over Southern California and Arizona.

High pressure in the desert region exhausting through the Cajon Pass and over the mountains caused a great rush of air over the San Gabriel Valley and other parts of Southern California yesterday. It blew a gale or stronger in many localities; in others a moderate or light wind, according to the degree of shelter of the particular vicinity affected in each case.

Some damage was done to oranges, trains were delayed by drifting sand and considerable havoc was worked on telephone and telegraph wires.

Not over 2 per cent. of the oranges shaken from the trees in the Covina, Azusa-Glendora and Monrovia-Duarte districts, was the report of J. L. Matthews of Covina last evening. Mr. Matthews made a trip of the orange groves along the line of those towns in an automobile and was able to make a fairly thorough investigation. He found that a good deal of the fruit hanging on the trees had been bruised so that it is likely to go into lower grades when packed for eastern shipment.

The wind did more or less damage in Pasadena and environs. Up at Altadena chairs were blown from front porches and fruit trees were injured.

ROOFS OFF AT RIVERSIDE.

The damage to oranges about Riverside was not great, according to an estimate made by Martin A. Chase of the Chase Nursery Company.

"Citrus fruit," he said, "is now in good condition to stand a storm. Had this blow occurred two weeks later the fruit would have suffered greatly, but now the oranges and lemons are both hanging well and the blow will not damage the crop to any great extent. I do not think the trees in any locality will be damaged to amount to 5 per cent. Taking the valley through an estimate of 5 per cent. damage would be excessive. The crop is now in good shape."

One of the freaks of the wind was to lift the cover of the reservoir of the Riverside Water Company on Rubidoux mountain. This was a light structure covering a 5,000,000 gallon tank and it was distributed along the side of the mountain in small bits.

Minnehaha hall at the Sherman Institute on the girls' dormitories was partially unroofed without any loss of life.

Another loss which has caused much comment is the overthrow of the big wooden horse that stood in front of Otley Papineau's harness shop on Orange street. It had stood for twenty years and with it one of the city landmarks has gone. The greatest inconvenience from the storm was the stalling of railroad trains. In this the Salt Lake was the greatest sufferer. During the morning a freight went off the track at Stalder. The 11:36 train was sent out to the scene of the wreck to exchange passengers with the 1:10 train from Los Angeles. While the one from Riverside was waiting at the rear end of the derailed train the sand drifted in behind it and cut it off from Riverside. A Southern Pacific train is also stalled at Cucamonga on the sandy stretch between Colton and Ontario.

The barn of A. J. Stalder near Stalder Station, containing sixty horses and a large quantity of machinery, was actually shoved five feet along the ground by the wind.

ROOFING GOES AT CORONA.

About Corona the gale was reported as the most severe norther experienced in that vicinity for years. Trees and small barns were blown over, windows were broken and the tar paper roofing was removed from the operahouse and Masonic building. One of the 'busses going to the morning train was overturned by the wind, but the passengers escaped injury. Considerable damage to fruit is reported from some groves.

BLOW IN ORANGE COUNTY.

The first desert wind of the season carried clouds of dust over Orange county. Slight damage was done to oranges from being battered against the trees. Olives will also suffer from the blow. In Santa Ana several trees on damp ground toppled over, but with that exception there was no damage reported.

AT THE SEASHORE, TOO.

The Pacific Electric Railway Company also had its troubles with the sandstorm and constant delays were the order of the day east of Long Beach, cars being stalled by the shifting, drifting sand which covered the tracks. The worst case reported was between Huntington Beach and Newport. The 9 a.m. car from Newport ran off the track one and one-half miles from Huntington Beach, the sand blowing over the track to a depth of several inches. Shovels were secured and for half an hour the crew worked for a clear stretch of track, but the sand drifted in faster than it was thrown off. Finally conductor Burrill started out blindly for Huntington Beach. Most of the time he could not see ten feet ahead. Arriving at that town he telephoned his troubles to Long Beach and a wrecking crew with a flat car of ties was sent to the scene. A platform was built in order to jack the ditched car back onto the track.

The storm prevailed at Long Beach all day, but did no damage beyond shifting clouds of sand into homes to the discomfort of housewives.

The windstorm was general over Southern California and Arizona.

NERVY VICTIM DIES.

Charles H. Shamp, who fell beneath a northbound Main-street car a week ago, died late last night at the California Hospital. Shamp was badly hurt in the accident, but smoked a cigarette just afterward and evinced the greatest nerve during the operation, when his left leg was amputated. Shamp lived at No. 3700 Widney street. The remains were removed to Pierce Bros.' morgue, where an inquest will be held tomorrow.

CLUB ELECTION.

New Board of Directors Selected for California Club at Close of Prosperous Year.

The annual election of a board of directors for the California Club took place last night at the clubhouse, Fifth and Hill streets. With no opposition the following were elected members of the board: Walter S. Newhall, Arthur G. Wells, E. C. Bailey, J. O. Koepfli, and J. S. Torrance.

F. S. Hicks, who has been secretary of the club, has tendered his resignation, and a new secretary will be appointed by the newly-elected board. They will meet to organize during the ensuing week. The club has just closed a year of great prosperity and harmony. A few weeks ago its membership reached the limit, 750, and there are now applications on file.

UNDELIVERED TELEGRAMS.

There are undelivered telegrams at the Western Union for Geo. M. Rolph, W. W. Norris, M. S. Walker, George Letoe, W. M. Conklin, Mrs. R. H. Rusch, Miss Christine Stone, A. W. Glessner, T. W. Burger, F. E. Fletcher, Judge C. J. St. John, R. O. Applegate, F. E. Milcer, Emil Lerney, Mrs. Ellen M. Tucker, The California Ore Company, Haibara, and Mrs. A. L. Clason.

FOOTBALL BANQUET.

Football men of St. Vincent's College were banqueted last night at the Angelus. Prof. Reardan was master of ceremonies and Rev. J. S. Glass, president of the college, was host. Speeches were made by the football men. Coach Haggerty and Capt. Stuart told of the attempt of the team to win the championship. The theme of each speechmaker was a game with U.S.C. for the championship of the Southland. Isidore B. Dockweiler spoke in praise of the game.

STANDARD OIL HELPS NEGROES.

Rockefeller and O'Day Visit Church in Arkansas and Leave Some Money for Repairs, etc.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

HOT SPRINGS (Ark.) Dec. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] As a result of the visit of John D. Rockefeller and Daniel O'Day to the negro Baptist Church on Thanksgiving night the congregation are congratulating themselves on what will practically be a new church. Mr. O'Day was very much interested in the devotion of these simple negro folk, but their church struck him as an inadequate church of winter nights. He therefore generously offered to enlarge the building, renovate it and install therein an up-to-date heating apparatus. His offer was accepted with praise, and work has already been begun.

Mr. O'Day has been associated with Mr. Rockefeller in the Standard Oil business since 1870. His Baptist work here will interest his business friends.

FALL RUINED TRADESMEN.

Collapse of Roof of London Railway Station, Recently, Closes Streets and Cuts off Business.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Dec. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] One cannot recall a disaster of any sort, either by land or sea, so far-reaching in its effects as the terrible collapse of the roof at Charing Cross railway station. The loss of life, considering how many people were about at the time, can only be characterized as marvellously small.

The disaster spells ruin to the tradesmen in the streets close by the station, as, with a view to the safety of the public, the police closed the greater part of Villiers street, the facade which faces Charing Cross underground station and a long stretch of Craven street. The loss to the shops alone is estimated at $25,000.

FOR PURER POLITICS.

Six Bills Going to New York Legislature to Correct Faulty Ballot System in that State.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] At least six bills to remedy defects in the election and primary laws will be sent to the Legislature as soon as it opens, by the Election Laws Improvement Association. They provide for the Australian-Massachusetts ballot for direct primary nominations on the Wisconsin plan; for a publicity and corrupt-practices act; for obtaining a recount, and for the use of ballot machines in this city.

The last bill is considered most important of all by William N. Cohen and his associates on the committee. Manufacturers of various voting machines have assured Mr. Cohen that any machine can be adapted easily to the Massachusetts ballot plan.

HAS HIS FATHER'S SKILL.

Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., Brings Down Large Elk and Wild Boar in New Hampshire.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEWPORT (N. H.) Dec. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., started out early this morning with George Brown, one of the guides of Corbin's Park, and one of his classmates, Harold Edgell, was with Guide William Morrison. Both parties took lunches along and stayed out till darkness set in.

Young Roosevelt shot a large elk at a range of 150 yards, and his guide says it was one of the best shots ever made in the park. He also brought down a wild boar, and Edgell a large buck deer.

They stayed last night at Central Station. They will drive tomorrow to Claremont Junction, where they will take the train for New York and go from there to Washington.

Mme. Bernhardt Has Something to Say About Clergy and Alleged Subsidized Press of Montreal.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

HAMILTON (Ont.) Dec. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mme. Bernhardt, in an interview in her private car this afternoon, was asked with reference to the Quebec mobbing incident. Mme. Bernhardt said:

"After two letters published by Archbishop Bruchesi of Montreal, and after performances of La Sorciere, the inquisition scene in which had caused the prelate considerable emotion, some young fanatics of Quebec were excited against me.

"A newspaper of Quebec, L'Evenment, which is said to be the organ of Archbishop Bruchesi and which has already published an attack against me, resolved to excite the population by causing me to say things in an interview at which no representative of that newspaper assisted—a most stupid and injurious thing of the people of Canada."

AN AWAKENING OF CONSCIENCE.

Big Men Brand Employment of Child Labor.

South Alone Holding Sixty Thousand "Slaves."

From One to Two Million in the United States.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]
WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—At yesterday's session of the National Child Labor Committee Felix Adler of New York City, chairman of the national committee, spoke on "The Menace of Child Labor."

Adler said that while the American conscience revolts against women in some parts of Europe performing labor in the fields, there are in this country between one and two million child laborers. The evil, he continued, was not only widespread but was increasing. There were, he said, about 16,000 children working in the mines, about 7000 in the [illegible] industry, and the number of child laborers in the southern textile industry has increased within a few years from 24,000 to about 60,000. He said there was reason to believe that in some parts of the country similar conditions exist. The cause of the evil he declared to be "the American disease" —the same disease the fearful symptoms of which lately have been exposed in the investigation of the insurance companies in New York—the separation between business and morals and the unscrupulous disregard of rights when material success is at stake. He declared, however, that the conscience of the people was everywhere awakening and there were signs of a great moral upheaval, and that the children should be the first to obtain relief.

[illegible] TO THE SOUTH.

Samuel McCune Lindsay agreed with Adler that the number of children employed throughout the country increased faster than the efforts to remedy the situation.

A. J. McKelway of Charlotte, [illegible], after stating that 91 per cent. of the children employed in manufacturing [illegible] in the South were to be found in the four cotton growing and manufacturing States of North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Alabama, said:

"The wide awakening that has come to our people, that the abolition of [illegible] slavery marked the beginning of [illegible] child slavery; that our pet institution is not different in the [illegible] from what it was for a hundred years in Old and New England—an institution distinguished for long hours [illegible] and cursed by the employment of children on a larger scale [illegible] than any other institution.

SIXTY THOUSAND SLAVES.

"At the dawn of the twentieth century sixty thousand children in southern mills [illegible] 6 to 16 years old, working [illegible] a day or twelve [illegible] reducing the wage [illegible] necessary for the support of a family instead of what will [illegible] of manhood wages. The South is also awakening to the fact that its characteristic industry has intrenched itself behind all [illegible] of the South that [illegible] legislation in opposition to the popular will that would expedite the enactment of humane laws and their enforcement."

I have been treated by Dr. Schiffman for years. I have tried all his different methods, and can say unhesitatingly no dentist or physician has ever operated with such success or skill. In extracting teeth he did it without any pain to me. It is a great pleasure to me to recommend him and his method of treatment.
MILO M. POTTER,
Prop. Van Nuys Hotel, L. A., and Hotel Potter, Santa Barbara.

Several years ago Dr. Schiffman did some crown work for me which has proven entirely satisfactory. The work was done painlessly and with great skill. It gives me great pleasure to recommend him.
IRVING R. SMITH,
L. A. Times.

It gives me great pleasure to state that Dr. Schiffman extracted an impacted wisdom tooth for me, which had been giving me great annoyance for years. It was extracted absolutely without a particle of pain to me. It was easily worth 100 times the amount paid.
ROBERT MARSH,
Of Robert Marsh & Co., 302-303 H. W. Hellman Bldg.

On account of some unfortunate experience I had in the extraction of my teeth I became a great coward in this respect. Today Dr. Schiffman extracted one of my very refractory teeth without causing me one particle of pain. D. K. TRASK,
Judge Superior Court, Los Angeles.

Ten years ago a reputable dentist of Virginia told me that a certain molar tooth could not be satisfactorily saved, and that it would probably not be of service for one year. It has not only served me for ten years as Dr. Schiffman saved and crowned it, and comparatively speaking, without pain. I sing his praise.

Flexible Rubber Dental Plates

Have many advantages over the old, thick, cumbersome, ordinary rubber plates and even over gold plates, being much lighter and thinner. These plates are flexible, only a trifle thicker than heavy writing paper, fit closer and adhere better to the roof of the mouth. Particles of food and small seeds cannot get under them. They will last longer, are stronger than any others and will not break, as they will give first, being flexible. Dr. Schiffman's own process, and made only by us.

It is an opportunity of a lifetime to have an income for life, for the investment of only a few hundred dollars. We are buying land at $5 and $10 per acre where water can be had at a depth of 6 to 12 feet and an irrigating plant can be installed for $800 with sufficient capacity to irrigate 640 acres. This land will be worth $50 to $75 in one year's time. Everybody knows that land cannot be bought anywhere in the State of California for less than $100 per acre in the next 5 years.

We will sell you as many shares as you wish at 10 cents each. For every $10 worth of these shares that you buy we will give you a contract and clear receipt on one acre of land fully paid in this syndicate; however, profits of the produce raised from the tract controlled by this syndicate will be divided equally among all the shareholders, as well as at all times having the land. We will absolutely guarantee you $3 for every dollar invested with this company in two years' time. As soon as this land is purchased we will issue reports to each shareholder showing the section, township and range, and what adjoining land is being sold for.

We will gladly give references to any one who may desire, and be more than pleased to have any one who is interested at all in buying farming land to call at this office.

We are open from 10 to 12 a.m. and 2 to 4 p.m., and Monday, Wednesday and Saturday evenings as well. Every share of stock entitles you to a vote in electing our officers and directors. As soon as we get in our irrigating plant we will not sell any more stock for less than 20 cents per share. Your shares will entitle you to your interest on both land and improvements on same, as well as the produce sold from the land. We are confident that we will be able to make you at least from $25 to $50 per acre profit on the produce alone raised from this land.

Remember, procrastination is the thief of time. So kindly call at our office and investigate at once, as only a limited number of shares will be sold.

LIBERAL CABINET IS COMPLETED.

ONLY THING NOW LACKING IS EDWARD'S APPROVAL.

Ex-Premier Balfour Addresses His Constituents but Declines to Discuss Either His Own Platform or That of His Opponents in the Coming Campaign—Pleads for Unity.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

LONDON, Dec. 9.—Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman has completed his cabinet. The King will return to London tomorrow and receive the Liberal Premier in audience at Buckingham Palace Sunday evening in order to give his formal approval of the ministry.

Arthur J. Balfour, addressing his constituents at Manchester this afternoon, declined to discuss the platform of the Unionists or of the Liberals in the coming campaign. He defended the action of the Unionist government in its retention of office, on the ground that it was essential to wait until the Anglo-Japanese treaty was finally concluded and other essential features of the government programme carried out. This had been done, with the exception of the Re-distribution Bill, an outline of which had been given to Parliament, but divisions within the Unionist party led the government to the conclusion that it would be impossible at present to carry a measure which demanded absolute unity.

The Premier made a strong plea for unity during the elections. Mr. Balfour predicted the failure of the Liberals to carry out their programme, which he understood, was the upsetting of many things accomplished by the Unionists, but he hoped they would stick to their resolution to follow the lines of foreign policy of the Unionist government.

Continuing, Mr. Balfour referred briefly to home rule. He asserted that whether the Radicals were ashamed of it or not, Home Rulers they were, and Home Rulers they would remain.

The meeting passed a vote of confidence in Mr. Balfour.

WHITTIER.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SURPRISE FOR STAR WOMEN.

WHITTIER, Dec. 9.—The new officers of the Eastern Star gave a surprise to the retiring officers Friday evening. The ladies were assembled for their regular meeting and after the business was transacted the doors of the banquet room were thrown open revealing tables spread with an elaborate banquet. Another surprise was given to the lodge in the announcement that Mrs. Mabel Givin, retiring worthy matron, had been appointed district deputy matron.

The first inter-High School debate of the season was held at the Union High School building at this place last evening. Compton was represented by Messrs. Peck and Belien, and Whittier by Howard L. Way and Charles Williams. The question was: "Resolved, that the religious organizations are not justified in accepting what is popularly known as tainted money." Whittier took the negative and won 167 2-3 points as against 151 2-3 for Compton. Mr. Way was awarded first place and Mr. Williams second.

Hotel del Coronado always open.

Loneliest Place on Earth.

Ed Howe of the Atchison Globe thus writes of probably the loneliest place on earth: "About 1100 miles west of Honolulu we encountered the Midway Islands, a coral reef only a few feet above sea level, where a cable station is maintained. All cable messages from Japan, Manila, etc., are relayed there, and the cable operator has lived in the lonely place three years. His wife, two assistants and several servants accompany him. The United States maintains twenty marines at the place. There is a good spring of water, but no vegetation; the surface of the main island is covered with sand but the cable operator manages to keep a few goats. Capt. Smith visited the place with the Siberia on his last trip, anchoring outside, as the harbor is very shallow. When the Siberia anchored there, it was the first vessel the cable operator had seen in five months. You have noted in traveling, lonely railroad stations, but you have never seen anything equaling in loneliness the cable station on the Midway Islands. This cable operator lives nearly 3000 miles from his nearest neighbor, in the middle of the Pacific Ocean. Occasionally he sees a supply boat once in two months, but oftener he sees nothing, save his own reflection in the mirror, for five months at a time."

Stick to the Farm, Boys.

Often in perplexity has the question been asked: "Why do boys leave the farm?" Today we make the same query not by way of trying to discover why they leave, but in sheer wonderment at their leaving. Secretary Wilson has just given us many good reasons why the boys should stick to the farm. He has told us that the total value of this year's crops is $6,415,000,000—$256,000,000 more than last year; that the wealth of the farmer has increased 36 per cent. in six years, and that average minimum price for farm hands is $7.31 an acre more than it was in 1900. The prosperity is country-wide. The South is sharing it with the North and West. As the basis of our industrial activities it has been doing yeoman service in helping to find work for the thousands of immigrants that have been pouring into this country for a twelve-month. This unprecedented prosperity has caused the farmer's lines to fall in pleasant places. His boys and girls are going to college. The telephone keeps him in close touch with his neighbors, the town and the markets. The rural free delivery gives him the postal advantages of the city. The trolley car in many instances passes almost by his door. In his home are music and books, every needful comfort and not a few luxuries.—[Chicago Evening Post.

In Jail One Hundred Times.

The "King of Tramps" got a term in a French jail the other day. He said he was born of wealthy parents and educated for the bar. He lost money by gambling, and to pay the debt broke open his father's safe. "Turned out of doors, I became a tramp, and have been ever since a terror to all honest folk. I have toured France twenty times, and have been all over Belgium, Germany, Italy, Switzerland and Spain. I have been shut up in almost every prison in Europe." The magistrate having informed him that he would to go to jail once more, he cried, "Hooray! I have scored my century. I had been sentenced exactly ninety-nine times before by magistrates all over Europe."

Folk Did Not Plagiarize.

"Folk as a plagiarist—how he stole a recent funeral speech from Bryan." Such, in headline lingo, is a widely circulated story to the discredit of the Missouri reformer. As a matter of fact, Folk shouted it out in the plainest of words that Bryan had said so and so; and then proceeded to apply Bryan's utterances to the case under consideration. But the wires gave only part of the speech, and Folk was victimized. However, nobody with any sense believed the charge that a man of such character had turned both fool and knave overnight, as it were.—[Philadelphia Record.

Books Written in Jail.

A publisher was talking about Oscar Wilde's strange book, "De Profundis," with its pathetic decoration of a bird beating its wings against the bars of a cell, says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. "Wilde's is not the first book to have been written in jail," he said. "Jail, in fact, seems to be a good place to write books in. Literary men surpass themselves there. John Bunyan wrote 'Pilgrim's Progress' in jail, Cervantes wrote 'Don Quixote' in prison. Defoe laid the plans for 'Robinson Crusoe' during a term of confinement imposed on him for the writing of a pamphlet called 'The Shortest Way With the Dissenters.' Leigh Hunt wrote 'Rimini' in jail. Sir Walter Raleigh, during his fourteen years' confinement in the Tower of London, wrote his excellent 'History of the World.' Silvio Pellico and Tasso both did their best work in jail."

Chance for a Parcels Post.

It was hardly necessary for Senators Platt and Depew to deny that they have any intention of resigning their seats in Congress. But with what a diminution of political power and prestige do the two Senators of the Empire State enter upon the present session! Platt's loss of influence is such that it might be quite possible to establish a national as well as international parcels post in spite of his opposition as head of an express company. The experiment is at least worth an effort.—[Philadelphia Record.

Our Stupendous Sale

Starts Tomorrow---Monday---Morning

Several thousand articles of jewelry will be sold at prices that will hardly pay for the gold used in the settings or cost of cutting the stones—Rings, Brooches, Studs, Scarf Pins, Earrings, etc., etc., that seem to be worth from $50 to $500—tomorrow from $1.50 to $4.50. Such a colossal display and dazzling sight has never before been witnessed in Los Angeles. Crowds will swarm and jump at this great chance, so be on hand and get first choice—read, reflect, then act quickly.

MAIL ORDERS

Send us the advertised price in a letter with the picture of your selection and you will be more than delighted with the article you receive by return mail. We guarantee prompt delivery and prepay all forwarding charges. Each order is filled with the distinct understanding that every article is exactly as represented or money will be refunded. We have the largest exclusive jewelry mail order business in the world. Our goods are worn by the wealthiest and most fashionable people the world over. You may order your Christmas gifts by mail with the positive assurance that they will reach you promptly and give more satisfaction than you would receive if you were to pay from two to three times the amount for less attractive articles.

OUR GUARANTEE

We warrant each and every stone to retain its brilliancy forever and the mountings to give perfect satisfaction. We will give $10,000 to any charitable institution in Los Angeles if it can be shown that we have ever refused to replace a stone that was returned as unsatisfactory.

Beware! Several concerns in various parts of this city are attempting to imitate our business. If you want the real article, come direct to headquarters; we are the importers of Gophir diamonds and have no branches or agents in this city.

FACT AND COMMENT.

WHILE visiting a section of the city where nearly everything [illegible] witness to a high order of [illegible], one feature stood out in [illegible] by contrast. The hour was [illegible], but along whole blocks in [illegible] of many houses stood nasty old [illegible], some full of garbage fouling the ambient air, other boxes empty, [illegible] less foul of smell. Inquiry [illegible] out the information that the [illegible] had been put out after the [illegible] wagon had passed by. The [illegible] dweller in this section said [illegible] burning emphasis that some of [illegible] neighbors had the mañana microbe [illegible] this habit of being late with [illegible] garbage boxes was a chronic disease, and that, moreover, the afflicted [illegible] to take medicine to make them [illegible]. He said those belated [illegible] would stand their ground until [illegible] days later the garbage wagon [illegible]. Well, if they were late for [illegible] trip they would be sure to [illegible] for Friday. This unwilling [illegible] in this neighborhood had some [illegible] words for his neighbors, too, [illegible] they would not invest a dollar [illegible] in a zinc garbage can, with a [illegible] on it to make things look better [illegible] better.

[illegible] Is Wrong.

There is not a proper ordinance [illegible] this sort of conduct there [illegible] be. Civic pride and a due [illegible] for the rights and sensibilities [illegible] will always prevent such acts [illegible] part of right-minded persons [illegible] a due regard for the decencies of life. Where such regard is [illegible] absent such acts should be a [illegible]. No city in America [illegible] pay so much attention to these [illegible] as Los Angeles. This is [illegible] and pleasure resort for many [illegible] annually. The gains made [illegible] people from this tourist [illegible] are very large. People in poor [illegible] in spite of any effort they [illegible] to overcome this abnormal [illegible], are, no doubt, fastidious. [illegible] be our effort to make the [illegible] inviting as possible. There are [illegible] considerations just as grave, [illegible]. We owe to our neighbors [illegible] all semblance of a nuisance [illegible] their noses. The health of the [illegible] be at stake in just such small [illegible] of detail as this. The indignant [illegible] on the street in the section referred to said: "I am not saying [illegible] I am trying to sell my property [illegible] block, and go to some neighborhood [illegible] more attention is paid to [illegible] decencies of life." It is [illegible] to avoid such a condition [illegible] garbage cans should be [illegible] unsightly boxes, which breed [illegible]. These cans should be [illegible] the garbage cart. As [illegible] they should be re[illegible] the back yard. There [illegible] laid on the ground [illegible] open can turned so [illegible] beat into it with all [illegible]. Sanitary rules ought [illegible] strictly enforced.

[illegible] Again.

[illegible] ago this department [illegible] for trimming the shade [illegible] the sidewalks, so that the branches, even when drenched [illegible] rain, shall not hang within six [illegible] the sidewalk. It is understood [illegible] police department has served [illegible] general notice on property owners [illegible] have their trees trimmed. In [illegible] this notice has been [illegible] with, but in thousands of [illegible] been ignored. Here is an[illegible] and thoughtless disregard [illegible], yes, of the rights of [illegible]. It is awfully unpleasant for [illegible] much more so for a woman, [illegible] wet or dusty branch swing[illegible] a pretty hat. Give the de[illegible] another trial of a second notice, then make an example of a [illegible] recalcitrants. The public has a [illegible] unobstructed sidewalks. This [illegible] with all due regard to the value [illegible]. By all means let us have [illegible] possible along the streets [illegible] homes of the people. There [illegible] the arboreal beauty in this [illegible] ought to be.

[illegible] Sign of Growth.

[illegible] Company has an advertise[illegible] The Times announcing a re[illegible] the price of gas to go into [illegible]ary 1, 1906. This advertise[illegible] a list of reductions extending [illegible] 1889, a period of seventeen [illegible] price of gas then was $2.25 [illegible] cubic feet. In January [illegible] be eighty-five cents. Each [illegible] has been a reduction in [illegible] now Los Angeles probably [illegible] cheap gas as any city of [illegible] the gas is not natural. [illegible] Greater New York during [illegible] campaign one of the candi[illegible] the votes of many "suck[illegible] them 75-cent gas if he [illegible] elected. He might as well [illegible]-cent gas. He would have [illegible] control of that matter as [illegible] as the editor of a "Yel[illegible]. But that shows that New [illegible] paying now over 75 cents for [illegible] is probably $1, or near [illegible] is to be 85 cents.

[illegible] Reductions?

[illegible] seventeen years has the price [illegible] consumers gone down from [illegible]? Mostly because of the [illegible] number of users of gas. In [illegible] were about 8000 persons in [illegible] gas for one purpose or [illegible] the present time there are [illegible] users on the pay roll of [illegible] company. This is an increase [illegible] cent. In 1889 the population [illegible]. Five times that would [illegible]. That is probably somewhat [illegible]. How much too high [illegible]. More people in proportion [illegible] gas for cooking now [illegible] fewer in proportion are using [illegible] lighting purposes, electric[illegible] largely usurped that func[illegible] houses have gas and [illegible] for lights, the other for [illegible] even for heating. Gas is [illegible] cooking or heating than [illegible] in the average house [illegible] intelligence and care are exer[illegible] is lighted in a moment [illegible] a moment when there [illegible]. There is nothing [illegible] up heat or after the [illegible]. Careful persons find by [illegible] of expenses that in [illegible] save 20 to 25 per cent. of the cost of cooking and heating by using gas as compared with using wood or coal. There is a sentiment about glowing fire in the grate, and those who can afford it indulge this sentiment. But families whose means are not ample do not enjoy this indulgence of esthetic tastes. They have to prefer economy to artistic effects.

—o—

The Strain Everywhere.

City officials feel keenly the strain put on them to keep the city up to the requirements of its great growth. The street department, in the schools, everywhere, this strain is felt. So it is among the corporations. The Gas Company is laying two miles of pipe a week to try to keep up with the requirements of expanding population. But the effort lags way behind what is desired. Sometimes persons who see any part of the situation make loud complaint about what is done. For example they see a pipe being laid along a block where there is only one house and think their blocks being neglected where there are half a dozen houses. No one will doubt that a corporation "is out for the stuff." They do not make such mistakes. Where a policy like the above is noted it is because there are two "dead ends" of pipes a block apart, and by making connection more efficient service is made possible, perhaps, for a wide area.

—o—

Property in Mexico.

To make a short excursion into the "Sister Republic," the Mexican Herald in an issue of recent date, notes the sale of a piece of property in the City of Mexico. The parcel is described as 71x150 feet on the corner of Gante and San Francisco streets. The improvements are a building two stories high, occupied by the American Bank on the ground floor and by the American Club upstairs. It is said to be one of the best pieces of property in the City of Mexico. The price given is $225,000 gold, or a trifle over $3000 a foot. The buyers are Addison H. McKay and L. C. Butch. W. Z. Vail made its sale for the Mercantile Banking Company, owners of the property. These men are all well known to many Los Angeles people. The property is said to pay in rentals a per cent. on the purchase price. It is not stated so, definitely, but it is to be inferred that this income is net. The general post-office is only a little distance from the property and this is said to rival in magnificence and beauty the new post-office in San Francisco, and will compare favorably with any excepting a few public buildings in the world.

—o—

He Likes Pasadena.

We are said to be given to self-praise here in this sun-kissed land of great advertisements and greater possibilities. Sometimes a rank outsider comes among us who actually makes us ashamed of our innate modesty. Such a case is that of J. M. Bartlett of Marsh & Bartlett, a real estate firm in Minneapolis. He writes a letter to the Minneapolis Tribune which appeared in the issue of October 26. He spent a winter in Pasadena fifteen years ago and compares things as they were then, with what he finds today. He has better perspective to gauge things than we have who see the city every day or so. This is what he says:

—o—

The Stranger's Views.

"I spent the winter here fifteen years ago, the winter the big boom 'went glimmering.' Pasadena then had less than 5000 people and no improvements except city water; today its residents claim 21,000 and everything favors the truth of their statement. It has seventy-seven miles of streets and alleys open for travel, ninety-two miles of cement sidewalk, 145 miles of cement curb and gutter, fifty-eight miles of sewer and six and one-half miles of asphalt pavement without a break or patch. Their building inspector's books show $1,623,152 expended in buildings from January 1 to November 1 this year, while $216,000 was expended last year in street improvements. Taxes of every nature, upon an assessment claimed to be on a 50 per cent. basis, are slightly less than 2½ per cent. The bonded debt of Pasadena is $282,000. Compare this, with their 20,000 people, with the debt of Minneapolis with her 265,000 population. I do not discover any evidence of a boom here, though values have advanced continuously in the past four years and property is now selling freely and held as firmly as at any time. At least 200 earnest, active real estate men giving their exclusive time—each with one or more good teams or autos—are an active factor in the development of all classes of business."

BY OWNERS AND DEALERS.

Williams, $500; lot West Twenty-ninth, near Western, Fred A. Ripley to A. A. House, $900.

—o—

Commonwealth Tract.

The following report comes from Thomas H. Hastings concerning the sale of property on the Commonwealth tract. Lots were purchased during the two weeks ending December 8, amounting to $29,700. These sales were made to J. H. Wood, Cecil Watson, M. H. D. Foster, F. Ormond, Elsie Kerckhoff, P. J. Hummel and M. M. Lewis. Street work is now under way.

—o—

For Investment.

Baker & Hathaway report the sale of a lot 50x125 feet, improved with two stores and flats above, No. 1320 West Eleventh street, for $7500. The rentals are $92.50 per month. This pays a good interest on the money.

—o—

Building Lots Sold.

Edwards & Winters report the sale of the southwest corner of Eighteenth street and Manhattan, 65x178 feet, for Mary B. Ellis to I. Norton, consideration stated, $2200. For Miss F. S. Squier to A. M. Bishop, the northwest corner of Twenty-first and Central avenue, consideration stated, $3200. The corner is to be improved with brick stores at once. For Nellie Murtough to a local buyer, lot 50x133 feet to alley, on the west side of Western avenue between Twenty-ninth and Thirtieth streets, consideration, $1050. For M. O. Tremain to M. B. Ellis, lot 50x150 to alley, on the east side of Hobart boulevard, between Twenty-ninth and Thirtieth streets, $1200.

—o—

For Small Farms.

About 800 acres of unimproved land about five miles southeast of Fullerton have been purchased from Jacob Stern by the Golden State Realty Company of Los Angeles. The price is $85,000. The property is to be subdivided into small acreage tracts.

SUBURBAN LOTS.

Free Sales in Several New Tracts, as Well as in Some Old Ones.

Willowbrook.

Harbert & Butterworth report the following sales during the week in different tracks: In Willowbrook No. 2, to H. A. Gillum, one lot, $325; J. A. Kearney, one lot, $325; Ida Murray, one lot, $325; H. D. Danford, one lot, $360; J. H. H. Faunace, one lot, $325; W. Enteman, two lots, $650; Frances Eddy, one lot, $325; M. Phillips, two lots, $650; W. H. Deamud, one lot, $325; J. T. Sumney, one lot, $325. The above are all half-acre lots. In the Prince tract: T. J. Spencer, four lots, $750; Walter N. Scott, one lot, $150. In San Gabriel Orange Grove tract, Anna C. Gregory, one lot, $400; M. J. Henry, one lot, $400; A. J. Cuneo, two lots, $800; Mabel Ramsey, one lot, $400; G. Wilson, two lots, $800. The above are half-acre lots and are in the center of San Gabriel.

—o—

Florencita Park.

Walter G. McCarty reports the sale of twenty lots in Florencita Park the past week, aggregating a total of $12,000. Several corner lots sold which brought from $800 to $1000, but the lots averaged in price $600 each.

—o—

New Hollywood Subdivision.

Mansfield Realty Company and Roberts & Green have recently bought forty acres from William Beesemyer, which they will subdivide immediately and put on the market. The tract is close to Hollywood city limits on Santa Monica avenue, corner of Lemona avenue. The Colegrove car line passes the tract, and when the street work, which has already been started, is all completed, this will make a high-class residence subdivision. The tract will be cut into large lots 50x150 feet, with high building restrictions. One block on the car line will be reserved for business purposes.

—o—

West Hollywood Lots.

Norton & Hay report the sales of lots in their Crescent Heights, West Hollywood tract, as follows: Irma Connell, 3 lots, $1645; H. A. Cole, 1 lot, $1200; John A. Conway, 1 lot, $1100; James A. Cashion, 4 lots, $4400; Julia E. Kreuscher, 2 lots, $1700; Joe A. Smart, 1 lot, $1700; Ulysses G. Ramey, 1 lot, $700; James H. Ramey, 1 lot, $1100; L. H. Jansen, 2 lots, $2200; L. H. Jansen, 2 lots, $2200; Minnie L. Wagner, 1 lot, $1100; Rebecca Lindsay, 1 lot, $1100; Robert H. Gilmore, 1 lot, $1100; Anders Norstrom, 2 lots, $1150; E. A. Huene, 2 lots, $2200.

New Tract Sells Rapidly.

F. D. Parker reports the sale of six pieces of acreage, total of seventy acres, lying at the southeast corner of Main street and Slauson avenue. This property has a frontage of a half-mile on Main street and extends east to South Park avenue, San Pedro street, passing through the center of it, and will have a frontage of over four thousand feet on the new Moneta-avenue car line which passes through the center of the tract on Sixty-first street. Fifteen acres of this property, known as the Main Street and Slauson Avenue tract, has already been improved with graded and oiled streets, etc. The remaining fifty-five acres is now being subdivided into 320 lots, averaging in size from 50x125 to 40x128 feet to wide alleys, making a tota of 408 lots. The total cost of this property, including the street improvements, will be about $150,000. The advance sales have amounted to eighty-six lots, aggregating in value $69,677, which have been sold at prices ranging from $500 to $2000.

—o—

South Hollywood Active.

Frank D. Edie, manager of Strong & Dickinson's South Hollywood tract, reports the sale of ninety-seven lots within the past twenty-eight days, aggregating $47,650. Also within recent date the sale of 128 lots in the Hollywood High School tract, aggregating $78,250.

South Hollywood is one of the most beautiful residence suburbs of Los Angeles and prices are easily within the reach of most. Many pretty homes are now being built.

BUILDING A CITY.

A Group of Homes, One Recently Finished, One About Completed, One Just About to be Begun.

The illustration on this page shows a house recently built by R. D. Richards and sold the past week to James Smith, a merchant of this city for $18,000. The home is of ample magnitude to house well a large family. It is substantially built, the recent owner being an experienced builder, having had many houses constructed in the East and here. This house is situated on high ground in a very progressive section of the city in full view of the mountains and looking out over the plain as far to the sea.

The second is a new house just being finished and not far distant from the Richard house. It is an excellent example of a type of fine new homes being built here week by week.

The third house is to be the home of William R. Burke. This will stand in the midst of an ample lot on the south side of Berkeley Square, and on the corner of Western avenue. It will be of the southern Colonial type and will rank high among the handsome homes for which Los Angeles is famous. There is a wide hall running through the center, with library and living room on one side and dining-room, den and sun room on the other. The kitchen and service rooms occupy a wing. There are on the floor above five bedrooms each with its own bath. The servants quarters are in the wing to the rear. The lot has a frontage of 140 feet on a side street. The site is in all respects ideal, on a high plateau from which the mountains, plain, sea and city are all in full view. Around are many similar homes of the highest degree of comfort and luxury. Hunt & Eager are the architects. The cost will be $15,000.

These are some of the most recent additions among hundreds built from month to month in the city of Los Angeles. They afford an excellent idea of the way the city is building up and of the artistic beauty, high cost and great comfort which are the characteristics of Los Angeles homes.

REAL ESTATE NOTES.

Walter G. McCarty will place upon the market this week a new tract at the corner of Western avenue and Third street in the heart of the Westlake district. The tract will be known as Bedford Square. Mr. McCarty expects to begin at once the erection of an $8000 house for himself on one of the large corner lots and W. W. Shrader, Jr., will erect immediately a $5000 house on the opposite corner.

Among the more recent subdivisions offered to the public is the Burnett Villa Tract located at Burnett Station on the Salt Lake Line, and on the Huntington Beach branch of the Pacific-Electric. This tract was opened up by Morris H. Wilson & Co., and Gary & Kenyon of Long Beach. The tract consists of forty acres overlooking Long Beach and the ocean on the side of Signal Hill, and has been subdivided into seventy-three villa lots 100x135 feet. These are covered with bearing fruit trees, berries of all kinds and beds of violets, and are being sold at $800 each. Three houses are already on the tract, and contracts being let for as many more.

Grider & Hamilton are now actively engaged in preparations for placing the Gower tract at Hollywood, on the market under the name Hollywood tract, the opening day being scheduled for December 25. The price of lots will range from $400 to $600. There are 240 large lots in the tract, which is bounded on the north by Sunset boulevard, on the east by Hartford avenue, on the south by Santa Monica boulevard, and on the west by Gower street. The lots are fifty feet front and the general slope is toward the south, thus giving free access to the balmy trade wind from the ocean. There will be three principal streets through the center of the tract, Cedar, Gordon and Pine, running between the two fine boulevards, Santa Monica and Sunset.

Property owners all along Eighth street, between Main and Central avenue are awake to the necessity of making the street wider. Those interested have nearly enough frontage figured up to carry out their plan. There is a jog in the street where it crosses San Pedro, and the plan is to take twenty feet off the lots along the north side between San Pedro and Central, and as much off the south side between San Pedro and Main street. This will almost take the jog out of the street. Those who are active in the matter point out that a lot on the corner of Seventh and Merchant is held at $400 a foot, while one on the corner of Merchant and Eighth has been sold for $100 a foot. The difference is claimed to be because of the narrowness of Eighth street.

At this surprising figure we can furnish on Pico Heights, close to Pico street, a charming cottage of 6 rooms, on an east-front lot. This must be seen to be appreciated. It is fairly furnished, and is now rented for $25 per month. The lot will soon be wanted for business because it lies close to a corner.

—$3350—$3350—

$750 cash and $25 per month. Here is another one of those incomparable semi-cottage bungalows, complete to the last detail of modern construction, which we have been unable to build fast enough to supply the demand. There are 6 charming rooms, admirably arranged, with the simplest convenience, every one good size, the living-room quite large, hardwood floors in hall and three rooms, beautiful mantel, buffet, built-in bookcases and seats, outside chimney, broad, elegant windows, three large bedrooms, very complete bath, screen porch, pantry with closed-in shelves, roomy front veranda and one of those strikingly attractive roof plans, which, while entirely different in detail from all we have planned before, are characteristic of the charming homes we build.

—$4500—$4500—

Do you need 7 rooms in your house? Do you like all the rooms possible on the ground floor, so that the wife's house work will be easy, and still have 2 sleeping-rooms above stairs; large, airy, with many windows? Do you like a veranda running across the entire front of your house, wide, with cement steps and handsome balustrade? Do you like a living-room 14x27 feet, with built-in bookcases, seats, handsome mantel, with outside chimney and many windows; a dining-room elegantly paneled; 2 roomy sleeping-rooms and bath below stairs; oak floors; handsome buffet, lavatory upstairs, in cozy dressing-room; separate trunk room; most complete kitchen and pantry? You will find this the most complete home of 7 rooms in the city. Terms are $900 down and easy payments.

—$4750—$4750—

On the high ground of West Adams Heights, vicinity, this splendid home of 8 rooms may be had at sacrifice figure. It is in a neighborhood already built up with fine houses, and looks upon a mountain view unsurpassed in grandeur and beauty. Below stairs are the living-room, parlor, dining-room and kitchen; all splendidly complete in most modern details of appointment; pass pantry, cemented basement, combination stairs, ing'enook, fireplace, etc., etc.; oak floors and handsome fixtures; above stairs 4 fine large bedrooms, ample closets, fine bath, balcony and many windows. We know of nothing on the high ground so good as this. Circumstances by which you may be the gainer are forcing the sale. It may be bought for $1750 cash, if desired, and payments of only $25 per month. Think of it. This house will surely sell within 15 days. See it without fail.

$1000 cash, balance monthly payments of $35; an attractive, splendidly-built home of 8 large rooms, located on corner lot, 50x125 feet; in pretty S.W. neighborhood; large veranda; reception hall, reception-room, library and dining-room with oak floors; rich Flemish oak finish; handsome built-in appointments; outside chimney and elegant mantel; 4 large sleeping-rooms; all walks, lawn and fences; basement and furnace; here is a beautiful home having every attractive and convenient features, very moderately priced.

—$6250—$6250—

This 9-room residence is located on that high, sightly ground, adjacent to West Adams Heights and Washington boulevard, which commands the finest mountain view of the city. It fronts north on one of the best streets in a neighborhood well built up with all two-story homes. You would be charmed with the exterior of this house, and the interior is arranged with ideal convenience and comfort. It is one of those homey homes. The rooms below stairs are all large, with reception hall, oak floors, beamed ceilings, handsome built-in appointments; basement and furnace; laundry tubs; barn; above stairs, 5 large sleeping-rooms, with polished floors, and large closets; large bath and balcony; attic floored for storage; double floors throughout the house. It is a splendid buy.

This large 10-room residence is located on Magnolia ave., and it is the handsomest home on the street. The lot lies high, with sweeping lawn, well cared for, and the neighborhood is all two-story houses, absolutely restricted to residences. It is the prettiest locality in the city. You enter the house from a spacious cement-floored veranda; the reception hall lies in the corner of the house, with the drawing-room and library on the right, the dining-room to the rear. Each of these rooms is large, with appropriate and elegant appointments; library with built-in bookcases and handsome fireplace; dining-room a gem of tasteful arrangement; very expensive fixtures throughout; above stairs are 4 large, handsome bedrooms, bath and large balcony; and in the attic servants' rooms and large billiard-room, finished complete. Basement, furnace, large barn and carriage-house. This property will beat by $500 anything else offered today.

WHAT WE ARE DOING

will probably interest you, if you expect to build.

We are building some of the handsomest FLATS AND APARTMENT HOUSES in the city. There are no others can compare with them in architectural beauty. As to the reasonableness of our prices, and our thorough workmanship, we refer you to the owners, among whom are some of our best-known Los Angeles business men.

ALL OF THE COTTAGES AND PRETENTIOUS RESIDENCES which we now have under course of construction are planned to contain every known convenience of the home.

Call and spend a little time looking over our PLANS; it will benefit you greatly, whether we build for you or not.

WE HAVE ACCOMPLISHED

so much during our four years of business in this city, and have satisfied so many of the citizens that our name is always mentioned when home-building is the subject of conversation.

It is really astonishing that one firm, during a period of four years, should erect and complete the number of houses that we have completed in this city, and during our business career we cannot point to a single dissatisfied customer.

We have established a reputation for designing and constructing in a first-class manner the most up-to-date residences that are being built in the city. We get out the plans, write the specifications and furnish the entire cost of the house, and take your note for it; you pay us by the month in payments not to exceed the rental value of the place that we build for you, 7 per cent. interest on deferred payments.

Come in and have a talk with us and look over some of our plans. We are always glad to see you.

$10,500. $10,500.

Handsome home near Seventh and Burlington. House has large reception hall, panel-wainscoting; parlor, library and large dining-room in oak, with oak floors, large windows and elegant lighting fixtures; pass pantry; butler's and grocery pantry; large kitchen with range and every convenience. A wide, artistic stairway leads from reception hall and dining-room to above stairs into a spacious hall fitted with linen lockers and clothes chute; 5 bedrooms of ample size, variously finished with large closets; beautiful lighting fixtures, large windows overlook the Westlake section, giving plenty of sun the whole day; well appointed bathroom and toilets with medicine and other lockers. There is a large well-kept yard, auto barn, terraced lawn and spacious front porch. Lot is 60x135. Let us show you this. You will never regret the choice.

A new, modern, 2-story, 8-room house, near 42d and Figueroa; has been occupied less than a year, as owner's home; good reason for selling. Has beautiful reception hall, large parlor, library and dining-room and telephone booth, all finished in select polished yellow pine; polished floors; 2 cream brick mantels, combination mission fixtures, coved ceilings, large windows, with window seats. There is a large kitchen with pantry and cooler closet. A wide staircase from both reception hall and dining-room leads to second floor, onto large hall landing; here are 4 bedrooms of good size, sunny and with unobstructed views. The great feature of these rooms is the large closets, fitted with drawers, and each and every room has connection with flue. A large bathroom, with every convenience, completes the second story. This home was built under personal supervision of owner on extra heavy foundations, and nothing but first-class material of all kinds was used. The lot is 50x120. This is a good buy in a location filling up with large, handsome homes.

Near Pico and Bonnie Brae, on high ground. This house has been built for a home; will be finished in three weeks by owner, who must leave the city. The special care taken in the finish of this home is apparent everywhere. The reception hall and double parlors are finished in selected weathered oak, solid oak floors, artistic grille work, and a Gleason, cream, pressed-brick mantel fitted for gas grate or fire basket, and handsome lighting fixtures. The dining-room has oak floor, polished select weathered oak finsh, an artistic plate rail all around the walls; beautifu bay window and built-in buffet; large, convenient kitchen, pantry with glass-doored cupboards, cooling closet, screen porch and porcelain laundry tub; from reception hall a beautiful weathered oak stairway rises to large hall on second floor, where there are four sunny, pleasant sleeping-rooms finished in select yellow pine, highly polished; a large bathroom with first-class plumbing fixtures and finished in white enamel; all rooms have large closets that you can walk into and turn round in—fitted with chests of drawers. All walls are tastefully tinted. Cement walk all around house. Let us show you this good buy on a handsome street.

SIGHTLY RESIDENCE
ONLY $8750.

THE BUY OF THE YEAR.

This is an exceptional chance for a good home and an A-1 investment.

This beautiful residence contains 9 finely furnished rooms. The construction work throughout is of a high order.

The rooms are large, light and "homelike." Stairways are artistic in the extreme; fine mantels, beveled plate glass built-in buffet; modern, well-appointed bath; bedchambers finished in snow white enamel; plenty of closet room; automatic instantaneous heater, furnace; fine lavatories. this is an ideal residence, considered from every standpoint. No better investment proposition in Los Angeles. We can't recommend it too strongly.

We also have another beautiful home in this section at $11,000. Interior and exterior are along the same lines as the first house. Contains 12 rooms. Worth every cent asked and much more. See us today.

FOR SALE—
A BARGAIN, $2000 CASH
WILL get you a fine home in a beautiful location, east front lot, 50x161. The lots adjoining are selling for $3000, and the improvements cost $5000, house of 11 rooms and is nicely arranged for two families lower floor is occupied by owner, second story rented for $30 per month, which pays all taxes, interest, etc. The first floor will easily rent for $50 per month, making a 10 per cent. income on $9600 and if taken at once this place can be had for $6500. This is a fine opportunity for any one wanting a nice home in a fine location. The place has not the appearance of a double house yet is beautifully arranged for two families, entirely separate from each other. House has hardwood floors throughout and a hot water plant; also all the modern conveniences. Owner must sell and go east at once, hence the low price of $6500, $2000 or even less cash handles it.

A CHOICE LOT FOR LITTLE MONEY.

If you will call at our office we will show you the most beautifully located lot in the city that can be bought for $1000. Terms—One-third cash; one-third in 6 months, one third in 12 months, with interest on deferred payments at 7 per cent. net per annum. Or, if you will build on the lot at once we will arrange terms on any basis that may suit your convenience. Building restrictions alignment clause, graded and oiled street; cement sidewalks and curb; in fact, all improvements that you could possibly wish. This lot is perfectly located on a gentle slope, surrounded by car lines, only 20 minutes from the center of the city, on the best car line in the city; high and sightly; free from fogs; surrounded by magnificent residences; in fact, an ideal location for a city home at small cost.

We guarantee this lot to be the best buy in the city for the money.

Call and let our salesman show you the property.

FOR SALE—

FOR SALE—"WE SELL THE HILLS."

Say, Mr. Oldtimer, Knowitall. Do you remember about six years ago when we tried to sell you lots in the Electric Tract on W. Pico street for $500 to $700 each, how you shrugged your shoulders and "looked wise," as you assured us it would never "amount to anything out there?" You said it "wasn't STARTED right, buildings were poor, and—er—um—well—it was no good, anyway," and you kept your money in your pocket; but those identical lots are ready sale today at from $5000 to $7000. Just about that time, or perhaps a little earlier, we were trying to sell you lots on Central ave., from Sixth street to Pico, at from $800 to $1600 each. We were confident there was going to be great growth, and tried to inspire like confidence in development in that direction, but you turned on us the withering glance of your eagle eye, and in your severest tones you said, "No sir, nothing east of Main for me, sir; if YOU PLEASE, sir." And you didn't buy. Those lots are worth from $6000 to $20,000 apiece now. West Pico street and Central avenue are main streets in the parts of the city through which they pass, just as Sunset Boulevard, 100 feet wide, is the PRINCIPAL street through the northwest hill section, the most beautiful and picturesque part of our beautiful city. It is, and always will be, the main thoroughfare between Los Angeles and Hollywood. Great improvements are under way now in all the territory adjacent to Sunset Boulevard, and the same rapid appreciation of values we have witnessed on West Pico st. and Central ave. is materializing in the Sunset Boulevard district. It is the ONE PLACE in the city where the opportunities for profitable investment now, are almost as good as they were on W. Pico street and Central avenue six years ago. We invite the attention of investors to the following.

We have, on Sunset Boulevard, near the Sisters' Hospital, a lot 55 feet front by 138 feet; street work done and paid; cement retaining wall and steps; exactly the same distance from the Courthouse as the corner of Ninth and Main, for $1200, half cash. It's away below the market value.

We have choice lots in Lakeside Tract, 50x160; street work included, for $800 to $1250; fine, east-front lots on Alvarado street near Sunset Boulevard, for $750 to $1100, and some very desirable lots in Alvarado Park and Berkeley Tract for $550, on easy terms. Call up the RANNALLS LAND CO., phones Home 7761, Sunset Main 2864, or take Hollywood car to branch office Sunset Blvd. and Alvarado st., and let us show you. DON'T GET LEFT AGAIN. 10

GRAND AVENUE BARGAINS.

52x165 feet on Grand avenue, between First and Court streets, for only $9500. This property can be handled for one-third cash.

Also 60x165 feet on Grand avenue, located 240 feet north of First street for only $10,500. Can be handled for one-third cash.

These are the two best buys on the close-in hills. Grand avenue is to be cut through to California street, and will be paved. The Hill-street tunnel is an assured fact, and many other improvements are to be made in this vicinity. These properties are but a few minutes' walk from the business part of the city and can be reached by the two incline railways and the Second-street line. Get in before the advance, and make money. Either of the above properties will sell for $250 a foot within 90 days. Only a small amount of money required to handle either or both.

FOR SALE—

Would you invest five, ten, or fifteen thousand dollars in a gilt-edge realty proposition, if, after a thorough investigation, you were entirely satisfied that it would pay out three dollars for one on the investment, that your money would be well secured, and if the promoters were well-known business men of repute?

If you would, a glimpse at the record of these men for the past few years, and a comparison with other investments of a similar nature, will be convincing enough for the most skeptical.

As this is not a lottery or a get-rich-quick scheme, but simply a business proposition, to be conducted upon the best business principles, we will not answer any but those who mean business and are prepared to act within the next two weeks.

Information cheerfully given, but no agents wanted. Address R, box 82, TIMES OFFICE. 10

FOR SALE—Buy here where values are established. Let others buy hopes and future prospects. We have every distinct condition that makes permanent intrinsic values, already made, not promised for the future. This is a natural necessary business center.

TRANSPORTATION—The greatest electric car service in California. Unequaled anywhere about Los Angeles. 300 interurban and local cars pass this tract daily. Ten minutes to Main and Sixth. Palace car comforts. Six car lines. 5c fare.

MANUFACTURING—Being at junction of Santa Fe and S. P. and near Salt Lake roads, has made this Los Angeles new factory center. Factories already built to employ hundreds of workmen who need homes. More factories planned.

IMPROVEMENTS—Not promised but done, and first-class. Complete cement work; superior oil paving; big mains with purest artesian water; hundreds of palms and shade trees; 100-foot flower lined boulevard; rigid restrictions; 7-acre park; clean and high class, small and large lots; $350 up; accommodating terms; special cash discount to January 1st. Take Pacific electric car at Slauson ave., and see Tract office open every day.

Vermont Avenue Square is on the southwest corner of Vermont and Vernon aves., the two longest thoroughfares in the county, and is the largest single subdivision ever put on the market in this city, and the owners intend to make it one of the choicest subdivisions ever offered to the public.

All streets are to be 60 to 80 feet wide, graded and oiled, standard cement curbs and five-foot sidewalks, with large parkway between curb and sidewalk.

Also beautiful park in center of Square.

Suitable building restrictions on all lots.

5c car fare on the San Pedro Interurban line by buying $1 worth of tickets.

Lots $650 and up; ¼ cash, the balance in 9, 18 and 27 months.

Make your selections at once, thereby securing the choicest lots.

These are the best lots for the money that have been put on the market in this locality.

You know what is doing along this line. Prices are steadily advancing and in our judgment will continue to do so. A very few years hence, when the territory close to this line is all occupied, between the city and our harbor and Long Beach, you will regret that you did not improve this opportunity now.

Don't have the regrets, but secure a lot in this tract for a home or investment and do it now.

You must see this tract to fully appreciate it. It will cost you nothing to see it, free tickets furnished you today until noon, at 614 Trust Building, Second and Spring, go down today. Other days in the week tickets can be obtained at either of our offices.

Take Long Beach car at 6th and Main, get off at Latin station, ask for F. Gulton, our agent, on the tract.

CLOSE-IN HILL PROPERTIES.

In the history of all American cities, HILL property adjacent to the BUSINESS CENTER has eventually become the MOST valuable; excepting ONLY the CLOSE-IN BUSINESS property.
This is due to the fact that CLOSE-IN HILL property, improved with APARTMENT houses and HOTELS, rents more CONTINUOUSLY, and PAYS better in all such cities.
Apartment houses and hotels on CLOSE-IN HILLS of Los Angeles, are more CONTINUOUSLY rented, and paying LARGER percentage on amount invested, than ANY other property; obviously therefore it, too, must eventually command more READY sale, and HIGHER price, excepting only the close-in BUSINESS property.
It is a notorious fact that, until recently, close-in hill property has been OVERLOOKED; MANY sales, however, have been made, during past 60 DAYS.
Having confined our operations mainly to this section, we have listed mostly all there is for sale, among which we have two exceptionally fine HOTEL or APARTMENT house sites, consisting of over 20,000 square feet, each.

WE ALSO HAVE ON THE HILL
5 corner lots, as follows:
60x120 and 12-room house, $12,000.
60x160 and 12-room house, $14,500.
77½x120, 2 houses, $11,000.
60x165, three frontages, $17,000.
57x130, two houses, $20,000.

$8000—SNAP ON THE HILL.
50x165 feet and 10-room house.

INCOME PROPERTY.
INCOME PROPERTY.
Within three blocks of Broadway and Second sts., nominal improvements paying fair interest on investment; close in and surely a good buy for the future.

SIXTEENTH STREET.
A bargain, 50x140 to alley, improved; near Figueroa. Watch this advance.

BUSINESS PROPERTY
ON SAN PEDRO STREET.
Improved with store and flats paying $1380 per annum; this is a rare chance to purchase a first class investment. Only $13,000.

BUSINESS CORNER
WEST TENTH STREET.
This corner is offered at the low figure of $7000; a bargain; well located, large lot 90x125 feet. Don't delay.

BUSINESS PROPERTY.

—$19,000—

Southwest corner of Sixth st. and Wilmer; one of the best and cheapest corners on W. Sixth st.

100x123½ FEET.
Sixth st. is fast becoming a business street; in less than six months the street car will be running west from Boylston and the street will soon be paved from Figueroa to Rampart. Corresponding property on Seventh st. is held at $225 per front foot and up. Sixth st. has the advantage over Seventh in being nearer the business center and more accessible through the Third-st. tunnel. This property is a good buy and should be looked into at once.
P. A. STANTON,
10 216 W. Third st.

FOR SALE—
$11,000—A fine income property on Central ave. near Eighth; $3000 cash will handle; income $1200 per year. Investigate if you want a bargain.

$10,000—On Towne just off E. Fifth; lot 50x110, alley alongside; two good houses, 15 rooms; rental income $60 a month; adjoining property facing on Fifth st. sold at $700 per foot. This is at the door of the Arcade Station and a very attractive investment.

$12,000—E. Ninth near Central; 120 feet on E. Ninth. This property is one of the most attractive buys we have in our office.

$12,000—W. Pico; improvements, store and house in rear; income $120 per month. If another store was built on vacant portion of lot, income would be greatly increased. A very desirable investment property.

—$22,000—
226 Winston st., the cheapest property on the street. Size 60x161, covered by a two-story brick lodging-house of 29 rooms; the building is substantially built, and walls and foundation are capable of standing two more stories; the income is $150 per month net, being a little better than an 8-per-cent. investment. This property can be bought on liberal terms and is much cheaper than anything else on the street. The rooms are large, and well arranged, so as to give good light and ventilation. The building cost $11,000, leaving the bare property at $200 per front foot. For further particulars see

BASSETT & SMITH.
WE BELIEVE
there is no proposition in this city that will pay a better interest on the investment than close-in apartment houses of 2 to 4 rooms.
WE ASSERT that on the high ground on Olive Heights from TEMPLE STREET TO FOURTH, HILL TO FIGUEROA STREETS, is the best and safest location for this class of investment; being only from 5 to 15 minutes' walk from Broadway; up above the noise and dust of the busy city, elevation above the business center about 100 feet; the air is much purer and better.
Corner lots, of course, are the most desirable and the sunny side is always preferable.
NOW LISTEN.
We have for sale the N.W. CORNER COURT AND HILL.
That is only a few hundred feet west of the upper landing of the new Angels' Flight, going up the hill on Court from Broadway. It costs but 1 cent to take the "Flight." On the HOPE STREET.

On a corner, a modern, new apartment-house of 78 rooms; steam heat; electric elevator; place is leased for 5 years at about $8000 per year. Price $85,000.

CENTRAL AVENUE.
Close in, on a corner, a 3-story building, with stores below and living quarters above; splendid location. Price $18,000.

BUNKER HILL AND HOPE STREET.
A fine corner on Bunker Hill, extending through to Hope street, thus having frontage on three fine streets; lot is 60x160 and has two cottages on it; price only $17,000.

RUTH AVENUE.
Right in the best renting district in the city. A modern apartment-house of 28 rooms. It pays a splendid income on the amount invested. Income is about $175 per month. It is furnished completely. Investigate it and you'll buy it if it's a good investment you are seeking. $26,500.

WEST TENTH STREET.
On a lot, 50x150 to alley; a handsome flat building of 24 rooms. It is strictly modern and is mission style. Rents for $100 per month, or $1200 per year. Price $10,000.

RUTH AVENUE.
Between 5th and 6th sts., a good income property; one flat building (2-story) and one 2-story apartment-house. Rentals are $924 per year; price $8500.

"WE SELL THE EARTH."
BASSETT & SMITH.

VALENCIA ORANGE GROVES.

The best paying rchard property on earth is a Valencia orange grove. For the past 6 or 8 years Valencias have paid enormously, and we could point you to orchards which during the past season have paid 100 per cent. interest on a valuation of $1500 per acre. It is almost impossible to get Valencia orange orchards to offer the buyer, as owners generally decline to sell at any price. We can, however, now offer you a fine property that will pay you well.

30-ACRE VALENCIA ORCHARD.

Beautifully located in district free from injury by frost, only 5 minutes' walk from railroad station; in the midst of beautiful orange groves, this property is planted entirely to Valencia orange trees, 15 years old. Good soil and water right. It has received good attention and care and trees are in good condition. The NET INCOME above all expenses received from the crop.
In 1904 was $8500.
In 1905 was $9300.
and the estimated net income from present crop now on the trees
Is $12,000.
Price with crop $48,000
Price without crop $36,000
If the investment is too heavy for you, owner will divide the property.

NAVEL ORANGE ORCHARDS.

We have some of the best navel orange orchards in Southern California on our books, and would like to show you a 10-acre orchard, the past 3 crops on which have been 8500 boxes; 5000 boxes and present crop about 6000 boxes. This indicates unusual bearing capacity. Fine soil and water right. Most excellent location, small house. Price $12,000.

A GREAT BARGAIN AND OPPORTUNITY TO DOUBLE YOUR MONEY QUICKLY.

640 ACRES OF LAND.

Located half way between Los Angeles and San Francisco, only one mile distant from the young, thriving townsite of Corcoran, in Kings county. Good sandy loam soil, level, and ready for irrigation. Owner of land adjoining on the south is planting out 480 acres to asparagus, which should bring an annual income of over $100 per acre per annum. Adjoining lands held at $60 and $70 per acre; flowing artesian well and reservoir and cheap house and good barn on the land. Natural gas flow from well provides sufficient gas for all domestic purposes, without cost. Land largely under fence. This land should bring within the next 3 years, $100 per acre or more and yet we can offer you this fine section with the very best of soil for the low price of $32 PER ACRE.
Terms reasonable.

SERVICE BROS.,
302 FROST BLDG.
ALFALFA, BERRY AND VEGETABLE LAND.
About 10 miles south of Los Angeles and about 5 blocks from the Redondo Electric Railway we have a large tract of land that is subdivided into 2½ AND 5-ACRE TRACTS.
The soil is as good as any, and superior to the most of the land between Los Angeles and the coast.
It is in a district that is demonstrated as being one of the best sections in Los Angeles county for growing strawberries, and other small fruits.
Alfalfa and vegetables flourish in this deep fertile soil.
The water supply is the best to be found in that district, the pumping plant produces a steady flow of over 200 miners' inches. One share of water stock given with each acre.

2½ acre lots, $750 each, $150 down, balance in 4 annual payments, interest 6 per cent.
5 acre lots $1375 each, $275 down, balance in 4 annual installments.

WALNUT .... LAND
ALFALFA LAND.
We have subdivided a tract of land comprising about 1500 acres into lots of 5 to 20 acres. The tract is in the El Monte walnut district, about 15 miles from Los Angeles on the Southern Pacific R.R. The proposed electric line to Covina passes through the north end of the tract.
The soil is a deep sediment loam and is absolutely free from any objectionable features. It is particularly adapted to the growth of WALNUTS, ALFALFA, BERRIES, VEGETABLES, PEANUTS, LIMA BEANS, ETC.
Water for irrigation purposes is cheaply and very easily developed.
Numerous wells have been sunk and not one has developed less than 125 inches, and the average is 150 miners inches.
To those who are looking for a home or an investment, this proposition is an opportunity of a lifetime.
We say, and investigation will prove the assertion, that there is positively no other land as near Los Angeles to be had for the money that possesses the advantages in quality of soil, water facilities, location, etc. It costs nothing but a few hours' time to investigate thoroughly and make arrangements to see the tract.
Price $175 to $200 per acre; only
ONE-FOURTH CASH.

OCEAN PARK.
AND HER GRANDEUR.

The history and growth of Ocean Park is the most remarkable of any seaside city, and its wonderful progress is explained by its superb locality, its delightful environs, the splendid conveniences with which the expenditure of so much capital has equipped it; the very unique plan in which it is laid out differs from that of any seaside city in the world. A great panorama of earth, sky, sea and mountains; in the distance to the north, the blue and purple Santa Monica Mountains rise in gorgeous silhouette and extend around the long winding arm of the bay; to the south one sees precipitous bluffs, while low-lying Catalina rises on the horizon. The city is built upon a great level stretch of clean, white sand, which follows the ocean for from 700 to 2000 feet, on a plane which rises from six feet at the beach to twenty feet or more at the electric roads and the railroads. Then come imposing hills, which command a sweeping view of the sea. There is nothing to mar the pleasing harmony of the long boulevards. The first dwellings built at Ocean Park are constantly being replaced with fine modern dwellings.

The Ocean Park Bank, of which Mr. T. H. Dudley is president, is one of the staple banks of Southern California. Every attention is given to their depositors.

If you have not opened an account with them, do so at once. They give you the assurance that all interests intrusted to their care will be safeguarded. 10

SANTA MONICA.
UNEXCELLED BATHING
AT SANTA MONICA.

How many people truly realize and appreciate a good dip in the surf at this time of the year? You say "the water is too cold." That is where you are mistaken; go to Santa Monica, where at any time during the winter you will find the temperature of the surf to be 62 deg. There is no greater sport; it will drive the blues away and make you take a new lease on life. Santa Monica has made many new improvements to her town, and it is today an ideal spot to live in. Here the flowers bloom and are beautiful the whole year round. Climate all that one could ask for. The town is comparatively free from dust. All the streets are carefully oiled. Sanitary conditions first class.

Schools unexcelled. Church of almost every denomination. Outdoor sports are fine. There is nothing left you to do but visit Santa Monica and see and learn for yourself what a lovely place it is. Her public-spirited citizens will leave nothing undone that will tend to add anything to their already beautiful town. All the electric cars that leave Los Angeles for Santa Monica these days are crowded with sight-seers. It is safe to say no one comes away disappointed, but rather singing her praises. 1

Fitzgerald's Exchange Department.

Our exchange department offers every intending purchaser the very greatest saving in good dependable pianos; in fact, it is the very center of piano buying activity in Los Angeles.

Here is a small list of very special opportunities for this week's buyers.

UPRIGHTS.

Vose & Sons, large size, rosewood case, splendid condition; was $400, for $[illegible].

Steger & Sons, largest size cabinet grand, fancy figured American walnut; three pedals; used less than a year. We will guarantee this same as new; was $[illegible], for $[illegible].

Chickering & Sons, small size, mahogany case, about eighteen months old, fine condition; was $[illegible], for $[illegible].

Standard, mahogany case; here is a snap for some one who wants a good playable piano for $[illegible].

Gildemeester & Kroeger. This piano was a specially made art case of beautiful long-grained Brazilian mahogany—as a piece of elegant furniture we can say unreservedly that there is not its equal in this city today; musically it is a masterpiece of the old school.

Those interested in fine arts should see this beautiful piano. The price is so low on such an art creation that we are afraid you'll judge it wrongly if we quote, so we will keep it a secret and you will be the more surprised when you call.

SQUARES.

Steinway & Sons, ebony case, square grand, large size, fine tone. This will go quick at $[illegible].

Wm. Knabe & Co., large size square grand, rosewood case, in fine repair; a snap at $[illegible].

Marshall & Co., rosewood case, grand square; a good buy at $[illegible].

Weber, large size concert square, rosewood case. See this at special price of $[illegible].

Fitzgerald's alone offer you terms of payment such as to bring the purchase of a good dependable piano within the reach of everyone, irrespective of how little ready cash they may have; six dollars places one of these pianos in your home at once. You do not need to wait, your pleasure begins at once. Delivery to your home, also stool and scarf free. Correspondence solicited. Department "B."

OUR DUBLIN LETTER.

IRISH GIRL'S DIAMOND STORY.

MILLIONAIRE'S WIFE ONCE MAID TO MRS. JOHN MACKAY.

Recent Marriage to the Rich American—Learned the Supposed Stolen Jewels Were Only Imitations of Real Ones Which Mrs. Mackay Kept Under Lock and Key.

(STAFF CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.)

DUBLIN, Nov. 29.—Apropos of the coming marriage of Mrs. John Mackay's young granddaughter, it is possible to tell for the first time an extraordinary story of real life that is almost identical with a famous one from the pen of a great French novelist. Its heroine is the wife of an American millionaire now in Ireland, but so comparatively many wealthy folk from the United States are established in this country at present that I have little fear that readers will be able to identify her.

She did not begin life as the mistress of wealth—far from it. As a girl in her teens she emigrated from Ireland to the United States and in a few years' time found herself in the service of Mrs. Mackay, the wife of the Silver King. Then the girl, a devout Roman Catholic, made the acquaintance of a man who eventually developed into a lover and begged her to "lend" him a few of Mrs. Mackay's priceless black pearl ornaments, so that he could raise money on them of which he was urgently in need. After considerable persuasion he induced the girl to do as he desired with the result that from that day to this he has never been heard of.

The ornaments were never missed and in time Mrs. Mackay's maid left her service, her heart, however, devoured with remorse at what she had done. For years afterwards she saved up almost every farthing of her earnings in the hope that she might repay her mistress for the stolen jewels. The attempt to save sufficient proved futile, however, black pearls being so fabulously expensive and it was only quite recently on her marriage to her present husband that she was able to fulfill what she regarded as a sacred duty. Judge of her amazement when on hearing from Mrs. Mackay she discovered the missing pearls were but an imitation of the real ones locked away in Mrs. Mackay's safe in New York, those stolen having been bought in the Rue de Rivoli in Paris, and used by Mrs. Mackay when away from home to avoid the anxiety of carrying about the genuine jewels. These magnificent real black pearls, which were sent by her former maid to Carlton House Terrace, are at the special request of the purchaser to be presented to Mrs. Mackay's granddaughter on her marriage and to prove Mrs. Mackay's forgiveness and appreciation the former maid and her husband have already received intimations that they are to be present at the wedding when it comes off in Paris.

Much indignation is felt in Ireland over the action of the American government in deporting insane persons who during years of mental soundness have worked honestly and industriously in the United States. Dr. Harvey, medical officer of Tipperary County Lunatic Asylum, is loud in his protestations against the attitude of the American authorities on the subject. He instances the case of a young girl who went to the United States at the age of fourteen, worked five years in New York, and was then put into an asylum where she spent ten years, and is now sent back to her native place. This physician also protests against the action of steamship companies in carrying such cases with ordinary passengers.

Dr. Hefferman, another medical officer interested in the lunacy problem, states that in the eleven years between '88 to '99 as many as 1093 Irish-born patients were admitted into asylums in New York, and if these were to be added to the 18,000 now confined in asylums in Ireland there would be no room for anybody else. Representations on the subject are to be made to the local members of Parliament, John Redmond, and the heads of the British government with the view of showing the American authorities the injustice of their proceedings in the matter.

We are justly proud of our women. Their virtue, their beauty and charm are as pronounced today as ever. This being admitted, it is a pity a well-known Catholic hostess, who, for obvious reasons, must be nameless, should at a dinner party at her house one night this week, have given Cardinal Logue such serious offense in the matter of dressing. The lady in question and some of her smart women friends were all heroically decolleté one of the coldest nights of the year. His Eminence, who, as most people know, makes no attempt at concealing his feelings, looked unutterable things during dinner, scarcely raised his eyes and spoke to his hostess with a chilliness that sent a veritable icy breeze through his hearers. When the lady rose at the end of dinner to give the signal for retiring to the drawing-room the cardinal drew form his pocket a large white pocket handkerchief, remarking: "My dear Lady K——, allow me to save you from catching your death of cold," and with this remark he draped his hostess's ample shoulders in the silken folds. "If you could only see yourself now," the cardinal added, "you would realise how very much nicer you look." Lady K—— turned crimson to the roots of her hair, but she did not attempt to remove the cardinal's draping as she led her guests to the drawing-room. His Eminence's action has, of course, been criticised, and some of the women say it was cruel in the extreme. The general idea here, however, is that it is a great lack of good taste for ladies to appear in exaggerated evening dress when the church is represented, more especially as some little time back they were informed that it was especially desired that they should not do so.

ODD FISHER FOLK ARE CROWDED OUT.

T[illegible] village in Southern California is in danger of extermination, [illegible] its picturesque inhabitants, [illegible] groups of strange tongued, [illegible] a banishment no less bitter to [illegible] than the banishment of Evangeline['s] people from Acadia.

[illegible] of the big corporations, panting [illegible] East San Pedro, has noticed this quaint little weather-beaten fisher village and snatched at it.

It will be just about one fair-sized [illegible] for the capacious maw of Mr. [illegible].

The fisher people have given up all hope of saving their homes.

The general public, which delights to [illegible] the gay, new, garish summer houses [illegible] go up every [illegible] and the price of it, knows [illegible] about this queer, musty fo[illegible] of East San Pedro.

[illegible] artists have found it out and [illegible] back again and again from [illegible] to paint it. They had best paint [illegible]. It will soon be gone.

[illegible] of its brown nets and its [illegible] fisher folk, with their vari[illegible] weather-beaten fish[illegible], will come pile drivers, walk[illegible] of the Sailors' Union and [illegible] about as artistic as an [illegible].

[illegible] jarring notes have already [illegible] the way of summer cottagers [illegible] pushed in among them.

ALMOST HIDDEN.

[illegible] village lies almost hidden in the [illegible] the big Salt Lake wharves on [illegible] side of the bay. It extends [illegible] line of the old Rattlesnake [illegible] breakwater, in a [illegible] of gray weather-beaten shan[illegible] on piles, tumbling along [illegible] causeway that connects [illegible] Island to Rattlesnake—[illegible] railroad name [illegible].

[illegible] piled in as gray and as [illegible] the fisher huts—as [illegible] grow on the rocks.

[illegible] if there is an American in the lot. The language [illegible] town is the language of [illegible]—Italian, Slavonian, [illegible] the colder Norwegians.

[illegible] are quaint and outlandish. [illegible] dishes they eat are [illegible] century-old recipes of a [illegible]. And many of the ingredients [illegible] familiar to our palates—[illegible] and albicore, and other [illegible] of the sea that our ta[illegible].

[illegible] persevered and have got [illegible] and reserve of the [illegible].

[illegible] time of year is the most [illegible] those who go to snatch. [illegible] running. The population [illegible] the time mending, col[illegible] nets.

[illegible] on a platform on [illegible] the waters of the bay [illegible] dripping and gurgling [illegible]. As a general [illegible] platforms join in a [illegible] but between some [illegible]. In this idle [illegible] boats have been pulled [illegible] and are being [illegible].

[illegible] platform is an amateur furnace and caldron in front of which squat barefooted Mediterranean fishers in fantastic gay caps not unlike a Canadian tobogganer's—watching the nets boiling.

MENDING THEIR NETS.

On racks built on the edge of the platforms hang the nets being mended. Many new ones are being made for the opening of the winter run of fish.

At one end of the conglomerate tumble of shanties, is the mission for fishers and sailors—in an old stranded steamer that was one of the Banning line. The cabin is now a chapel and reading-room, with a capstan for pulpit. The hold is a "shelter" with bunks.

Day begins for these fisher people before the sun knows anything about it. In the thick dark that comes before dawn, the creak and rattle of their rigging can be heard. They go gliding softly out of the harbor past Deadman's Island with the mist damp on their sails.

Before the dawn-fog lifts, their voices can be heard, eerie and weird as voices sound when the sea is dead and still, floating in from the curtain of the mist.

What fishing is done at this season is off the Newport banks—sixteen miles' sail.

One of the strange mysteries of the deep is the way the fish suddenly go, leaving an empty sea. Then, as unaccountably, they come again. They are waiting for their coming now in patience.

Usually each boat holds from three to four men who share the profits. If one is the owner of the boat, he draws two shares—one for himself and one for the boat and fishing gear.

Although they rail bitterly at the "capitalists" who they believe, are about to crush them, there is one among them—and he rails the loudest—who is a magnate himself.

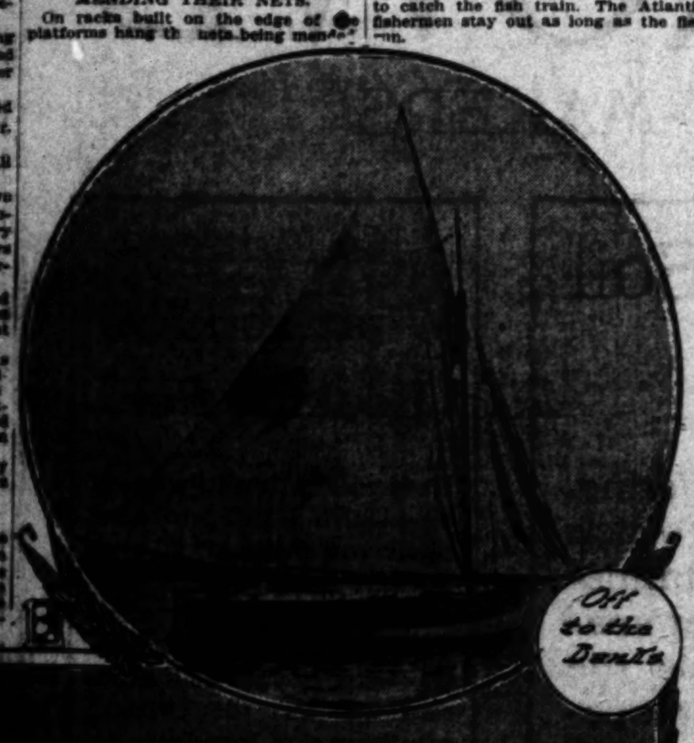
"Luis" came, a poor Italian fisherman, a few years ago. Now he owns and maintains three or four fishing boats and a gasoline fishing launch.

Of the Slavonians, Greeks, the Scandinavians and the Italians, it is generally admitted that the Italians are the most successful fishermen. They stick to it most faithfully.

With a few loaves of long French bread about as hard as a club, and a demijohn of "Dago red," they fish from dawn almost until dark.

By means of outriggers, they manage each to keep seven or eight trolling lines out at once. The bottom of the sailing boat gets to be a packed mass of quivering, flopping flesh.

On the Atlantic Coast, fishermen ordinarily stay out for days at a time in refrigerator boats; our fisher people are forced to work to less advantage. When the fish are running most heavily, they have to stop and come home to catch the fish train. The Atlantic fishermen stay out as long as the fish run.



Off to the Banks

Fishers' Village Land in dispute

Mending the nets

It is not feasible to run refrigerator sloops here. The markets of a city no larger than Los Angeles could not consume such supplies of fish as would be thus dumped in at once. However, there is a good living in the trade.

It will be practical ruin to the whole of the fisher population excepting those who are employed by the capitalist-owned fishing syndicates. If they are driven out of East San Pedro, they will have no place for their nets and their boats—not to mention their homes to live in.

Disregarding their habitations, it is absolutely essential to their business that they have some sort of wharf room.

As to just what is threatening them, no one seems to know—except that they say the Salt Lake wants their land and they believe will eventually get it.

THEY MUST GO.

For about fourteen years they have been squatters on this strip of tide land—800 feet long—by sufferance of the government. Recently a syndicate asked for part of it for a "marine railroad" which was refused by the Supervisors.

The fishers resisted this application furiously and have asked that Congress set aside this strip for their use.

They have no hope of getting it. Of course, there is no remote chance, even, of it being so set aside. That 800 feet will be worth millions. Harbor frontage will soon be too valuable to give it up to the small interests of these fishers. They will have to go as sure as fate. Their picturesque art-tumble of weather-beaten shacks will be swept away.

CRUSHED BY ELEVATOR.

Herbert Stathem Is Caught Between Wall and Cage and Left Leg Is Mangled.

Herbert Stathem nearly lost his life in an elevator accident in the warehouse of the Pioneer Roll Paper Company's building at No. 219 South Los Angeles street last night.

Stathem's left leg from the knee to the ankle was badly mangled and he was injured internally. Bresee Brothers' ambulance was called to the scene of the accident and the injured man was removed to the Good Samaritan Hospital.

Stathem was in charge of an elevator which was ascending to the top story of the building, loaded with paper. Between the third and fourth floors the man in some unknown manner became crowded between the walls of the elevator and the rolls of paper, and just before losing consciousness by rare presence of mind shut off the power.

Shortly after reaching the hospital he regained his senses and was able to give meager details of the accident. Stathem resides at No. 1140 East Fiftieth street. He has worked for his present employers about two years.

BACK FROM NEW YORK.

Los Angeles Delegate Talks of Unique Meeting.

Federation Conference Only One of the Kind.

Famous Ministers and Laymen Take Part.

Rev. E. P. Ryland, pastor of Trinity M. E. Church, South, of this city, arrived at home yesterday from New York, where he had the honor of being the sole representative of the Pacific Coast at the great church federation conference—the only meeting of the kind ever held in America.

William Horace Day had been chosen to represent the Congregational churches on the Coast, and Dr. Hugh K. Walker, as an alternate for the Presbyterians, but neither was able to attend, owing to their duties here and an extended absence from home during the year. If others were appointed in the northern part of the State they, too, failed to attend, leaving the entire field in the earnest and competent hands of Mr. Ryland.

"It doesn't signify anything that there were not more delegates from California," said Mr. Ryland yesterday, to a Times reporter, "except that California is remote from New York. They wanted to be certain of their delegates, and for the most part they were appointed from the territory nearer the city where the conference was held. The representation was by denominations rather than by districts, denominations having a million or more members being entitled to fifty delegates and smaller ones a less number."

Speaking for Los Angeles, Mr. Ryland said: "We have our work on a fine footing here in Los Angeles, and will have a splendid organization, with no warmer friends than Dr. Walker and Rev. Mr. Day, and it would have been their greatest delight to have been in attendance on the conference."

Mr. Ryland was the only delegate from his own church, anywhere in the West, and was appointed by the college of bishops, after the meeting of the General Conference at Dallas, Tex., two years ago, at which Mr. Ryland was also chosen a delegate to the next General Conference which will convene at Birmingham, Ala., in May. He visited his home at Lexington, Mo., both going to and returning from New York.

"While the meeting was denominated a 'conference,' it will now become known to the world as 'The Federal Council of the Church of Christ in America,'" said Mr. Ryland, "as that was the name adopted. There were but 500 accredited delegates present, but so great was the interest of church people that Carnegie Hall, the largest auditorium in the city of New York, was packed at every session.

"The conference may be said to have originated with W. H. Roberts, J. C. Cady, Frank Mason North and Elias B. Sanford, representing three great denominations, and William Hayes Ward, editor of the Independent, Dr. Roberts being chosen permanent chairman. The body had no legislative powers but it was simply meant to 'sound' the churches on the subject of federation, and that was the great, chief topic, though all phases of the subject were discussed by the greatest church men in America, under many sub-topics.

"There was not one discordant note in the whole conference, nor the slightest effort to drag in narrow sectarianism, but all discussion was on the broadest possible lines of Christian brotherhood. There was no reference whatever to 'materialism'; the whole atmosphere was that of faith in our Divine Lord and Savior; that was the one great truth on which all stood together, which may not be considered strange for the ministers, but it was also voiced by such great laymen as Woodrow Wilson, president of Princeton, and others of equal prominence.

"Near the beginning of the conference a strong resolution was adopted demanding justice for the Jews in Russia and that was the only subject introduced aside from the main purpose of the gathering.

BIG MEN THERE.

"On the programme were some of the leading church dignitaries, ministers and laymen of America. Some of them were Dean Rogers, of the law department of Yale; Justice Brewer of the United States Supreme Court, and Judge Grosscup of Chicago; Episcopal Bishops Whittaker of Pennsylvania, Grier of New York, McVicker of Rhode Island and Doane of Albany. The latter two were probably the strongest two men on the programme. The Methodists were represented by Bishops McDowell, Vincent, Fowler, Warren and Goodsell, and the Methodist Episcopal South by Bishops Hendrix, Wilson and Galloway. Th[illegible] were all lions on the floor of the conference. I think that Bishop Galloway was the greatest orator, but perhaps no man exerted a more beneficent influence on the conference than Dr. Niccoll of St. Louis.

"Dr. Henry Van Dyke, J. Ross Stephenson, S. Parks Cadman, Newell Dwight Hillis, Charles Cuthbert Hall and Francis L. Patton, were all great men on the programme, though all the men I have named are mentioned simply as the cream.

"Justice Harlan delivered a notable address on 'A United Church and Social Order.' Another particularly strong one was that of Bishop Doane, on 'Family Life,' in which he touched powerfully on marriage and divorce. Bishop Doane is as unique in appearance as he is powerful on the platform. He wears leggins and has silk cords on his hat, as if suspending the brim to the top of the crown, after the English style. One of his bishop friends perpetrated an anecdote at his expense by telling how the bishop signed himself 'William of Albany,' when he visits England. He suggested that Bishop Doane remove from Albany to Buffalo and then he could sign himself, 'Buffalo Bill.'

"A special committee was appointed to send out a suggestion for all the denominations to take up, to the effect that all children in the public schools, who desire so to do, may be permitted to attend the church of their choice one afternoon each week for religious instruction, and that a certificate of attendance at the church shall be required to count as the same half-day spent at school.

"This is a radical step, but it seemed to meet general favor, as a way out of the difficulties surrounding the question of the Bible in the public schools.

"There was only one social function in connection with the conference, which was the entertainment of the delegates at the Waldorf-Astoria by the New York delegation. Lieut.-Gov. Bruce presided and 1200 guests were at the banquet.

"The conference crystallized in a plan of federation in which thirty Christian bodies are recognized as entitled to representation, on their approval of the plan and purpose of the organization."

The concrete object of the federation may be stated in the words of the Second Article of the plan, which reads: "To bring the Christian bodies of America into united service for Christ and the world."

Alfalfa and Fruit Lands in Kings and Tulare Counties

ARTESIAN WELL WHICH HAS BEEN FLOWING ON OUR LAND FOR FIFTEEN YEARS.

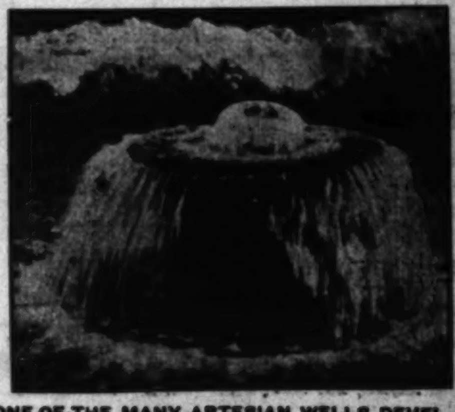
CORCORAN

Offers exceptional opportunities for grain warehouse, drug store, dry goods and notions, bakery, laundry, harness shop, brick yard, and many other lines not yet represented.

On main line of Sante Fe, at junction of branch connecting with Southern Pacific.

Thousands of acres of rich fertile land being rapidly settled up and tributary to the town.

Practical, experienced farmers who fully understand alfalfa and fruit raising should find it to their advantage to rent tracts of from 40 to 160 acres. Very liberal terms and special inducements to men with teams and implements who will become settlers. Good houses and barns furnished. Outside work can be secured at good wages while crops are growing.



ONE OF THE MANY ARTESIAN WELLS DEVELOPED ON OUR LANDS.

Several Hundred Thousand Dollars

Now Being Expended on Our Lands for Improvements

Original low prices still in effect, for short time only. Secure location now and receive the benefits of rapid advance in values which follow improvements. Special inducements. Easy terms. Liberal rates to homeseekers. Abundant water supply from artesian and pumping wells. Land sub-irrigated. We also own a large interest in the Lake, Land and Canal Company's ditches. The enormous quantity and high quality of alfalfa and corn produced make this an ideal section for raising and fattening hogs, mules, cattle and horses. Soil is rich alluvial lake bottom loam. Climate is mild throughout the year, and atmosphere dry and healthful.

[illegible] nothing to do with the em[illegible] of labor, but matters that [illegible] condition are under his con[illegible] investigated this peculiar move [illegible] and quarters branch to [illegible] Martiniques and Jamaicans [illegible] found that many had paired [illegible] women in some instances [illegible] that they had been liv[illegible] them in Martinique and [illegible] man and wife, and in oth[illegible] they were willing so to live [illegible] with wom n they sup[illegible] been brought to them for [illegible]. It is not known what [illegible] remarked when he [illegible] truth, but it is known that [illegible] approve the work of labor [illegible] took immediate steps to do [illegible] to undo the evil.

[illegible] issued to the zone police [illegible] canvass, and report the [illegible] unmarried couples living [illegible] wife, and to urge all such [illegible] as soon as possible. Or[illegible] were sent to the Boards of [illegible] Judges, most of which are [illegible] native Panamaians, to [illegible] with the police to the same [illegible] secretary of the board re[illegible] would do its best, but he [illegible] it would have much suc[illegible] member of the board [illegible], but was never married [illegible] and didn't want to be.

[illegible]AD IT'S CUSTOM.

[illegible] to the marriage tie is [illegible] offered by the American [illegible] responsible for bringing this [illegible] women here and for their [illegible] bring more. They contend [illegible] question of imm[illegible]lity [illegible] They are simply trying to [illegible] conditions for the laborer on [illegible] same as he enjoyed in [illegible] and Jamaica, where he [illegible] woman he lived with as [illegible] a marriage ceremony. The other reason [illegible] woman who makes a good [illegible] wife thinks she owns a [illegible] ceremony, and he cannot [illegible] her no matter what she [illegible] the upper hand the [illegible] be able to put the [illegible] his house if she does not [illegible]

[illegible] all of those brought [illegible] behaving well, and [illegible] the men also are [illegible] making a final [illegible]-law spouse. The effect on the whole population is bad.

Those who are opposed to anything more than gently urging these people to get married, insist that a radical move will drive every Jamaican and Martinique back home, where he can live as he pleases. The American judges say it is impossible for them to recognize such a social condition as legal in the naturally resultant cases that are multiplying in their courts and that serious trouble is bound to come. They are waiting with the ministers to hear an expression of public opinion from the United States.

COLOMBIA GETS NO MONEY.

If the English holders of Colombia's debt think any part of the $10,000,000 Panama received from the United States for the canal strip will be paid to Colombia as Panama's share of that debt they will be disappointed.

Their hopes were excited at the time the apple fell into Panama's lap by the announcement made by Minister Buneau Varilla at Washington of a telegram from this government, which read: "If indispensable for the recognition by England you may state that the republic of Panama recognizes in principle its liability for its proportion of the foreign debt, subject to recognition by Colombia and according to proportion of inhabitants."

The English bondholders have been further encouraged by signs of a recognition of Panama's independence by Colombia to expect a slice of the apple. An interview had today with President Amador reveals the fact that Panama has some counter-claims against Colombia, which means "there ain't goin' to be no core."

President Amador received the correspondent at the Palace for the purpose of a talk on the relations of the two republics. He asked if either had made any overture looking to the recognition of Panama, and replied: "Neither country has made any proposition to this effect."

"Has Colombia presented any claim against Panama or has Panama offered to pay any part of Colombia's debt?"

"Colombia has presented no claim," replied the President, "but our provisional government, in the dispatch to Buneau-Varilla at Washington, offered to pay Great Britain that part of Colombia's foreign dept which might be the isthmus' part, taking as a basis the number of inhabitants of the respective countries."

PANAMA'S COUNTER CLAIM.

As to the proportion Colombia might claim, President Amador could not say as Colombia had made no expression about the matter, and for the same reason he could not state whether Colombia had any moral or legal right to claim anything. No efforts whatever had been made to settle the financial affairs of the two countries, but should this happen the Panamaian legation in Washington would comply with the instructions sent in.

"The mutual and reciprocal interests of the two countries," remarked the President, "should be sufficient ground on which such amicable settlement might be arrived at by mutual and equitable concessions of one to the other."

"Mutual concessions," repeated the correspondent; "then you have a counter claim against Colombia? What is it?"

"The Republic of Panama has several claims pending against Colombia, and will establish them in due course of time," replied the President, with a smile. As to what might be their nature or amount he refused to say, indicating that it would be time enough to disclose Panama's case when negotiations for a settlement with Colombia should have been begun.

It is said by the Panamaians that Colombia always robbed them under the guise of taxation, and this is undoubtedly one of the claims referred to. It is certain they will not agree to pay any part of the mother country's foreign debt, unless this is recognized allowed for. It will be so large, and Panama's share of the debt so small in proportion to the population of Colombia, that while Panama in order to get the recognition of England it "recognizes in principle its liability for its proportion of the foreign debt," it will be shown that Colombia is in debt to Panama and not Panama to Colombia."

SOME RED-TAPE FUN.

As illustrative of governmental red tape methods, it is reported by one clerk that he has been here three weeks and already has filled out six information blanks, as the report on his "vital statistics" is called. An improved form circulating among the clerks is causing much amusement. It is printed on Isthmian Canal Commission paper, and asks among others for information on these points:

What was your weight at birth?
What is your alias?
What is your laundry mark?
How much more do you know than your chief?
How did you get the job?
How much more salary are you worth?
Give names of other employés getting too much salary.
How much larger salary did you leave in the States?
How many of your teeth are filled?
Do your feet track?
Have they ever been cold?
Do they miss you at home?
For how much?
In your experience, what typewriter makes the best excavating machine?
Which railroad were you employed on, the Illinois Central or the Rock Island?
Why do railroad men make good canal engineers?
No fair asking Teddy.
Why were you put in the worst department?
Do you know Stgomyia Fasciata?
Would you know her in the dark?
Why is a mouse?
What's the use?

Space for remarks and excuses end the newest and most popular blank that has yet come into the canal employés' hands.

BUGGY SPILL HURTS THREE.

Vehicle Dodging Car is Overturned, Pedestrian Run Over and Occupants of Rig Thrown Out.

Three persons were injured in the overturning of a carriage at Twelfth and Main streets last evening. Those hurt were:

GEORGE LEWIS, No. 1630 Pleasant avenue.

C. D. WHELAN, No. 702 East Fifth street.

FRED MILLER, No. 430 North Main street.

The two last named were the occupants of the rig, which was bound north on Main street. At the intersection of Twelfth street, in attempting to avoid a collision with a street car, the driver ran down Lewis, who had just alighted from a car and was making his way toward the sidewalk.

He was knocked down and run over by the vehicle, being severely injured about the face and neck, and suffering possible internal injuries. The police ambulance was summoned and Lewis was conveyed to the Receiving Hospital.

Both occupants of the carriage were thrown out when it capsized, and Whelan alighted on his head, sustaining lacerations of the face. Miller was badly shaken up, but was able to proceed to his home without assistance.

"Liner" Advertisers.

The forthcoming Midwinter Number of The Times, in five magazine parts, and containing 160 pages, to be issued January 1, will be bigger and better than ever before. Concise information written by experts and illustrated in a way to "tell the story of God's Country" in compact form will be the basis of the entire issue, and thousands of copies will be sent broadcast over the land to anxious inquirers and hungry seekers for facts about Southern California. It will be found a splendid medium for real estate advertising; especially country property, farms, orchards, etc. The rate will be 3 cents per word, and copy must be in the office not later than December 23, 1905.

POISONED BY WELL WATER.

West Anaheim Man Near to Death by Strychnine.

Officers on the Trail of Clew to Suspect.

Victim and Wife Say They Have No Enemies.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

ANAHEIM, Dec. 8.—Satisfied that strychnine was placed in the well of William Moeller at West Anaheim with malicious intent, officers are seeking the person who committed the act. They have a strong clew and an arrest may follow within twenty-four hours.

Mr. Moeller is seriously ill. He drank the poison in coffee.

Mrs. Moeller and William Dettmer, a friend who was staying at the ranch, drank only a little of the poisoned beverage and escaped without injury. They noticed a bitter taste.

The taking of the poison happened at noon yesterday. While the family was proceeding with the dinner Mr. Moeller was taken with violent illness. A runner was sent for Dr. H. A. Johnston and when he arrived he pronounced it a case of strychnine and applied the remedy.

The patient, who is 60, was violently ill all night. He had a number of convulsions. For a long time he was unconscious and showed but faint signs of life.

His condition is improved today, although he is still confined to his bed and unable to move.

It was found on investigation today that the well had been poisoned. This was shown quite plainly by the presence of strychnine on the pump rod.

There was so much poison in the water that the cattle would not drink it.

The Moellers say that they have no enemies and but few acquaintances in this country. They live on what is known as the John Steinke place, which they purchased several months ago. Not long before purchasing there they came from Nebraska, where they were well known and respected.

BERKELEY NOTES.

"Vegetable Sheep" for Botanical Gardens—Late "Blue and Gold" Has Balance on Right Side.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

BERKELEY, Dec. 4.—Prof. W. A. Setchell, head of the department of botany, has just received a letter from Henry J. Matthews, Chief Forester of New Zealand, that the Right Hon. Richard Seddon, Premier of New Zealand, has given orders that a "vegetable sheep," one of the most extraordinary and interesting plants of the colony, be procured and put on board ship at Auckland, free of all expense, for the Botanical Gardens of the University of California.

The class of 1906 held a meeting this afternoon to hear the report of Prentiss N. Gray, manager of the 1906 Blue and Gold. The report shows a profit of $213.90 after all bills have been paid. The 1906 Blue and Gold cost $9537.35 and the total receipts were $9752.25. This was the most expensive Blue and Gold ever issued, costing about $300 more than the one by the class of 1905. The principal items of expense, outside of printing, were the full leather binding and the extraordinaryily large amount of engravings. The class passed a vote of thanks to the editor, Jackson Gregory, and the manager, Prentiss N. Gray; and also that the balance of $213.90 be divided between them in appreciation of their efficient work in the publication of the book.

BROTHERHOOD'S INTERNAL ROW.

OFFICERS WANTED TO MERGE WITH AMERICAN GUILD.

Internal Dissensions Cause Four of Supreme Officers to Resign; Newly-elected Directorate Declare Order Will Avoid Combinations and Will Pursue Original Policies.

Local fraternal circles are discussing with interest the internal troubles of the Fraternal Brotherhood, which has its national headquarters in Los Angeles.

On account of a proposition to combine the Fraternal Brotherhood with the American Guild, an order of about the same membership, and with headquarters at Richmond, Va., there has come a division among the supreme officers, and four have resigned. They are Supreme President Charles P. Dandy, Supreme Secretary E. A. Beck, Supreme Medical Examiner Dr. W. W. Hitchcock, and Supreme Counselor R. N. Bulla.

A special meeting of the Supreme Council, which is a delegate body from the subordinate lodges, and is composed of thirty members, was called on November 27, and was attended by nineteen members. The proposition was made to change the laws of the order so that it could combine with other orders. It is claimed by Samuel J. Chappel, assistant Supreme President, that representation was made by certain officers to the Supreme Lodge that this change was for the purpose of allowing the order to bring into its lodges other weaker societies, and that this was generally understood by the membership of the Supreme Lodge.

With this understanding, says Mr. Chappel, the Supreme Lodge adopted the change, although there were six votes against the measure, and three delegates refused to vote, leaving nine votes to pass the measure.

In reality, it is claimed, the plans were already formulated to pass the entire organization over to the American Guild. Mr. Chappel then made formal charges against the officers who have resigned, declaring that they were to be paid at the rate of $12 per member for all the Fraternal Brotherhood policy holders turned over to the American Guild.

He says these charges were made at a meeting at the Supreme headquarters, Lincoln and Figueroa streets, and that in the presence of twenty people Supreme President Dandy declared that the charges were true and that he would resign.

It is said it was figured that the Fraternal Brotherhood would have 27,000 members by January 1, and that this payment would amount to $331,000.

The change was opposed by other prominent members of the order because they had no wish to lose their identity; because of the increased rate of the American Guild; and because of the practical certainty that the members passed over to it would have to pay this rate.

A special session of the Supreme Council was called on Friday morning, and in accordance with the rights given it by the Supreme Lodge, it received the resignations mentioned above and elected the following roster to serve until confirmed by the next session of the Supreme Lodge:

Mrs. Emma R. Neidig, supreme president; James A. Foshay, supreme past president; Sam J. Chappel, supreme vice-president; H. V. Davis, supreme secretary; William Mead, supreme treasurer.

A special session of the Supreme Lodge will be called to convene in January, when it is expected the resolution empowering the order to combine with others will be eliminated and other changes will be made, among them being the provisions for a greater representation from the subordinate lodges and a larger executive council.

All of the present supreme officers are opposed to any consolidation with other societies, and it is their intention to carry on the order along the original lines.

Of Dead Actors.

Where are the passions they essayed,
And where the tears they made to flow?
Where the wild humors they portrayed
For laughing worlds to see and know?
Othello's wrath and Juliet's woe?
Sir Peter's whims and Timon's gall?
And Millamant and Romeo?
Into the night go one and all.

Where are the braveries, fresh or frayed?
The plumes, the armor—friend and foe?
The cloth of gold, the rare brocade,
The mantles glittering to and fro?
The pomp, the pride, the royal show?
The cries of war and festival?
The youth, the grace, the charm, the glow?
Into the night go one and all.

The curtain falls, the play is played,
The Beggar packs beside the Beau;
The Monarch troops, and troops the Maid;
The Thunder huddles with the Snow,
Where the revelers, high and low?
The clashing swords? The lover's call?
The dancers gleaming row on row?
Into the night go one and all.

ENVOY.

The Hero tumbles with the Thrall,
As dust that drives, as straws that blow,
Into the night go one and all.

THE TIMES' NEW YEAR'S NUMBER.

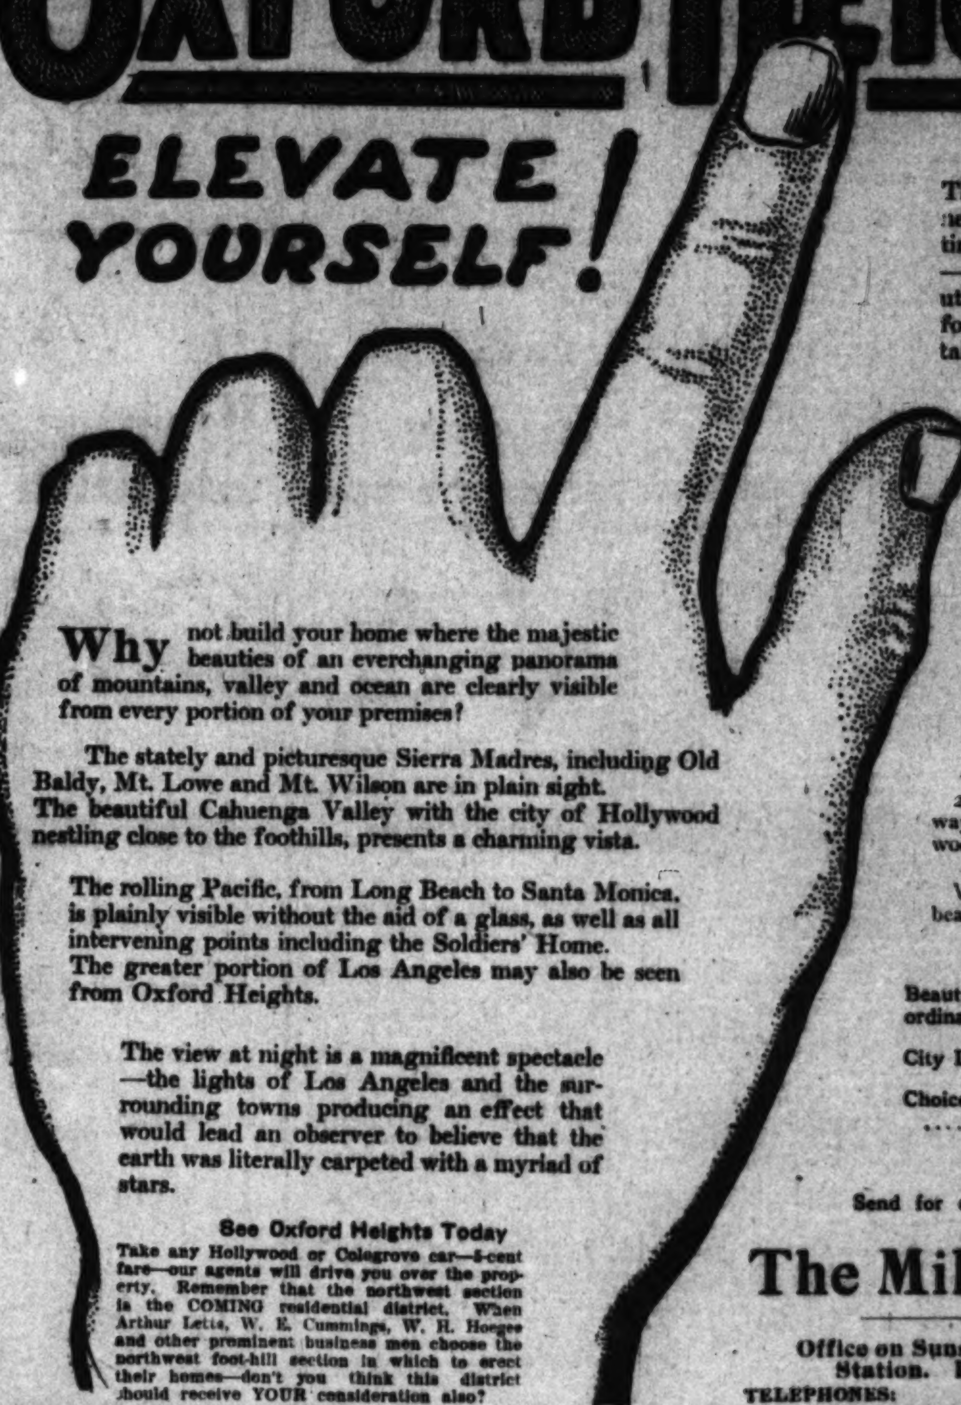
To be Out January 1, and Worth Waiting For.

Citizens of Southern California can do no better missionary work for the "Land We Love" than by sending a copy of the forthcoming Midwinter Number of The Times, to be issued January 1, to persons at a distance who are hungry for information about this marvelous and fast-growing section. This special issue, containing over 160 pages, with more than 80 full-page illustrations, will contain a vast fund of authentic information, compiled by experts, on our past growth, present prosperous condition and the bright outlook for the future. For real estate advertisers, there is no better medium for the exploitation of the varied attractions and opportunities for financial advancement, than this number. Advertising rates will be furnished upon application.

Single copies will be sold at 10 cents; 3 copies 25 cents. It will be found well worth waiting for.

OXFORD HEIGHTS

ELEVATE YOURSELF!



Why not build your home where the majestic beauties of an everchanging panorama of mountains, valley and ocean are clearly visible from every portion of your premises?

The stately and picturesque Sierra Madres, including Old Baldy, Mt. Lowe and Mt. Wilson are in plain sight. The beautiful Cahuenga Valley with the city of Hollywood nestling close to the foothills, presents a charming vista.

The rolling Pacific, from Long Beach to Santa Monica, is plainly visible without the aid of a glass, as well as all intervening points including the Soldiers' Home. The greater portion of Los Angeles may also be seen from Oxford Heights.

The view at night is a magnificent spectacle—the lights of Los Angeles and the surrounding towns producing an effect that would lead an observer to believe that the earth was literally carpeted with a myriad of stars.

Football and Pugilism.

The football that is played is to the football that should be played as a finish prize fight is to legitimate boxing. Indeed, as between the two prize fighting is on a higher ethical plane than college football. The fighters are frankly professional. They make no pretense of amateur standing. They fight openly for money, and they have to fight fairly. The fouling of opponents which football referees tolerate would not be allowed in a prize ring. The contest would be stopped at once, and the decision given to the victim of the foul. Football, if played, must always be a rough game; but it need not be a homicidal game. It need not murder a score of players in the course of a year and maim

CHINO RANCH

Rich Orange, Alfalfa, Walnut and Beet Lands

Combined, the number of wells on the Chino ranch furnish 8000 inches of water, or an amount exceeding the supply of Los Angeles.

If the practical question of gaining a livelihood, yes, a comfortable competence—is uppermost in your mind—Chino will prove to be of absorbing interest to you.

Sale of Acreage Begins Monday, December 18th.

Rich, "responsive" soil.
Mild equitable climate.
Pure water without end.
Profit yielding products.

On Monday, December 18th, 12,000 acres of the most productive land in the famous Chinco Ranch will be offered for sale by the Chino Land and Water Co., owners of the property. This great wealth-producing ranch is only 35 miles east of Los Angeles and close to the city of Pomona. A well-known state agriculturalist says officially: "In respect to possibilies of vegetable growth the Chino Valley surpasses any other district of the State Agricultural Department."

This is a calm, conservative, official statement—an expression based upon many years of conscientious and painstaking labor in this fertile garden spot. This wonderful ranch is a veritable mine of opportunities for thoughtful, industrious and intensely practical homeseekers. Hundreds are waiting for opening day. Make arrangements immediately to see the property. Select your land early. There'll be a big rush for the choicest sites. Be an early bird.

Best transportation facilities.
Close to best markets.
90 minutes from Los Angeles.
Good schools and churches.

A Wealth of Profitable Products

The Chino Ranch is renowned for the wonderful fertility of its soil and the richness of its products. Snug fortunes are being made in Chino alfalfa, oranges, walnuts, sugar beets, deciduous fruits, onions and onion seed, Egyptian corn, etc. The ranch is NOT ISOLATED, but is easily and quickly accessible to the best markets in the Southwest.

Town of Chino in Center of Ranch

The State Agricultural Department has established a Culture Sub-Station in the heart of the ranch. You may visit this institution at [illegible] officially the TRUTH ABOUT CHINO. The [illegible] station has been established here is extremely significant. [illegible] agricultural districts in the State enjoy the exclusive advantage afforded by means of having an experimental station in [illegible].

The Beet Sugar Factory at Chico.

Sugar beet culture at Chino is a distinct and permanent success. The big beet sugar factory has a monthly payroll of $25,000. The yield of sugar beets is from 11 to 20 tons to the acre and standard price paid growers at the factory is $4.50 per ton. Conditions are much more favorable for beet culture at Chino than in the Eastern States. Several Chino ranchers have paid for from 50 to 60 acres of land, simply out of their profits on sugar beets.

Agricultural Experiment Station on Chino Ranch

The town of Chino (population 1000) is situated in the heart of the ranch. It has a finely equipped and well-patronized school system, comfortable and well-attended churches, and several flourishing secret orders. Three transcontinental railroads cross the ranch—Santa Fe, Southen Pacific and Salt Lake railroads.

Chino Valley, a Healthful Spot

The entire Chino Valley might be called a natural sanitarium. Too much cannot be said in favor of its healthfulness.
Malarial and bronchial troubles cannot exist. Rheumatism and catarrh are also unknown here.
Life at Chino means—health—happiness—and independence.

MEXICO SEEKS LOCAL MONEY.

Great Rindge Estate Takes up Sinaloa Development.

Angelenos Hold Large Business Interests There.

May Open Important Industry in Rare Woods.

Thirty large, rough-hewn logs were released from the United States customhouse yesterday, for transportation to one of the Los Angeles planing mills. They are very ordinary in appearance to the casual observer, but in reality they are of enormous value.

These logs are to be converted into exquisite finishing materials for the interior of the handsome residence now in course of erection for Dr. W. W. Beckett on Hobart boulevard.

They are the first red ebony logs ever brought to this part of the Pacific Coast, and it is said they are but an earnest of what is to come, and of what gives promise of developing into a valuable industry for Los Angeles—the furnishing of highly-finished rare hardwoods for interior decorations and for fine cabinet work.

These logs were brought up from the State of Sinaloa, Mex., from the regions east of Mesquitita, near Culiacan, by R. B. Probasco, vice-president and general manager of the Sinaloa Land Company. Mr. Probasco has been down in Sinaloa for several months and returned to Los Angeles last week. He will soon return to Culiacan, in company with several other Los Angeles men.

Through various business interests many Los Angeles men are becoming identified with affairs in the State of Sinaloa, and the business interests between this city and the various cities of that rich State are bound to develop to a large extent.

In fact, Los Angeles men at the present time are conducting one of the most important pieces of work in Sinaloa, the survey of the entire State, and are carrying on this work for the Mexican government. This work is in charge of R. B. Probasco of No. 1977 Hobart boulevard, and has been in progress for the past year. It is expected that another full year will be required to complete the task.

These men, in return for this enormous work, have been granted a concession by the Mexican government of over four million acres, located in various parts of the State, and including mineral lands, agricultural lands and thousands of acres of heavily-timbered lands.

It is from one of these timbered tracts owned by the Sinaloa Land Company that the red ebony logs were cut which were shipped to Los Angeles. There, says Mr. Probasco, may be found large tracts of hardwoods, many of them rare species, and they will become the source of supply for much fine factory work in this city.

There are magnificent forests of pine trees and redwood and cedar, and it is the expectation of members of the land company that these forests will within a few years supply the lumber used in all this southwestern part of the United States. With the opening of the Mexican branch of the Southern Pacific and various side lines, some of them to be projected by independent capital, these forests will be made tributary to this locality, and much business will be done between Los Angeles and Sinaloa lumber points.

R. B. PROBOSCO;
Los Angeles man who is superintending survey of State of Sinaloa.

The Los Angeles men have forty civil engineers engaged in the survey of Sinaloa, and a large corps of Mexican assistants. Several of these surveying parties have gone out from Los Angeles. The general headquarters are at Culiacan, where Mr. Probasco also has his general office for the land company.

The building of the Southern Pacific Railway down through the State of Sinaloa is awakening the various industries of the State to great activity, and is sending large numbers of Americans down there to engage in business. The railway is building from Guaymas to Mazatlan, crossing eighteen large rivers. The road will reach Toran early in January and the rails are now laid to Batopilas. There will be completed fully 500 miles of trackage this year, and the line will be built to Mazatlan within three years.

The concession held by the Sinaloa Land Company was originally granted to L. M. de Castro, a State Senator from Sinaloa, in 1901, and later was transferred to the late Frederick H. Rindge, who formed the Sinaloa Land Company to carry on the enterprise. Active work has been in progress by this company for more than a year.

Last week a company of Los Angeles men started for Coluacan to investigate lands in that district, with the view of taking a tract of 100,000 acres for colonization. They are M. Y. McQuigg, William H. Wallace and M. R. Sayers of this city, and W. M. Vandewater of Long Beach.

Within the ensuing year the Rindge interests expect to establish three American colonies on their lands in Sinaloa. One of these will be in the vicinity of Culiacan, another will be in the northern part of the State and the third wil be at Fuerte, the capital of the district of Fuerte. Later a colony will be established near Mazatlan.

During the latter part of January Messrs. A. J. Wallace, Probasco and several other Angeleños will make another visit to Sinaloa, to complete plans for the establishment of a sugar factory and various other enterprises. The hardwood industry is being exploited by H. G. Henry and Alfred Solano of this city, and several other Los Angeles men are taking up business ventures in the Mexican State.

SOUTH PASADENA.

SOUTH PASADENA, Dec. 9.—The $70,000 High School bond issue here was lost today by four votes. Never before in the history of the city has such an issue caused so much public excitement. Some of the more public-spirited citizens stayed away from their regular business to convince other citizens of the wisdom of the issue, but the opposition in some places was very strong. Twelve men who would have voted in favor of the issue were prevented from voting by the new State law governing registration.

The supporters of the bond proposition are determined to see it carry and the same problem will again be presented in a few months.

ORGAN FACTORY PROSPECT.

A number of influential citizens are working for the establishment of an organ factory in South Pasadena. The plans have been drawn in detail. Mr. Crome, who had charge of the construction of the big organ for the St. Louis fair, and who received a silver medal for his success, has stated his willingness to establish a plant in cooperation with Mr. Varman, if the citizens of South Pasadena will furnish the site. George W. Wilson of the South Pasadena Bank has been raising funds and an option has been secured on a site near the Rabb Creamery Company's place. The amount will be raised in a few days, it is expected.

The establishment of a local Y.M.C.A. is in prospect. A public meeting has been held and committees appointed. The Finance Committee for the raising of funds is composed of G. W. Lawyer, Commander Hunker, J. H. Jacobs, and T. I. Gifford; the membership committee, of Mr. Eldredge, S. S. Smith, J. C. Jacobs, and Mr. Ballbach.

The beautiful Longley place on Buena Vista street, was sold at auction to C. U. Bunnell yesterday afternoon. The consideration was $11,500. The property possesses one of the finest sites in South Pasadena, and is in the neighborhood of the costly homes of Mrs. Garfield and Mrs. Childs. Some of the lots of the estate were purchased by Leo Longley, a brother of the late owner.

ARMY AND NAVY LEAGUE.

Branch No. 1, Army and Navy Republican League of the State of California, had its installation of officers last night at No. 517 South Broadway. The installing officer was Senator W. H. Savage of San Pedro, Commander-in-Chief, assisted by T. J. Shea, Inspector-General. The roster of officers is as follows: S. D. Thurston, Colonel; Thomas Murphy, Lieutenant-Colonel; W. H. McGarvey, Major; J. F. Greenough, Officer of the Day; Charles Schana, Officer of the Guard; C. H. Luther, Quartermaster; John Davis, Adjutant; Robert Irvin, Chaplain. Branch No. 1 now has 700 members. Senator Savage is planning for the organization of other branches in adjoining cities during the ensuing three months.

NEW BUILDINGS PLANNED.

The Builder and Contractor notes the following new work in the hands of architects:

Garrett & Bixby, drawing for four-room frame cottages to be built in Pasadena for Mr. Campbell.

Also plans for a two-story seven-room residence to be erected at Washington boulevard and Gramercy Place for James A. Monk.

Also drawings for a two-story eight-room frame residence to be constructed on Park View avenue between Ninth and Tenth for Misses Brady.

Dennis & Farwell, plans for a two-story brick building to be constructed on the northeast corner of Figueroa and Washington streets for Mrs. A. Lamer. It will front eighty feet on Figueroa street and 155 feet on Washington street. There will be six large storerooms on first story and apartments of from three to five rooms on second story. It will have pressed brick front and plate glass store windows. The inside finish will be of slash-grain Oregon pine. Each apartment will have private bathroom, and all rooms will be steam heated, piped for hot and cold water and gas and wired for electricity.

G. H. Ashby, plans for a two-story seven-room frame residence to be built on Twenty-fourth street near Normandie avenue for Dr. A. Bagley.

The same architect has plans and is going to erect in the Ashby tract on West Twenty-fourth street, near Congress street, two modern two-story seven-room frame residences.

Marsh & Russell, drawings for a one and one-half-story seven-room residence to be erected at Ocean Park for Mr. Castleman. The foundation and siding to window line will be of Chatsworth Park sandstone; above resaw rustic and shingles. Hardwood will be used for the interior finish; with beam ceilings, parquet floors, stone mantel in inglenook, large veranda, improved lighting facilities and furnace heat.

Morgan & Walls, preliminary sketches of a seven-story and basement fireproof building 69x140 feet, to be built at the northeast corner of Sixth and Main streets for W. G. Kerckhoff.

F. M. Tyler, plans for a two-story seven-room frame residence to be built at the corner of Flower and Jefferson streets for Edwin Schultz.

The same architect, plans for a two-story eight-room residence to be erected on Cambridge street near Oxford avenue for George Ward.

The same architect, plans for new store fixtures to be installed at the northeast corner of Fifth and Spring streets for the Hookstratten Cigar Company.

Scott Bros., plans for an artistic five-rom bungalow to be built on Forty-second street near Moneta avenue, for Mrs. Tucker.

Also plans for a two-story frame residence containing modern improvements, to be built on Wellington Heights for Miss Mary K. Hinds.

Among the contemplated improvements to be made in the near future to the plant of the Los Angeles Brewing Company in East Los Angeles, will be the erection of a stone wall with ornamental iron fence along the front of the property. A. F. Rosenheim has the working drawing prepared.

The same architects have designed for eastern clients several typical Southern California residences, to be constructed in Kansas City, Mo.; one, a sixteen-room two and one-half-story residence for L. T. Moore; the other a mission style home.

A. Dudley, drawing for a one and one-half-story frame residence, to be erected on Cambridge street near Harvard boulevard, for R. Ohl.

Also plans for a seven-room residence, to be built on Halldale avenue near Adams street, for E. W. Pettingill.

The Western Building Company, plans for a two-story flat building of four four-room flats to be built at the corner of Eighth street and Park View avenue for R. L. Kruger.

The same company is about to commence the erection of a modern six-room cottage on Forty-fifth street near Figueroa street for Miss Pauline Reeves.

The Inglehart Building Company, plans and are erecting homes for the following persons: A five-room bungalow to be built on Forty-second street near Moneta avenue for N. A. Walberg; another five-room bungalow for William F. Stewart on Thirtieth street near Western avenue; and an artistic one and one-half-story six-room dwelling for J. S. Gutherie at No. 2735 Stephenson avenue.

Charles F. Whittlesey & Co., plans for a four-story and basement reinforced concrete building to be erected on the north side of West Fifth street opposite Central Park, for Frank Bennett. The property is now occupied by a two-story frame building, which will be removed.

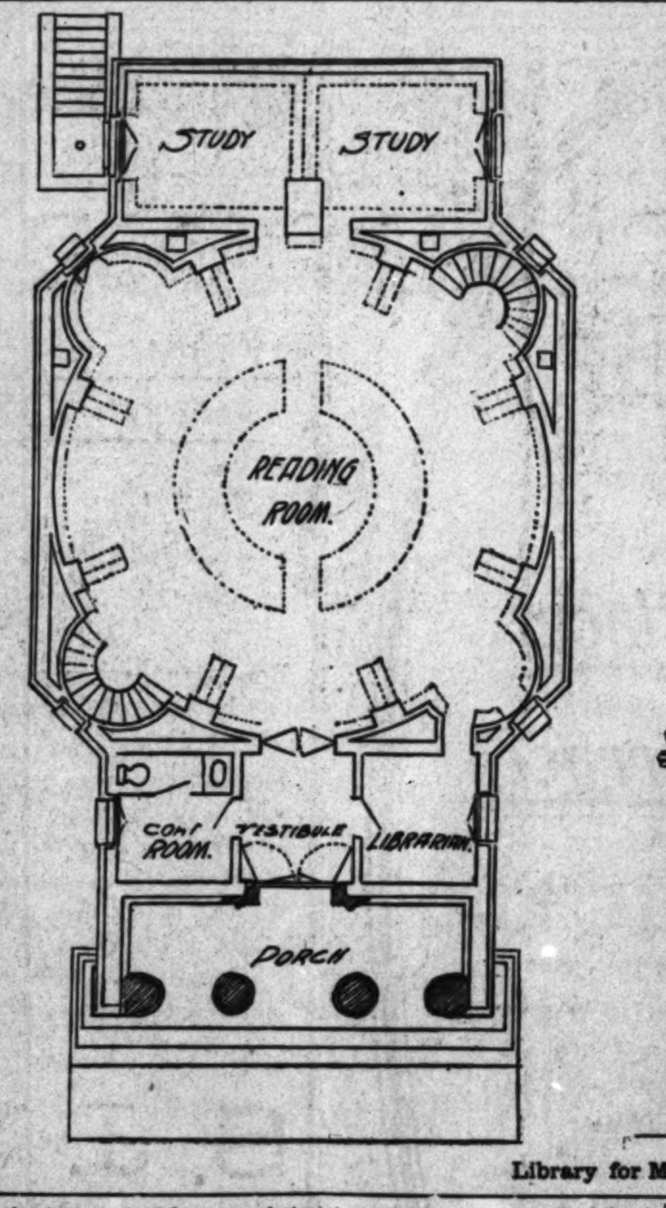
Fred R. Dorn, plans for a two-story brick stable, 50x89 feet, for the City Dye Works, to be constructed on East Twelfth street near Central avenue.

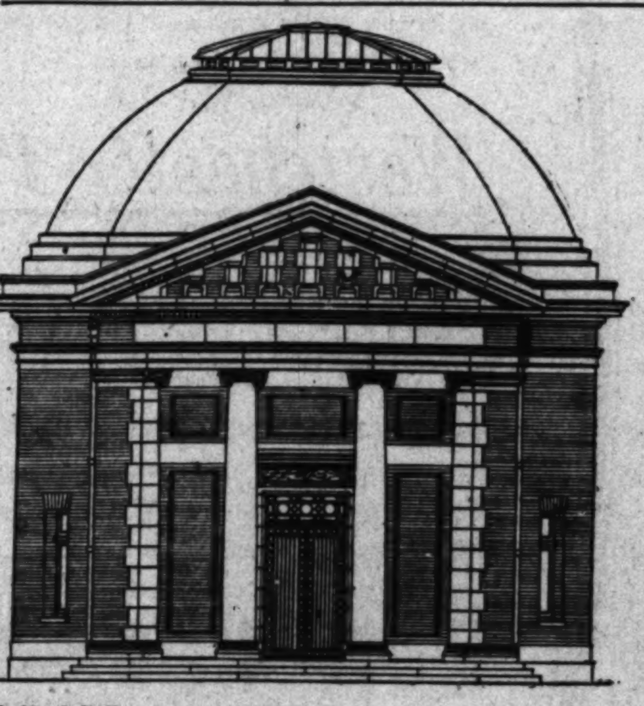
D. F. Hill has purchased from the Hamburger Realty Company the property knows as Nos. 819-823 South Hill street, on which he intends to erect a three-story brick business building. The foundations will be of sufficient strength to sustain six stories.

REAL ESTATE NOTES.

The building pictured in this department a week ago and referred to as the Trust building should have been the Trustee building. It will be on Broadway in the heart of the city and is now under way.

R. N. Lamberth & Co., general building contractors, have prepared plans and specifications to erect and complete a three-story brick building on the southeast corner of Ninth and Flower streets for E. Pepper for the consideration of $30,000. The building will have stores on the first floor and apartments on the second and third floors.





Library for Medical College.

LIBRARY BUILDING.

The University of Southern California Receives Very Liberal Gift from Dr. Barlow.

The illustration herewith shows the front elevation and the ground plan of the new library building about to be erected for the University of Southern California. It will stand next to the site of the Medical College on Buena Vista street. This beautiful and useful building is the gift of Dr. W. Javis Barlow. The contract has been let at $21,500, and with the lot makes Dr. Barlow's bequest one of $30,000.

This is presented to the medical profession of Southern California regardless of school, and in fact, all who are seriously interested in scientific subjects pertaining to medicine will be at liberty to use this library. While it will be given to the College of Medicine of the University of Southern California, yet the aim will be to make it as useful as possible to the whole profession. Robert A. Farquhar is the architect.

SOME ACREAGE BOUGHT.

A sale is reported of forty acres at Willow Junction on the Long Beach line to a small syndicate of people of Los Angeles, including Epes Randolph, W. J. Doran, W. K. Auchencloss, together with P. E. Hatch, Mrs. Harriet Johnson, Mrs. Stokes, A. B. Rothrock and Morris H. Wilson of Long Beach. The tract is being cut up into 192 lots 50x135 feet each, and will be sold on the monthly payment plan, payments as small as $10 per month with 6 per cent. interest. Notice will be given shortly of the opening sale day. Arrangements are being completed for the erection of several homes as soon as the grading is finished. The property will be handled through the office of Morris H. Wilson & Co., and of Gary & Kenyon of Long Beach.

The fifteen-acre orange grove of Alex. Moncrief east of Monrovia has been sold by Farman & Rives of that town to A. W. Savage of Utica, N. Y. Savage is an inventor of the Savage Arms Co., of Utica, and will make his home here, building at once an experi-

AT THE THEATERS.

SURMOUNTING the tidal wave of press agents' frothy flattery, one still beholds Richard Mansfield, all things considered, as the greatest single figure on the unquiet sea of American theatrical affairs.

And so it may be said that the coming week of his local engagement at the Mason Operahouse is the most important event yet scheduled in the Los Angeles season of 1905-06.

Mr. Mansfield will present seven plays in the six days of his visit—truly a splendid list from such an actor. Tomorrow evening he will inaugurate his brief season with his incomparable "Beau Brummel." Tuesday evening we shall see "King Richard III;" Wednesday, Schiller's "Don Carlos;" Thursday, that life-like old role the Baron Chevrial, in "A Parisian Romance;" Friday, "The Merchant of Venice;" Saturday matinee, Moliere's "Misanthrope," Saturday evening, "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde."

All of these, with the exception of one, are acknowledged masterpieces of their class. Moliere's comedy is magnificently staged, it is said, and Mansfield's conception and presentation of Alceste is said to be an unusual triumph.

Beau Brummel, King Richard, Shylock, Chevrial, Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde are known of old, as incomparable. Don Carlos, however, has apparently fallen under the ban of the critics, as numerous writers claim that Mansfield has emasculated the play by cutting out too much in an effort to build up his own part. Nevertheless, we shall see as to that when it is presented.

John Corbin, who writes with equal information and facility on the theater, college life and old portraits, had this to say recently in the New York Sun in a long essay on the art and acting of Richard Mansfield:

"If there is an English-speaking actor who has richer physical resources in his art, I have still to know him. His figure is naturally erect, athletic, stalwart, and is yet capable of being attenuated by the easiest means of make-up to the fine dandyism of Brummel, or reduced by unforced mimique to the decrepitude of Ivan. His features have the character and regularity necessary to stand the glare of the footlights, yet no one of them is so salient as to prevent the greatest extremes of impersonation. Forbes Robertson looks gaunt, and nasal in whatever character, Irving ascetic and austere. Mansfield can transform himself at will into hero or villain, comedian or tragedian. He can look radiant and rosily youthful in one act and haggard to the point of death in the next. His Richard and his Brummel are a whole world removed from each other; yet each in the limits of a single play passes in his own way from youthful joy and vigor to despair and death. It has been acutely remarked that Garrick owed a large part of his versatility to the regularity, almost negatively, of his masque. Mansfield is similiriy fortunate.

"The touchstone of histrionic genius is in none of these things. It is in the power of giving vibrant force and varied color to the verbal utterance of emotion. An opera singer may have a voice; an actor must. Some excellent voices suggest silver. They do well for the minor movements of the heart, and palely reflected moonlight of the spirit. Mansfield's voice is pure gold. Even in its most delicate and colloquial shadings it has the fresh color, the unmistakable authenticity of sunlight. Its anger is torrid, its rage scarlet; and when the shadow of defeat, despair, and even death passes over and into it it glows with the crimson and the purple of the sunset.

"I know no actor who can rise to such an altitude, and to such power of emotion; and this is the true nature of genius. In the English-speaking world today there is no actor who, taken all in all, is his superior."

THE OTHER THEATERS.

"In South Car'liney," Harry D. Cottrell's four-act comedy melodrama, will be produced again at the Burbank for the week beginning this afternoon. The entire Burbank force found congenial characters in the play at its last presentation, and there are some pretty scenic possibilities, which it is promised will be fully improved.

"Vivian's Papas," a Leo Ditrichstein farce never seen here, will be the offering of the Belasco Theater Stock Company for the coming week. In the production petite Virginia Brissac will assume the chief role, displaying a new phase of her winsome art.

Daily matinees are to be the rule at the Orpheum Theater—Monday excepted—from this time forward. As the prices have been reduced the change may be somewhat embarrassing to smaller competitors. The new bill this week will be headed by Miss Eva Westcott, in "An Episode of Modern Life," a short tragedy. Another feature will be the Esmeralda sisters and four flower girls in a dancing act. The Fadette orchestra will present a new programme, and other features will be Charles Leonard Fletcher, Dixon and Anger, whistling Tom Browne, Troba, the juggler; Lucy and Lanier, and new motion pictures.

"Buster Brown" at the Grand Operahouse during the past week has been a success—so much so, in fact, that the play will be continued for another week.

Vaudeville will continue at the Novelty for the coming week, including several new acts and original features.

"A Pair of Jacks," Kelley and Massey's latest farce, will be the bill at Fischer's for the coming week.

"A Night Off" is the new sketch at the Unique this week, the programme also including a good new vaudeville bill.

Mansfield's Music Criticism.

Before he rose to eminence as an actor Mansfield enjoyed genteel obscurity in Boston as a writer for the papers. He had a vigorous, peppery style, which is well remembered by everyone who read what he had written. The criticism in question was a review of Han von Bulow's first concert in which he played for the first time in Boston, Tschaikowsky's concerto for the piano.

When Mansfield was detailed to criticise this performance he was all but stampeded. His originality, daring then as now, came to his relief, however, and he went direct to von Bulow. The great pianist was stopping at the Bellevue Apartments.

Mansfield found him at his piano. "Herr von Bulow," he said, "I'm detailed to criticise your concert tonight. I feel entirely unworthy to write anything in criticism of you, and as for that Tschaikowsky concerto, I've never heard of it, never have seen a note of the score and know simply nothing about it. Won't you help me out?"

Von Bulow grasped the young man's hand and declared here was a critic he was glad to welcome. "Have you paper? A pencil? Yes? Then write." For nearly an hour the great pianist talked about the concerto, about Tschaikowsky, about his own interpretation and performance of the work while Mansfield's fingers flew across the paper. At the end he had the criticism of one master on another. Next day Mansfield's review was the talk of musical Boston.

When Mansfield had finished this part of his business, he fell to discussing music with von Bulow, and directly went to the piano to illustrate a point. "Where did you learn all this about our art?" exclaimed the pianist. "From my mother, Madame Rudersdorf," replied Mansfield. "Your mother, Madame Rudersdorf? Here? Come. I would visit her as I would visit a shrine," and von Bulow was at the door.

Mansfield, afterward, in telling the story, acknowledged the pride he felt in walking out into the street, "right out into the street," as Karl Heinrich says, with the man everyone at the moment acknowledged the King of Pianists. Mansfield and his mother lived in an apartment house which stood on the site of the present Touraine, and it was only a step across the corner of the Common, but Mansfield with quite human weakness, took von Bulow the long way. They went down Beacon street across Arlington, and when they turned down Boylston street the bluff old artist turned on Mansfield: "You wish to be seen in the street with me. You are taking me around the long way."

How well the two got along after this is not known, but each had the high mettle of the artist. Probably their flinty tempers struck fire. Anyway, it was Mansfield who afterward said "One wants but little Herr Bulow, nor wants that little long."

Helen MacGregor's Death.

Much regret has been occasioned in Los Angeles by the death in Massachusetts a short time ago of Helen MacGregor, a local favorite in stock work.

The Springfield (Mass.) Republican says: Miss Helen MacGregor, the leading woman in the company which is playing "As Ye Sow" at Boston, died there Wednesday. The actress submitted to an operation for deafness at the Massachusetts Homeopathic Hospital over a week ago. She rejoined her company Monday, insisting that she was well enough to resume her work, but she had to return to the hospital Tuesday, where her condition soon became serious and death ensued. For so young an actress, she had a remarkable career. She was born in Rochester, N. H., and made her first appearance on the professional stage when only six months old, being carried in the arms of Kate Claxton. Her next appearance was with Emma Abbott, playing boys' parts, when she was but 6 years old. Her first speaking part was with Katherine Rogers, as Little Leah. After that she became associated with young Salvini, playing page parts and later joined Keene in repertoire. She is said to have had the distinction of being the youngest child who ever spoke blank verse on the professional stage. She remained with Keene until she was 15 years old, at that age playing such leading parts at Juliet, Ophelia and Desdemona. Then she became associated with Mantell in repertoire. She also scored a great success with E. H. Sothern, succeeding Miss Cecilia Loftus, after having been selected from twenty well-known actresses for this work. She played Katherine in "If I Were King," and supported Charles Richman in "Capt. Barrington." In her part as Dora Leland in the "As Ye Sow" company she held a three-years' contract, and the future never seemed brighter for any young woman on the stage at this time.

Nevada on Ibsen.

The hottest dramatic criticism to date has been brought forth in Nevada, by our Harry Mestayer. It comes from the Carson Appeal. Read it—it's worth while:

Ibsen's Norwegian play of "Ghosts," with one setting of scenery, no music and three knocks with a club on the floor to raise the curtain was presented last evening. The play is certainly a moral hair-raiser, and the stuffing is knocked out of the decalogue at every turn. Mrs. Alving, the leading woman, who keeps her chin high in the air, has married a moral monstrosity in the shape of a spavined rake, and hides it from the world. She wears a pleasant smile and gives society the glad hand, and finally lets go all holds when her husband gets gay with the hired girl, and gives an old tar 300 plunks to marry her and stand the responsibility for the expected population. Oswald, the mother's only boy, is sent to Paris to paint views for marines, and takes kindly to the gay life of the capital, where the joy of living is the rage, and families are reared in a section where a printer running a job office solely on marriage certificates would hit the poorhouse with a dull thud.

Regena, the result of Mr. Alving's attentions to the hired girl, also works in the family, and falls in love with the painter boy on his return from Paris. They vote country life too slow, and plan to go to Paris and start a family. The doting mother gives her consent, and Pastor Menders, who is throwing fits all through the play, has a spasm. The boy, on being informed that the girl of his choice is his half-sister, throws another, his mamma also having thrown a few in the other act.

Engstrand, who runs a sort of sailors' and soldiers' canteen, sets fire to an orphanage, and the boy, who has inherited a sort of mayonnaise-dressing brain from his awful dad, tears about the stage a spell, breaks some furniture, and upsets the wine. He finally takes rough on rats, and dies a gibbering idiot, with his mother slobbering over him and trying to figure out in her own mind that he was merely drunk and disorderly. The players handled the sticky mess as well as could be expected, all being excellent actors, although Miss Russo built up her bustle too high. Miss Lockwood is strong, and Mestayer handles the thankless role conscientiously. MacGregor, as Pastor Menders, was very effective, but there was no better actor in the cast than Edwin Bailey in his minor role.

Mrs. Ward's Book-play.

The people who are enthusiastic over the novels of Mrs. Humphry Ward have been waiting with interest the verdict of the New York critics on the dramatization of the play made by Margaret Mayo from "The Marriage of William Ashe." This play was acted in New York for the first time on Tuesday night with Grace George in the role of Lady Kitty, and the critics, as usual, are divided in their opinions. From this distance it looks as if those who had read the book and liked it were equally pleased with the play, while those who did not care for the novel or who had not waded through it thought it quite impossible. However, all had a good word for Grace George and her interpretation of the part of Lady Kitty and this is pleasing, as Miss George is a decidedly clever actress who has had hard luck with her plays and who will sometime find just the right thing and then surprise people. But this new play does not appear to be the long expected, and those who read the novel can easily understand why. The touches with which Mrs. Ward wins her readers cannot be transferred to the stage.

The book must have contained at least 500,000 words, and the five-act play has at least 400,000. It opens with the dinner at Lady Grosville's. Kitty and Scraggus, the dog she has rescued from the street, enter. Kitty is ordered to her room, but instead has her dinner brought into the drawing-room, where she and Ashe and Helston eat together, following the dinner by a dance with a table scarf for a cloak and the dish covers for castanets. Kitty also repeats very distinctly and carefully a toast in French. "Here's to those that I love, and to those that love me," etc. In succeeding acts Kitty orders Lady Parham from her house, quarrels and makes up with her long-suffering husband, tells the story of her trip up the river with Cliffe, and finally dies in the limelight of the little Alpine inn. The last chapter—the most simple and poignant of the book—was the least real and moving of the play, and Kitty was left without sorrow or reluctance.

William Winter in the New York Tribune evidently did not like the play or the novel, for he calls the latter silly and the former dreary. His opinion on the piece is worth reading, and he said:

"All that could be done with such a female (Lady Kittie) on the stage was done in "Frou Frou"—and a sickly and ghastly achievement it was! Miss Margaret Mayo's play is a thin, feeble, die-away echo of that melancholy wail. It serves, however, as a vehicle for Miss Grace George's alternative vivacity of demeanor and pouting, wistful sensibility which is her nearest semblance of feeling. Miss George is not a serious actress. Her aptitude is for mirth—and this time, her mirth was indeed needed; for the character of Kitty Bristol is silly, shallow, pert, and vulgar, and the play that she pervades is a compound of cackle and blather; the cackle being furnished by a group of those colorless, vapid, rag-headed, garrulous noodles who invariably come on to represent "society," and the blather being about equally distributed between the Poet and the Lady. Upon the twaddle uttered by the Lady's share, it ought to be said that there is nothing original or brilliant in calling the Bible "a damned good book," or in telling a respectable old gentleman to "go to the devil." These ebullitions of genius, though, consort agreeably with the expedient of making a girl come to a dinner party with a puppy dog under her arm.

Near the close of the meeting, after a specially denunciatory harrangue, Mosoomdar arose simply to offer prayer, and with the first half-dozen words the entire atmosphere was changed. There was no allusion to anything which had been said, no petitions in behalf of narrow-minded Christian brethren,—and some of us have had experience of the wounds that can be inflicted by prayers in our behalf—no use of Jesus's words on his cross, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do," but simply a great spiritual nature lifting the whole assembly above all narrow, dividing controversial differences into the very presence of the grand, uniting, eternal verities—aye, up where he seemed to dwell, into the very presence of the Eternal One Himself. No art could have devised a more effectual answer to what had been said against heathen religion, no wit or logic have put its defenders more to shame or more palpably in the wrong, but the best of it was the feeling it produced that there was no art about it, nothing but the natural outpouring of the man, and that its hearers were made to forget to be ashamed, and we, sympathisers with him, made to forget any exultation over them—forget everything but that we were being lifted into the joy of a worship and into the beauty of a world such as the most Christian of us had never experienced before and never till then known to exist.

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA, a Mecca for all sorts of people, has an especial attraction for men and women of the artistic temperament. The latest to come to make his home here is Tom Karl, who probably won greater fame at home and abroad than any other English-speaking tenor resident in this country.

Mr. Karl, who is now nearing 60 years of age, has established himself on a pretty place near Pasadena. He loves out-door life, and he has an orange grove, a chicken ranch and other comfortable domestic divertisements to give him recreation and health.

In "Paul and Virginia"

As Robin Hood

TOM KARL.

In character and propria persona: the distinguished tenor has chosen Southern California as his home.

A big, robust fellow, gray-haired but sunny faced, Karl shows lightly the touch of the passing years. He has not yet sung in public here, but friends say that his voice shows little of the ravaging of time, and in most of its register is still sweet, clear and brilliant. Granted that this is so, it is merely another tribute to the honored "method" of the Italian teachers, which is not a "method" at all, but merely a natural and unrestrained use of nature's vocal powers.

No living tenor ever had a greater repertoire than Karl. During his many years of stage service he has appeared in principal parts in more than 150 operas, and entirely apart from his career as a stage tenor, he has made a reputation as an oratorio singer, being a frequent feature of the great Worcester Festival, and the music feasts of the Handel and Haydn society of Boston.

During his stage career he sang with many of the most famous prima-donnas of history, including Galetti, Fricci, Parni, Titjens, Lucca, Nilsson, Carey, Phillips, Murska, Rose and Kellog. Later he was the idol of the old "Bostonians," when that peerless organization for comic opera was in its prime.

The tenor's career began in 1868, when at the advice of Sims Reeves he went to Italy. In 1870 he was chosen by Errico Petrella, who was then at the zenith of his career, to create the tenor role in "La Contessa d'Amalfi," and after a successful debut was heard for a season at La Scala in Milan. His New York appearance was made in 1871, with Parepa-Rosa.

His repertoire includes nearly every opera of the pure Italian school, excepting the later works of Puccini and Leoncavallo. His premier appearance in "Aida" was made in San Francisco under peculiar circumstances. A German tenor, scheduled for the part, was suddenly taken ill, and Karl, who knew the music through hearing it and idly thrumming it on his own piano, was called into the role without rehearsal. He scored an unqualified success.

In his later years Karl has managed to accumulate considerable property, and since his retirement from the stage has lived unostentatiously, retrospectively and happily. "Southern California is the ideal home-land," said he the other day. "I wish I had found it sooner."

Lott-Rogers Concert.

The second concert in the Lott-Rogers series will be given Thursday evening at Dobinson Auditorium.

The programme includes Beethoven's Kreutzer sonata, played by Mr. Krauss and Miss Rogers; a trio by Bargiel, played by Messrs. Krauss and Opid and Miss Rogers. The trio, assisted by Mr. Wismer, viola, will give the first Los Angeles performance of Dvorak's quartette in E flat, opus 87.

These concerts, it may be said, are among the most interesting events of their class in Los Angeles, in their preservation of pure music.

Beethoven Trio.

The first concert of the Beethoven Trio will take place on Wednesday evening, at Blanchard Hall. This is the first of four historical recitals. The trio consists of Miss Johnson, piano—alternating with Miss Orcutt, Mr. Muscat, violin, and Mr. Bierlich, 'cello.

The programme follows: Part I. Violin, Aria (Bach;) piano, a Pastorale and Capriccio (Scarlatti;) b. Preludium and Fugn (Bach;) Violin, Largo (Handel;) Vocal, a Madrigale Amarilla, (Caccini;) b. Aria "My Heart Ever Faithful" (Bach;) Miss Harriet Johnson. Part II. Violin and piano, Sonata (Tartini;) Violoncello Gavotte (Martini;) Violin Larghetto (Mozart;) Trio in G major (composed 1760,) (Haydn.)

Venice Music.

Patrons of the Venice amusements are finding much artistic pleasure in the concerts of the Ellery band, given under the brilliant direction of Francesco Ferullo.

The matinee list for today includes the beautiful "Guarany" overture, a clarinet solo by Decimo, the "Tannhauser" pilgrims' chorus, a "Faust" selection, the "Lohengrin" prelude, Rubinstein's Melody in F, and "I Pagliacci." In the evening the leading numbers will be the "Maritana" overture, "Il Trovatore," the "Lucia" sextette and a trumpet solo by Palma.

Another Verdi night will be given on Thursday evening.

Chiaffarelli's Music.

Manfredo Chiaffarelli, the Italian bandmaster of the Chutes, has proven his enterprise in his production of the great Ninth Rhapsody of Liszt, the first rendition of which was enthusiastically received by an audience of 500 people last Thursday night.

For today's matinee he will feature his own March No. 15, the overture to "Il Lamento del Bardo," the grand selection from "Gioconda," a new Indian march of his own writing, the intermezzo from "Cavalleria Rusticana," and the quartette from "Boheme," as well as a new trumpet solo by Taddeo.

The night programme will include Burgois's March Oriental, Bizet's "Arlisienne" overture, Chopin's "Funeral March, the minuet from "Manon," Suppe's "Poet and Peasant" overture and the grand selection from "Carmen."

Congregational Orchestra.

The First Congregational orchestra, which has enjoyed a prosperous artistic career under the direction of William H. Mead, has completed the first decade of its career, and the opening concert of the eleventh season, now being arranged, is in part an anniversary celebration.

The programme will include a number of popular selections, and the soloists will be Miss Elizabeth Jordan, pianist, and John Douglas Walker, tenor.

The present concert membership of the orchestra is over forty, and it has a large and enthusiastic support in its associate membership.

Sauret Coming.

The next great visiting artist will be the French violinist Emile Sauret, who will play at Simpson Auditorium on Monday evening, December 18. He will be accompanied by Arthur Speed, well-known English pianist.

The seat sale will be on at Birkel's music store tomorrow.

Jahn's "Messiah."

The soloists for the Los Angeles Choral Society's production of the "Messiah" have been chosen, with the exception of the contralto. They are Mrs. Maude Nichols Lyon, soprano; Domenico Russo, tenor, and Charles A. Bowes, baritone.

The presentation is to be made at the Mason Operahouse, at 3:15 o'clock on the afternoon of December 24.

New Orchestral Work.

There is a new orchestral work by Debussy entitled "The Sea," which was played at a Lamoureux concert in Paris last month. It is a group of three sketches—"From Daybreak to Noon on the Sea," "Sport of Waves," "Dialogue of the Wind and the Sea." Says one reviewer, Mr. Boutarel:

"The instrumentation is miraculous, but is there the sincere expression of natural sentiments? I should not dare to say 'yes.' The composer seems to have sought out his effects. There is not the simplicity that is so admirable in 'The Afternoon of a Faun' and in 'The Blessed Damozel.' A colleague asked me lately, 'Are you enthusiastic over Debussy's work?' I answered, 'I shall have to think it over—to know.' M. Calvocoressi does not share these doubts. 'The latest work of the composer of 'Pelleas' seems to me to mark a new phase of his evolution; the inspiration is more virile, the colors are franker, the lines are in bolder relief. His incomparable mastery of orchestration and rhythm is revealed perhaps too abundantly, for in the course of the 'Dialogue Between the Wind and the Sea' the hearer asks if this wind will not drive Sinbad's vessel on the rocks, and he expects to see far down in the depths of this ocean the silhouette of some Sadko plucking his sonorous gousslì.' Surely no one will ever suspect me of not knowing how to love the magic orientalisms which the Russians teach us; but I am not sure whether in this instance there is not an excess. Glazounoff himself, to evoke the ocean (in a splendid work which should be performed here,) has not thus blended such a picturesque polychrome."—[San Francisco Chronicle.

Caruso Housekeeping.

Signor Caruso has moved from the Hotel York with his domestic retinue and is now settled in the house he rented on West Fifty-seventh street for the winter months, says the New York Sun. On the same block are the Cornelius Vanderbilt Sr., the Whitney and other houses of rich families.

It was Signor Caruso's domestic equipment that made it necessary for him to depart from the hotel. In spite of the chef's effort to cook the signor's macaroni to the taste of him and his guests the tenor was not satisfied. All that Signor Caruso would say in the way of commendation was an acknowledgment of the cook's industry.

"He was not born in Italy," was the phrase in which the singer summed up the situation.

So the cook from the Palazzo Caruso in Florence came along this year to New York. So did the two maids and the rest of the household. Here a valet who was for years with Jean and Edouard de Reszke joined the party along with a manager who had come over in advance of the tenor. This made a retinue of six including the attendant, in whom Signor Caruso takes the liveliest interest. He is a tailor.

He had an establishment of his own in Florence, but he comes here to dedicate himself wholly to Signor Caruso, who has never recovered from the criticisms of his dress made his first year in this country.

Since that time he has struggled to live up to the exacting demands of American taste. He felt that only a personal tailor would always be able to attend to him. So he imported him from Italy.

"The Americans are bright in the matter of dress," Signor Caruso explained. "I must feel that I satisfy them, and I must have my own tailor always at my elbow."

So the cook, the two maids, the tailor, the valet, and the manager all went together to the Hotel York. But it was decided that the cook could not live and work there. There were other hotels just as unwilling as the York to house the new cook. All refused to take him in. Then Signor Caruso decided to rent a house. A hurry call was sent out to the real estate agents and the house in Fifty-seventh street, between Fifth and Sixth avenues, was found.

Thus it happened that a line of carriages that looked like a funeral stopped in front of a brownstone residence on the block. From the first one alighted Signor and Signora Caruso, and in the others were the manager, the former valet of Jean de Reszke, the tailor, the man servants and the two maids. Already waiting to receive the arrivals were two other servants and an Italian housekeeper. Signor Rossi came later to dinner with Signori Vigna and Scotti to try the new cook.

Signor Caruso says that he now feels at home in New York.

Art and Artists.

BY ANTONY E. ANDERSON.

Art.

"Let art be all in all," one time I said,
And straightway stirred the hyper-critic gall:
I said not, "Let technique be all in all,"
But art—a wider meaning. Worthless, dead—
The shell without its pearl, the corpse of things—
Mere words are, till the spirit lend them wings.
The poet who breathes no soul into his lute
Falls short of art: 'twere better he were mute.

The workmanship wherewith the gold is wrought
Adds yet a richness to the richest gold:
Who lacks the art to shape his thought, I hold,
Were little poorer if he lacked the thought.
The statues' slumber were unbroken still
Within the marble, had the hand no skill.
Disparge not the magic touch that gives
The formless thought the grace whereby it lives!

Miss Duvall's Pictures.

Marmion Way is the pretty and poetic name of a Los Angeles street that winds among the hills toward Highland Park and Garvanza. Small wonder that a painter of pictures should have chosen the careless vagabond road for a home and a studio, as Miss Duvall did. She withdrew a little, however, for proper perspective.

The studio is on the side of a hill, above the loitering road. From its many windows one may see the graceful lines of a hundred hills, and beyond them the dreaming purple peaks of the Sierra Madre Mountains. Nature's open gallery of pictures is ever before one, for art's sake or to be loved for themselves alone.

FANNY E. DUVALL.

Fannie E. Duvall has both loved them and painted them, led, by their beckoning beauty, far afield from her own vine-clad porch. Last Sunday and Monday she opened her pleasant studio to the public, showing them new pictures and old. Some of these looked very old indeed, for they are copies of the masters of the Golden Age—a Rembrandt, a Velasquez, an exquisite Madonna and Child in miniature from Botticelli, and a miniature from Frans Hals.

I have seen few copyists whose loving labor was so faithful as Miss Duvall's. These canvases, all painted in the Louvre, have the very texture of the originals, for Miss Duvall was not satisfied with a merely superficial and casual resemblance. She studied each master till she found out how he had painted his subject—and the result is that, to all intents and purposes, we see his own picture before us.

Here we have Rembrandt's wonderfully painted "Portrait of a Man," rich, glowing and sombre, a striking contrast to the portrait of Philip IV by Velasquez, whose color and handling seem to be those of the most modern of the moderns. Yet both, in their simplicity, their sincerity, their technical triumph, are perfect examples of the "grand style" in portraiture, and every one who has not see the originals should not neglect to go and study these almost perfect copies.

There is a Corot, too, his exquisite "Landscape"—which has caught and transferred to canvas the very spirit of spring. Study it awhile—see how the air seems to stir behind the twigs of the tree in the foreground, and then ask yourself: "Who, but Corot, ever painted atmosphere like this?" See how much color there is in that gray sky! Remember, too, what Corot himself once said: "To really get into my landscapes, you must wait. Wait till the mists are cleared a little. Be patient. You can't see the whole of it at first; but gradually, by and by, you'll get in, and then I am sure you will be pleased."

At the time that Miss Duvall was copying this "Landscape," an old friend of Corot's, one who had painted and studied a good deal by his side, came up and complimented her upon it, saying, as he bowed and smiled: "An excellent copy, ma'm'selle, an excellent copy!"

But in my enthusiasm over these beautiful masterpieces I am almost forgetting the purpose of this little article—Miss Duvall's own original work, which is also excellent.

The one that arrests the eye at once, of course, is the huge canvas, "In a Chrysanthemum Garden," which was exhibited at the World's Fair in Chicago. It is beautifully painted. The garden of white blossoms, with a suggestion of yellow in their hearts, is out-of-doors, not because of the accessories, but because of the light and feeling. The hills in the distance are rendered with fidelity and truth. Miss Duvall feels the poetry of flowers, but, as she herself declares, she must paint them in plain air. This canvas has all the charm of one of George Hitchcock's Dutch gardens.

Another interesting flower-piece is that of yellow chrysanthemums. This was exhibited in the Paris Salon in 1892. As I looked at its subtle values and haunting grays, I was reminded of the work of Bastien Lepage, another student of reality who was also a poet.

Miss Duvall has also a few portraits and a nude, done while she was a student in the Whistler School, a few years ago. The nude shows the influence of that master of magical painting to a remarkable degree. The drawing is impeccable, of course—Whistler would not bother with any one who couldn't draw. Its repose, its harmony, its refinement of color, are a satisfaction to the soul. The portraits, one of which I reproduce, also show these qualities of good painting.

Among the landscapes are several studies along the shore below Santa Barbara. One of them, showing sand dunes in the foreground, a gently breaking sea toward the left, and the dissolving vistas of receding hills in the distance, is a restful bit, full of the solemn mystery of a lonely shore.

These pictures which I have mentioned, with a number of others, are to be shown in Redlands this week. It is a pleasure to know that such excellent work will go out on a mission, to preach the gospel of beauty.

ART NOTES—HERE AND THERE.

The Los Angeles College of Fine Arts, Garvanza, with its new wing in a modified mission style of architecture, is now almost twice as big a school as it was before. Indeed, there is probably no art school west of St. Louis quite so complete in its equipments. This is encouraging. It shows that the art impulse is growing with our material growth and prosperity, and that Los Angeles may hopefully expect to be the art center of the West at no distant day. The new building was opened to the public on Friday evening. Some interesting work from the students was shown. This exhibit will be held for a week, and the interested public will be more than welcome.

The Los Angeles Keramic Club held their exhibition in Blanchard Hall on Thursday, Friday and Saturday. There were twenty-eight exhibitors. The work shows a decided advance over that of last year, with a firmer adherence to the conventional idea in decoration, as well as more originality of design.

Florine Hyer has made half-a-dozen sympathetic illustrations for Louis F. Curtis's book of verses, "Story and Song," just issued by R. R. Donnelley & Sons Co., Chicago. Both author and artist are well-known workers in Los Angeles.

The Arts and Crafts will hold its regular monthly meeting at the art gallery of Blanchard Hall on Tuesday, December 12, at 7:45 p.m. Mr. Villa, instructor in the Los Angeles School of Art and Design, Westlake, will give a talk on the "Art of Illustration."

The attendance at the Eugene Torrey exhibition of pictures, studies and sketches was most gratifying. The time was extended two days to meet the request of those who had been unable to attend before. A fair percentage of sales is reported. This is also good news—for Angeleños have not always loosened their purse-strings in the cause of local art.

Marion Holden Pope gave a very interesting talk on the processes of etching before the Friday Morning Club this week. Mrs. Pope, who was a pupil of Whistler, speaks with authority. It is certainly good for us all when those who know come forward to enlighten those of us who don't. This is one of the ways, and one of the best, to foster an intelligent appreciation of true art.

Amsterdam has bought, for $18,000, the house in which Rembrandt lived from 1639 to 1656, when he was dispossessed in bankruptcy proceedings. It will be restored and opened as a Rembrandt museum.

The Chicago Art School connected with its Art Institute, boasts of an attendance of no less than 2304 pupils. The classes are organized upon the French atelier system, that is, divided into studios governed by the artists who instruct them.

The new $50,000 addition to the Detroit Museum of Art was recently opened with an exhibition by the Detroit Society of Women Painters. The walls were hung exclusively with the paintings of Michigan and Detroit artists.

Fair at Rio de Janeiro.

Business men in Brazil are planning to hold an international exhibition in the capital of that country, Rio de Janeiro, in 1908, to celebrate the first centennial of the opening of the ports of Brazil to the commerce of the world. The Commercial Association of Rio de Janeiro, which is an official body, has appointed a committee to develop the enterprise and will extend its support.

The event to be celebrated is of especial interest to American citizens, marking as it did the beginning of the movement for South American freedom. Previous to 1808 Brazil had been a colony of the Portuguese crown, and its ports were closed to any but Portuguese vessels and traders. The world's coffee and rubber, sugar, chocolate, and other tropical products were then bought, not at Rio Santos and Para, but at Lisbon. The dynastic changes of Europe, growing out of the Napoleonic wars, led to the flight of the Portuguese reigning house to Brazil, and while the Portuguese King later returned to his throne, the independence of Brazil was never taken away, and another of his house lived to establish a second empire there, accomplishing a peaceful revolution, which afforded strong moral support to the Spanish colonies of South America in their protracted struggle for freedom. The opening of the Brazilian ports to the trade of the world in 1808 followed in quick succession by the autonomy of the Brazilian plantations and the separation of the Brazilian empire from Portugal, led directly to the movements for independence in Bogota, Caracas, and Buenos Ayres in 1810, which culminated in the ten years' war for freedom and the final recognition of the South American republics by President Monroe in 1821.

It may be that the exposition at Rio de Janeiro will be visited by Americans who still remember the visit of the kindly and upright emperor of Brazil, Dom Pedro II., to the first of the great American expositions, the Centennial of Philadelphia in 1876.—[Chicago Tribune.

"Flower Wedding" Game.

"A Flower Wedding" was the unique and jolly game with which Mrs. George A. Ralphs of No. 1020 Arapahoe street opened the charming afternoon given Wednesday. Guests were given pretty little booklets adorned with brides and grooms and containing such questions as "How did the day of the wedding open?" answered by "Morning Glory." "Why was one precise pridesmaid?" Answer, "Primrose." "How did she know she would marry him?" Answer, "Aster." Ever so many other jolly questions were propounded, the solution being a flower. A fancy Xmas calendar, the first prize, was won by Mrs. Newton Moore, and a book, "Through the Year with Dickens," by Mrs. Clara Taite. The consolation, a fancy Japanese box, fell to Mrs. Wallace Spinks. Later hearts were played in the handsome ballroom above stairs, which had been garlanded with greenery and bright holly wreaths. Miss Pirtle Entertained.

Young people were entertained on Friday evening by Miss Laura Pirtle at her home, No. 1819 Union avenue. A feature was the jolly Christmas tree laden with all sorts of funny things suggestive of some comical trait of the recipient. Decorations were of holly and gorgeous poinsettias, these flowers being the flower of the hostess's birth-month. Games were played and ices and cakes served later in the evening to about twenty-four guests.

Bring Out New Cook Book.

Robert E. Lee Chapter has been right busy of late getting out a handsome cook book, filled with southern recipes, all of which are said to be temptingly good. The book is to be sold for the benefit of the charitable fund of the society. It is prettily gotten up in red cover adorned with the face of an old southern "mammy." The chapter held their meeting on Thursday afternoon at the Woman's Club House. Much important business was transacted, and a resolution was passed that men be admitted as associate members. Mr. Cunningham, editor of the Veteran, was made an honorary member. They also passed a resolution to give to each new-born baby of the chapter a silver spoon. After the business transaction, the chapter was entertained with several violin selections, admirably rendered by Miss Elizabeth Burns, a charming young girl, who is visiting her aunt, Mrs. William S. Overton of Normandie avenue. Miss Burns is an unusually talented girl, with a splendid technique and well-developed powers of expression. She was accompanied by Miss Mary Holmes. After the programme light refreshments were served. Mrs. Benjamin F. Church, the president of the chapter, received, assisted by a number of pretty girls.

Miss Estelle Hayes, of Washington, Ind.

Mrs. Lloyd Collins a pretty St. Louis bride.

Two charming girls who are to be guests of honor at a large luncheon and card party to be given at Westmoore hotel Dec. 16.

To Give Card Party.

Mrs. Addie Lee Buckler of the Hotel Wells-Lee has issued invitations for a handsome luncheon and card party to be given at Hotel Westmoore on Saturday afternoon, December 16, in compliment to her niece, Miss Estelle Winfred Hayes of Washington, Ind., Miss Delia Plumstead and Mrs. Lloyd Collins, a recent bride from St. Louis. Miss Hayes is a charming girl and a much-traveled one, having visited nearly every country in the world. China and Japan have not yet been explored by this pretty maid, but after spending the winter here Miss Hayes with her aunt, Mrs. Buckler, will depart for the Orient to be gone six months. Tuesday evening, December 19, Mrs. Buckler will entertain with an informal card party at the Hotel Wells-Lee for her niece.

Return from Long Trip.

Mr. and Mrs. Austin S. M. Strong of No. 838 South Alvarado street, accompanied by their daughter, Miss Alice, have returned from a five months' trip through the East and North. Particularly enjoyable was the part of their trip which took them through Montreal and Quebec and the Canadian lakes. Miss Hattie Strong sailed three weeks ago from New York on the Baltic for Europe, where she goes to study and enjoy herself.

Celebrates Sixteenth Birthday.

Miss Alma Olsen celebrated her sixteenth birthday with a card party at No. 137 Malcolmson street on Tuesday evening, having as guest about a dozen young friends.

Occupy New Home.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Hance are now occupying their new home at No. 2280 West Twenty-third street. Mr. and Mrs. J. Whyte Evans have returned from a summer trip abroad, and are with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hance on West Twenty-third street. Mrs. Evans is a well-known singer, having formerly been Minnie Hance Owens, and will be welcomed in musical and social circles of the city.

Visit Birthplace.

Mr. and Mrs. Leopoldo Schiapapietra of No. 802 South Alvarado street are enjoying their European trip. Together with their niece, Miss Ida, and her teacher, they made a stay of over a month in the Grand Hotel, in Paris. From Paris they went to Savona, Italy, near which is Albissola, Mr. Schipaaietra's birthplace and where his family still owns extensive estates. From here they write: "Our stay in Paris was cut short by the rain and cold weather, that began soon after our arrival. After New York, Paris seems comparatively quiet, and in the Grand Hotel we missed the elegance of former years and which characterizes the Holland House in New York. One afternoon, as good Californians should, we attended the exposition of flowers and fruits. We found the chrysanthemums numerous in variety and exceedingly beautiful. Still, with a little cultivation, our California flowers could easily equal and exc[illegible] the Parisian products. The tree chrysanthemum is especially worthy of admiration and imitation; for instance, the Tokio, which grows on a single thick stem and holds its bloom in the shape of a tree shrub; one such plant had over fifty blossoms of the lavender color, large size and of exquisite beauty.

"On All Saints' Day, we did what all Paris was doing, we visited the cemetery. We went to Pere La Chaise, where a crowd of over 80,000 people were pouring through the gateway and up the climbing alleys that lead to the funeral chapel at the top. It was a curious sight." Mr. and Mrs. Schiapapietra expect to leave soon for the "Eternal City," Rome, to spend the winter. Mrs. Schiapapietra says, "One of our pleasures in arriving was to find a large package of The Times piled up awaiting us. We look forward every day to our daily paper and read with delight all the good news from Los Angeles.

December Bride.

Mrs. Day Spaulding of Pasadena announces the engagement of her daughter, Abbe Gail Spaulding, to London Darley of this city. Miss Spaulding has chosen December 20 as the date of her wedding.

Mrs. Easton Removes.

Mrs. George Easton has rented her home on Figueroa street and has taken apartments at the Frontenac at No. 212 South Grand avenue. Her sister, Mrs. A. D. Seaman, will be with her through the winter and the two ladies will receive their friends on Mondays.

Delightful Musicale.

The luncheon table was decked with gorgeous chrysanthemums and autumn grapes, giving a pretty effect. Places were marked with hand-painted cards. Mrs. Bain has been most delightfully entertained during her visit here and expects to leave on Wednesday for her northern home.

Will Wed Monday.

Friends are much interested in the marriage of Frank C. Collier, well-known young lawyer and popular member of the Ellis Club, to Miss Kate Pinkerton, sister of Mrs. May Pinkerton Pratt of Santa Barbara. Both young people are well known in the younger social crowd and especially in San Diego, Mr. Collier being a son of Mrs. D. C. Collier of that city, his father, before his death, having been a Supreme Judge of San Diego county. The Collier family are pioneers of San Diego and Miss Pinkerton spent her girlhood there. Mr. Collier is an Ann Arbor man and associated with John W. Kemp in the law practice.

The wedding will take place on Monday evening at Immanuel Presbyterian Church, with Rev. Hugh K. Walker officiating. Miss Margaret Carter will be maid of honor and Misses Emma Harris of this city and Edith White of Whittier will be bridesmaids. The bride will be given away by her sister, Mrs. Pratt, and D. C. Collier, brother of the groom, is to act as best man. Fred Shoemaker and Dan Carter will usher the guests.

For Miss Ruperd.

In compliment to Miss Hazel Bell Ruperd, whose engagement to William H. Elwell, Jr., was recently announced, Mrs. C. W. Lyke of No. 3016 Key West street entertained on Thursday evening with a progressive-whist party, followed by a handkerchief shower.

The pretty home was gay with scarlet geraniums, poinsettias and garlands of smilax. After a pleasant evening spent in playing whist, the party adjourned to the spacious dining-room, where luncheon was served, covers being laid for sixteen and places were marked by place cards adorned with hearts. Mrs. H. P. Stroer assisted the hostess in entertaining. The fair honorée was the recipient of many beautiful hand-made handkerchiefs. Mrs. J. R. "As You Like It" Card Club.

Mrs. Homer Morris of Ocean Park entertained members of the "As You Like It" Card Club at luncheon and whist on Friday. The dining-room was decorated with red carnations and asparagus ferns. Scores were kept on bell-shaped cards adorned with holly berries. The first prize, a souvenir teaspoon of Venice, was won by Mrs. Rollo Snell. Miss Rose Prescott captured the second, an Ocean Park souvenir spoon, and Mrs. Harley Brundidge won the third, a Japanese cup and saucer. Mrs. Morris chartered the Venice miniature train and the club viewed Venice from all sides. The following ladies were guests: Mmes. H. I. Nance, Mark Turnbull, Robert C. P. Smith, J. F. Giles, Walter Harvey, Edward Snell, Rollo Snell, M. M. Symmes, Harley Brundidge, Clarence H. Pease and Misses Emma I. Harvey, Ellen H. Wheeler and Rose Prescott.

Sunshine Society.

Members of the Sunshine Society were entertained last week by the president, Mrs. William Wallace McLeod, at her home on West Eighteenth street. The third edition of the pretty little year-book published by the club will be out soon. It is an artistic souvenir of California, adorned with a golden poppy and contains a ray of sunshine in the form of an appropriate verse for each day in the year. The sale of this book has been phenomenal, and the demand for it requires the third edition to be published.

Box Party.

A pleasant little party was given on Saturday afternoon by Mrs. S. M. Kiser of Chateau Frontenac in honor of Mrs. Charles Rockwell, who will leave in a few days for her home in San Diego. The party was given at the Belasco, and following it, a luncheon was served at a down-town café. Guests were: Mrs. Charles Rockwell, Mrs. Bellows, Mrs. A. Canfield, Miss C. H. Calendar Club Social.

The Calender Club of the Park Congregational Church gave a most enjoyable and profitable social on Friday evening, under the direction of two most efficient members, Mrs. H. C. Terrill and Mrs. McCollum. This Calender Club is one formed of women, each month having two women who give socials for the benefit of the church fund, with which members are planning to build a new church. This social captured more than $275 for the fund. An enjoyable programme was given including, numbers by the High School Orchestra, which quite won the guests, with its verve and fire under the leadership of Mrs. Hastings. Miss Maude Hutchinson, a talented senior of Cumnock School, gave readings, and Miss Lena Moss Terrill delighted the audience with her sweet singing. Mr. Guenther and Mr. Kaestner also contributed vocal music.

Bazaar and Dinner.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the University Methodist Episcopal Church held a successful bazaar and dinner Thursday afternoon and evening. Under the able direction of Mrs. J. R. Umsted elaborate preparations had been made and many pretty features were concocted.

The booths were artistically arrayed with many beautiful and unique articles suitable for Christmas presents. The dinner was really an old-time harvest home affair, pumpkins and sheaves of wheat were effectively arranged in decorating the large basement. There were nine tables in all and at the head of each table presided a hostess.

The following ladies were in charge of the different booths: Fancy work, Miss Lillian Murdock; domestic booth, Mrs. W. H. Sallada; candies and knickknack, Mrs. N. E. Smith; dolls, Mrs. T. W. Tolchard. Mrs. J. R. Umsted had charge of the dinner, and Mrs. A. F. Speicher was incharge of the ice cream booth. Over 300 guests enjoyed the dinner and the ladies of the church cleared nearly $200.

The young women of the College Y.W.C.A., held a special sale in connection with the bazaar to raise funds for the annual Capitola convention. A variety of college emblems and descriptive postal cards were sold, and over forty dollars was cleared. Misses Florence Speicher, Cora Dyer and Elaine Anderson conducted the sale.

One of the prettiest and most profitable affairs of the kind was the first annual bazaar and dinner given by the ladies of the St. James' Methodist Episcopal Church Friday afternoon and evening. Every one of the ladies in charge of the booths had vied with one another in an endeavor to have her booth the prettiest and many unique and pleasing features resulted.

Uncle Sam's Hero Fund.

[illegible] SILVER MEDALS OF HONOR AWARDED BY TREASURY DEPARTMENT FOR SAVING LIFE.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

[illegible] of the season of [illegible] reminds us that [illegible] Shaw has in his keep[illegible] hero fund, expended an[illegible] in the minting of medals, both [illegible] and gold, conferred since 1876 [illegible] of six hundred brave [illegible].

[illegible] of honor are annually [illegible] by the Secretary for the sav[illegible] life and not for the tak[illegible] precious heritage, as are [illegible], in most instances, those [illegible] awarded to our soldiers [illegible]. The records of these life-[illegible] are illumined and [illegible] by incidents as thrilling as [illegible] can afford to the workaday [illegible] for exciting adventure. [illegible] the official records of the last [illegible] honor roll's annual install[illegible] of gold medalists I have ab[illegible] the following paragraphs, [illegible] a storiette, but one yet [illegible] stranger than a tale, be[illegible] true account of real, live [illegible] flesh and bone.

[illegible]MAN CAPPS'S FEAT.

[illegible] thick fog in October, when [illegible] was blowing a hurricane off [illegible] Beach, the schooner barge [illegible] was wrecked about two [illegible] miles above the life-sav[illegible] at that point. Surfman W. [illegible] whose turn it was to patrol [illegible] had proceeded only a half [illegible] the station when he discov[illegible] wreckage washing up on the [illegible]. Proceeding farther he saw a [illegible] struggling desperately in the [illegible] immediately rushing in, [illegible] ashore through the mad [illegible]. Placing the rescued man in [illegible] sand dune, Capps ran to [illegible] for aid, but had gone only [illegible] when he discovered a body, [illegible] dead, 100 yards out in the [illegible] the surfman bethought [illegible] one spark of life might [illegible] in that clay. Although no [illegible] was near, although his [illegible] of life would be small in [illegible] churning gulf and at such a [illegible], he hurriedly doffed his [illegible] and plunged in to the [illegible] as the man sank into [illegible] of the inner waves—where [illegible] at the height of its fury [illegible] him and turned for [illegible] a heavy sea took both [illegible] his burden under. The [illegible] utterly helpless and it [illegible] necessary for the nearly [illegible] surfman to raise him and [illegible] while. Succeeding in this [illegible] necessary to resusci[illegible] victim of the sea. After ap[illegible] the service method of reanima[illegible] many minutes the surfman [illegible] breathe again and sit [illegible] protected, half clad and [illegible] to keep his feet, next [illegible] the station, met his [illegible] up the beach, and [illegible] the rescued men [illegible] reward for all of [illegible] Secretary Shaw has [illegible] him a gold medal.

[illegible] BOTTOM BAR.

[illegible] tempestuous night [illegible] barkentine Abiel [illegible] Turk's Island for [illegible] upon Ship Bot[illegible] that treacherous [illegible] the Jersey coast [illegible] tribute from sailing [illegible] days when galleon [illegible] the Spanish [illegible] sea was running high, [illegible] man on patrol first [illegible] hull pounding. [illegible] his red-fire signal he [illegible] his comrades about him. [illegible] was the night and so [illegible] that the launching [illegible] could not be consid[illegible] little army of surfmen in [illegible] and sou'easters, could [illegible] establish communication [illegible] vessel by means of [illegible], which shoots to save [illegible]. One shot failed, and [illegible] soldiers shook their [illegible] others fell short of [illegible]. Then another line, all [illegible]," was brought out, [illegible] carried it aboard of [illegible] craft, together with the [illegible] bearing in French an[illegible] as to making fast [illegible]. But the ship had now [illegible] break up, heavy seas [illegible] her decks, and her [illegible] unable to reach the line. [illegible], ignorant of all this, [illegible] chilled feet upon the [illegible] and waited for the pull [illegible] should signal the [illegible] to be run out. During [illegible] of the ship's crew [illegible] swept into the churning [illegible] first gray gleam of [illegible] the awful scene and [illegible] remaining five of the [illegible] clinging, half frozen, [illegible] the cabin. The vessel [illegible] shattered hulk, and the [illegible] was strewn with broken [illegible] wreckage, parted by no [illegible] admit the lifeboat [illegible] of the great spars [illegible] the waves tumbled [illegible] direction and which [illegible] short shrift of their [illegible] plucky squad, now [illegible] the crew of the ad[illegible] launched the lifeboat, [illegible] and struggled des[illegible] to be at last beaten [illegible] defeated and almost [illegible] attempt with the [illegible] and yet there were [illegible], quivering men, [illegible], still clinging to [illegible] barkentine. Again a [illegible] never hoped to [illegible] put out in the surf- [illegible] stroke of the oar the [illegible] threatened them on [illegible] spars caused their [illegible], and several [illegible] lost; and just [illegible] apparently hopeless [illegible] miracle seemed to [illegible] men, who were [illegible]. Two keepers—[illegible] the Ship Bottom [illegible] and George Math[illegible] station—have re[illegible] for this heroism, as [illegible] Horace Cranmer, [illegible] Walter Pharo, Bar[illegible] Pharo, Salmons.

[illegible] FISHERMEN.

[illegible] had passed along [illegible] leaving a heavy [illegible] southern wind and a high surf, which by noon was breaking all the way from the bar to the beach. Only a few of the more daring fishboats of Squan Beach had ventured out, but among those which had was that of Captain Anderson, returning from the pound with a heavy load of fish in charge of the skipper himself, his son and five fishermen. When the little skiff was just outside the bar a heavy sea capsized her and threw the occupants into the surf. Charlie Boker, a fisherman, seeing them capsize from shore, immediately ran to a skiff lying near, hauled it to the beach and was urging another fisherman to help him launch the craft when Captain "Bob" Longstreet of the Squan Beach life-saving station arrived on the scene. It being the inactive summer season when only he, the keeper, remains at the station, Captain Bob had no crew to call upon; so into the skiff he jumped with Boker and they pulled away through the heavy sea toward the imperiled men. It was an ugly task that faced them, for they had to battle with wind, sea and current. A lifeboat would have weathered it with little peril, but there was none near at hand, and the little skiff was frail. She became so flooded by the breaking of the heavy seas that one of the men had to bail while the other rowed. A crowd now gathered upon shore stood with bated breath and watched the plucky navigators, little hoping that they would save themselves, much less the fishermen clinging to the wreck.

They groaned as they saw the upturned boat wash into a "pocket" of the sea where the waves broke over so furiously that all of her men save two were washed away, but fortunately in the direction of the shore. The rescuers, drawing as close to the wreck as possible, cried for Capt. Anderson to dash for the skiff and save himself, but the stalwart skipper would not desert his sole companion who could not swim. He had remained by this helpless one, swimming in the lee of the wreck, ready to sustain him in case he should loose hold.

SOME DARING WORK.

The skiff was now backed close down so that the brave skipper could lay hold of the stern, but just as he did so a great sea swept his comrade from the capsized boat. This was a critical moment, but Anderson still had his wits about him, and just as the man was drifting away, caught him by the arm, while Keeper Longstreet, leaning far out of the heaving skiff, also seized the man and held him until the next great breaker had passed. Both men were then taken into the skiff and carried safely ashore. Meantime four of the five, including the captain's son, had succeeded in reaching the beach, but the other, unable to swim, went down for the third time and failed to reappear. A moan now rose again from the crowd upon the beach, whence not a man dared volunteer to rescue the only lost fisherman. But young Anderson, who had so narrowly saved his own life, without waiting to rest, seized the end of a line and heroically plunged into the breakers in search of his lost companion, whom he at last found lying bottom, about forty yards from shore. Young Anderson grasped him tightly and struggled to the surface with him, and by the aid of the cord both were then pulled ashore by persons on the beach. The rescued one showed no sign of life. The life-saving service method of resuscitation was applied to him for over an hour before life returned. Gold medals have been awarded to Longstreet, Boker and the elder Anderson, while a silver medal has been given to young Anderson.

LIGHTKEEPER GUIDED RESCUER.

A gold medal has been awarded Nils Nelson of the Sakonnet lighthouse, R. I., for a plucky rescue made on July 24. Nelson, while on watch on the lighthouse, saw an immense wave board and swamp a gasoline whaleboat and dash it to pieces against the near-by rocks. The sole occupant of the boat was seen to swim to a rock, and by lying flat and clinging to the crevices, to temporarily prevent himself from being swept away by the angry seas. Nelson further saw two boats start from shore to the man's rescue. He also saw them give up the attempt. Neither could get anywhere near the rock, so great was the wrath of the waves. The man had now been clinging fast to the ledge for more than half an hour. Every minute he seemed in imminent danger of being washed off and drowned. Something within Nils Nelson summoned him to action. Assisted by his superior, the lightkeeper, he launched the lighthouse supply boat and while the keeper remained at the lighthouse and directed him by signals, Nelson manned the boat, and with great difficulty managed to pull clear of the jagged rocks until he could come near the imperiled man. To go directly to the latter's rock was of course out of the question. One wave would grind the rescue boat to splinters. So Nelson called to the man to throw himself toward the boat as soon as the next wave should pass, and that thereupon he would take him in. The man bided his time, then jumped and reached the boat, which the wave lifted completely over the reef and set down on a sheltered spot of much smoother water, whence both men landed safely on shore.

BENJAMIN CROMWELL WRECK.

Past 2 o'clock on a foggy February morning the schooner Benjamin C. Cromwell was stranded upon a bar near Bellport, Long Island, and when sighted by the life-savers of that locality the seas were breaking completely over her, compelling her crew to take to the rigging. The life-saving crews of three stations of that vicinity soon appeared upon the scene and with their Lyle guns made several heroic attempts to shoot a line to the stranded vessel, but she was surrounded with so much wreckage that it was impossible for her crew to haul the hawser aboard. Recourse was then had to the surfboat, but the sea was so high that, despite the most desperate efforts of the life-savers, it was thrown back upon the beach at every attempt at launching. Meanwhile the masts of the vessel went over the side and the hull quickly began to break up. The life crew, scattered along the beach with life lines, stood ready to assist any of the shipwrecked crew who should come through the surf, and soon observed a man drifting upon the top of the cabin. Surfmen Raynor and Latham, of the Blue Point crew, immediately rushed into the mad breakers, and after battling with seemingly superhuman efforts among the floating spars, timbers and lumber, and after being time and again carried under water, reached the shipwrecked man and bore him unconscious to the beach. The vessel originally loaded with lumber, had now completely broken up and discharged her cargo upon the sea. After the rescue of the lone man from the cabin top the remainder of the crew were seen clinging to a piece of wreckage. Unsuccessful efforts with the Lyle gun and surfboats were again made, and meanwhile all save two of the imperiled crew were washed off and lost. Raynor and Latham, scarcely rested from their first brave exploit, dashed again into the surf, and now borne beneath the waves, now struck by the floating timber, swam out, still undaunted, until a tremendous breaker dashed the half-maddened men from the wreckage. Groping about in the black, seething gulf, they were able to save one of the unfortunates by dint of efforts which to their comrades seemed miraculous, and in reward for which each of them has received a gold medal, with special mention.

THE AUGUSTUS HUNT RESCUE.

The four-masted schooner Augustus Hunt, laden with coal from Norfolk, while under full headway, ploughed her keel hard into the bar off Quogue, Long Island, on a foggy Friday night in January. Three-quarters of an hour after she struck a life-saving man on patrol discovered the casualty and hastened to the Quogue station to summon his comrades, who hastily repaired to the scene, dragging their surfboat, gun and breeches buoy. Several lines were shot at the wreck without effect. The crew then launched their boat, but were unable to force it through the drifting wreckage. Soon after dawn the schooner's masts fell and several of the wrecked crew, who had taken to the rigging, were thus hurled into the water and drowned. But there still remained, black against the gray morning sky, five desperate men clinging to the jib boom. This refuge was then carried away by the angry sea, which claimed three more men, and therefore left only two survivors of the entire ship's company. These men, after the crash of the boom, were seen drifting toward shore upon some wreckage. A fortunate shot from the Lyle gun carried a line to the hands of one of them. He made it fast, and the life-savers began to haul the wreckage slowly toward the beach. One of the shipwrecked men was then seen to take the line under his arm and to begin to pick his way over the pitching field of floating debris. He did not proceed far before a heavy sea knocked him down and swallowed him up. Death was the penalty of the man's foolhardiness; so it seemed until Surfman Halsey of the Quogue station placed a line about his waist and plunged into the breakers in search of the unfortunate. Halsey did not stop to consider the fact that his chances for life were small amid those heavy timbers now carried aloft on some white crest, now plunged deep into the trough of the sea. Fighting his way to the helpless man he dragged him close to the beach, whereupon other life-savers holding the line fast to him dragged ashore both him and his charge. The man remaining upon the wreckage now repeated the step of his comrade and was, in his turn, swept beneath the breakers. Surfman Warner of the same crew now followed the example of Halsey, but made his way to the perishing sailor without waiting to fasten a line to himself. Gold medals have been awarded to both of these plucky chaps.

WOMEN MEDALISTS.

Eight women have received these medals since the hero fund was established. The first thus honored was Ida Lewis-Wilson, the famous keeper of the Lime Rock lighthouse, at Newport, who at various times had rescued at least thirteen persons when decorated in 1881. Her gold medal was conferred particularly for her rescue of two soldiers who had broken through the ice at Lime Rock in February, 1881. Six years later Edith Clarke of Oakland, Cal., received a gold medal for rescuing a schoolmate from drowning in Lake Chabot, and in 1888 Marie D. Parsons of Fireplace Point, L. I., received a silver medal for rescuing from drowning, when 10 years old, a young man and a little girl. The same year two women, Mary Whiteley and Maud King of Charleston, S. C., received silver medals for collectively rescuing from drowning three men whose boat had capsized in Charleston harbor. Mabel Mason of the Mamajuda light station, Detroit River, received a medal of the same kind in 1891 for rescuing a man thrown into the river by the swash of a passing steamer. Bertie O. Burr of Lincoln, Neb., received a gold medal in 1892 for rescuing from drowning "with heroic bravery," two young women with whom she was bathing in Blue River. The same year another gold medal was awarded Massie Milne of Newark, N. J., who at Avon, N. J., rescued by swimming to her assistance and bringing her ashore, a woman who was being carried out to sea by the tide and who had fallen unconscious into the surf.

LABOR CONDITIONS IN NEW ZEALAND—WHAT HAS LEGISLATION DONE?

By Allen Kelly.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

II.

AUCKLAND (N. Z.) Oct.—New Zealand's "labor legislation" comprises a large number of acts of Parliament and amendments, most of them passed in 1890 and since, affecting the relations of employers and employed and tending toward the establishment of state socialism. Briefly summarized, without attempting at this stage to explain the details or the full scope of operation of the various acts, the principal achievements of the Liberal Labor party in control of the government are as follows:

LABOR PARTY'S RECORD.

Government ownership and operation of railroads. Partial nationalization of the land through leasehold tenure of crown lands, and exercise of the right of eminent domain to break up large holdings. Abolition of general property tax and institution of taxation of unimproved land values, exempting improvements and small holdings. (Not the single tax, however.) Graduated land tax, bearing heavily on large holders and prohibitive of absentee landlordism. Government aid to settlers in the form of loans at low interest. Graduated income tax, exempting small incomes.

Compulsory compensation of injured workers by employers, combined with optional government insurance of the employer against loss.

Prohibition of the "truck" system in payment of workers.

State life, accident and fire insurance in competition with private companies.

Regulation of the employment of women and children and abolition of the "sweating" system.

Regulation of the hours of labor.

Improvement of physical and sanitary conditions of factory labor, enforced by strict inspection.

Government operation of coal mines to check monopoly and regulate prices.

Establishment of postal savings banks and a national commercial bank.

Government steamship lines, carrying freight to foreign ports.

Early closing of shops on a local option system.

Government inspection and grading of farm products, combined with expert advice and assistance to farmers.

Civil service protection of public employés.

Old age pensions.

Ballot reform; one man, one vote.

Enfranchisement of women.

Judicial arbitration of industrial disputes and virtual abolition of strikes, lockouts and boycotts.

What has been the effect of this legislation upon the welfare of all classes of people, and what conditions, social, political and industrial, has it produced?

THE EFFECTS.

Before attempting to give an answer, derived as a conclusion, from observation and investigation, I deem it advisable to report what New Zealanders have to say when asked for their opinions on the subject. It should be borne in mind that a general election of members of Parliament is imminent, and that personal views are likely to be colored at this time by party feeling. Even in the United States one would hardly expect to get impartial, dispassionate opinions of the merits of men or measures in the last week or two of a hot national campaign. The Opposition is making strenuous efforts to oust Premier Seddon and the Liberals, and the Seddon supporters are working the "prosperity" dodge for all it is worth to retain control.

First, I will quote a sheep farmer from the back blocks, a keen-eyed young man, who has traveled in the States and knows his own business thoroughly and intelligently. He is of the Opposition. Denounces the Seddon government as corrupt and accuses it of shameless, demagogic truckling to the labor vote. Says the public service is used as a political machine by Seddon. Cannot make it quite clear how the no-party ballot can be perverted to the purposes of the political boss. Believes labor legislation is bad and must be done away with to save the country. Considers the slow growth of cities an evidence of lack of prosperity and progress. Asked if there is any destitution, any slum problem, promptly pronounces New Zealand the most prosperous country in the world and says she has no poor and no slums. Denies that prosperity is due in any degree to political conditions or government policies, but holds that the country is so wonderfully productive that it prospers in spite of bad government. Argues that the Boer war, creating a demand for products, was the chief factor in the production of good times. Approves the land policy generally. Does not believe the Premier is honest, and accuses him of making money by suppressing information and cornering the oat market during the Boer war.

HOW ABOUT COST OF LIVING?

Next comes a merchant, doing a large business in Auckland, but not employing much labor other than of the clerk class. Says labor legislation has raised wages, but also has increased the cost of living and been of no great benefit to workers. Believes the existing laws and the fear of further legislation along similar lines discourage the investment of capital in manufactures. Shop-closing act does not suit him at all. Regards it as meddlesome and of no benefit to any one. Thinks it bad for the working classes to have too much leisure time. If not kept busy, they will fall into evil ways, and crime and vice will increase. Admits that Auckland is orderly and singularly free from crime, and that it is the habit of many householders to leave doors unlocked at night, but sticks to his theory.

[The invention of the lucifer match was viewed with alarm by many persons in England. They wrote to the London Times that it would promote arson.]

The business manager and part owner of a leading newspaper opposed to the Seddon government, said that wages and prices both had been advanced by legislation, leaving labor in relatively the same position as before. Nobody had been greatly benefited and nobody had been injured. Physical conditions of factory labor had been greatly improved. Some employers did not like the preference to union labor prescribed in awards of the arbitration court, and some apprehended further legislation in the interests of the unions. It was all right so far, and would be all right if labor did not force the government to go too far. There was no discouragement of investment of capital, except perhaps in some special lines of manufacture, in which competition was close, and no serious complaint on the score of heavy taxes. The arbitration law had worked well on the whole, although in minor details the awards were not always satisfactory to employers. It was better to put up with some small annoyances, however, than to go through the vexation, waste and disturbance of strikes. He employed only union printers under an award, and had no trouble whatever with them. The terms were not oppressive and the union did not attempt to meddle with the business. The men were of the best class and did good work. Linotype operators work eight hours and are paid by the week, receiving $16.50 for day work and $17 for night work.

WOULD AMEND.

A prominent and vigorous Opposition editor, when asked if his party would undo any of the existing legislation if it should come into power, replied that most emphatically it would not. It might amend some laws to remove developed defects, but had no idea of changing materially the policies embodied in them. Criticism of the government by the Opposition was directed against details of administration and the personal actions of ministers who had been so long in power that they had grown reckless, extravagant and careless of public interests. The only distinct departure from the government's policy—so far as it could be said to have any policy—advocated by the Opposition, was extension of freehold tenure or the opportunity to acquire it at option. The government had no definite land policy, while the Opposition had a very distinct one. There was in the labor legislation some tendency toward discouragement of investment. Much of it was beneficial, but some of it was irritating. It had not lessened the earnings of capital already invested, but that was due to the general prosperity of the country, which, in turn, was due to rapid growth and improvement of the dairy interests, to good prices of products and consequent spending capacity of the people.

An Independent-Labor candidate for Parliament, who does not expect to win, but is making a campaign to propagate Socialistic ideas, said: "Don't believe all you hear about the ideal condition of labor in New Zealand. This country is not so lush with prosperity as the enthusiasts say, nor is it so badly off as disgruntled capitalists declare it to be. We have poverty here—respectable poverty, poverty that struggles to keep up appearances. And we have the economic conditions which make for poverty.

"It is true that wages have been raised about 8 per cent. on the average, but Coghlan's statistics show that the cost of living has increased 30 per cent. Rents have gone up anywhere from 30 to 50 per cent. Times are good now, but good for the middlemen. We have no strikes now, but if a period of commercial depression should occur, as it is likely to, we may have them. The test of all that has been done here will come later.

"The arbitration law is good and makes for industrial peace. The Advances to Settlers Act is beneficial; its effect is to lower the rate of interest. The new law, designed to assist workmen in acquiring small homes in suburbs on easy terms, is expected to solve the rent question, and, perhaps, it will improve conditions to some degree. There is plenty of opportunity here for capital, considering the smallness of the country, and the sparseness of population. No industry carried on by men of brains fails. But conditions are not so favorable here as in most countries for the creation of monopolies and the exploitation of labor. Men who think their property entitles them to live in idleness off the earnings of others do not like the conditions, and they go away and curse the country. They don't like the graduated land tax or the income tax, and they swear the country is being ruined by taxation. The Lord knows what they would say if they were subjected to the straight single tax.

"Our platform demands nationalization of all means of production, and we hope in twenty years to see the conditions making for poverty abolished in New Zealand. If that be done it will be the work of the Socialists and Labor party, not of the party now in power. Premier Seddon is not a statesman; he is an opportunist. He always manages to fall on the softest side of the fence."

DULLEST TIMES.

An intelligent, well-to-do man of the working class, who has been in the colony forty years, and has become an employer in a small way, says times are the dullest he has ever known. More men are out of work than ever before. He thinks there has been too much labor legislation, too much coddling of the workingman by government. Capital is loth to invest. Workingmen want the hours of labor reduced beyond reason.

The October report of the Department of Labor says there is dullness in building trades, due in part to a dispute between builders and architects, and in part to the slow opening of suburbs by tramway extensions. Rent "has not fallen," says the report. Improvement in the boot trade is attributed to the tariff on American manufactures. Clothing factories are overstocked and easing off. Retail dealers report money tight. Meat is scarce and dear. There is a surplus of unskilled labor in the cities.

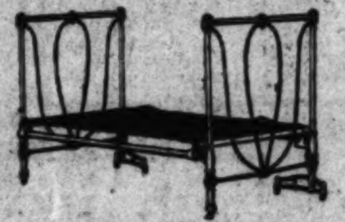
Something Entirely New



Foldable Iron Beds

Revolutionizing Bedroom Furnishings

Never since the invention of the carpet sweeper has there been such a tremendous demand for any article until the advent of the foldable iron bed.

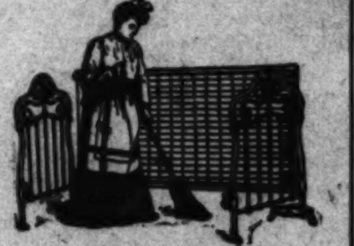
All over the United States, hotels, apartment houses and private families are installing these beds. They have all the good qualities of the ordinary iron bed, with this remarkable feature—by a wonderful device they may be folded in a twinkle without disturbing the covers, so that they occupy only one-sixth of the room.

This Style Only $13.50

True to our policy we shall sell these Standard foldable iron beds at extraordinary low prices. The beautiful style shown above is only $13.50. Bear in mind they are not necessarily a folding bed, but a most solid and artistic standing bed, which at any time you can fold in a twinkle. They have the finest springs on the market and their ventilation is much superior to that of the ordinary bed.

Sold Exclusively by Brent's

These "Standard" foldable iron beds are now offered for the first time in Los Angeles. For months the Los Angeles furniture Trust has been striving to get the agency. Manufacturers withheld the agency until they could determine which concern would be likely to sell the beds for the least money, and therefore sell the greatest quantity. The business has finally been awarded to Brent's, which is another proof of the truth that we have advertised for many months, viz.: That Brent's has a greater output than all the Trust stores combined.



These Beds Transform a Bedroom into a Living Room

These foldable beds make it possible to transform a living room into a bedroom in less than one minute. They are better in every particular than any other folding bed on the market. We will be glad to show these beds to any interested party.

Don't Miss the Big...

Auction--Daily Sales

Selling Out Everything in Our Old Store

Have you been to the big Auction?

If not, don't miss the first sale next Monday at 10 o'clock.

Everything in our old store must be cleaned out. Our lease expires in less than a month. Hundreds of tables, chairs, stoves, single pieces, parlor sets, beds, couches, china, carpets, rugs, and other goods are being rushed out.

We don't wait for the highest bidder. We can't. Things are sold so quickly it will fairly take your breath away. Last week a $40 extension table went for $7.00 and 10 rolls of carpet were sold at 16c a yard. Come and see for yourself. $30,000 to be gotten out in two weeks.

First Sale Begins Monday at 10 o'clock Second Sale Monday at 2 p.m. and every day thereafter, two sales, at 10 a. m. and 2 p. m.

This is your chance to buy new furniture for less money than you pay at private auction sales. Don't miss the first sale.

Auction at Our Old Store, Location 530-534 South Spring Street

DON'T FORGET our new store is located on Main street near 7th. You can see the big sign on top of the building from almost every direction. This is the largest building occupied by any retail establishment in Southern California. (The auction, of course, takes place at our old store, where we are selling off our old stock.)

With only twelve trading days between you and Christmas, we may be pardoned for suggesting that you'd "Better Hurry." Every minute you delay now puts some choice article out of your reach—Christmas wares are being snapped up with a rush and the choicest tid-bits, those of which only one of a kind was to be had, are rapidly melting away. Trade early in the week if possible, but trade early in the day if late in the week, as the crowds are lighter before noon. Toyville is now at its best; Santa Claus is here and every conceivable toy, game and wheel vehicle which is dear to the heart of children is here for your choosing. No argument is necessary in regard to price, as everybody knows Broadway Department Store Prices are "Everlastingly the Lowest."

Thousands of Filmy Handkerchiefs

Purchased From a Retiring Importer at a Remarkable Price Concession.

Handkerchiefs at the price we were enabled to secure this stock would be remarkable at any season of the year, but right now when handkerchiefs are in demand for holiday gifts this purchase is doubly important. A prominent importer about to retire from business, for a spot cash offer turned his entire stock our way and at a price that only ready cash could secure. They are just the kind you want for holiday gifts and the prices, well they tell their own story—read on.

THE OPEN SHOP—Labor Union Crimes Uncovered in San Francisco

CURRENT COMMENT.

THE CITIZENS' ALLIANCE of Los Angeles has sounded a note of warning. It should be heeded. It must be heeded. It will be heeded.

The Times has already exposed the conspiracy against which the Citizens' Alliance warns the people of Los Angeles. Although denial has been made by the mouthpieces and spokesmen of the unionists that a general strike has been planned for the first of the year in Los Angeles, there is overwhelming proof that such a move was contemplated. If it has been abandoned, it is because the plans of the totemite gang were so completely exposed that it was found impracticable to carry out the original programme.

Let it not be supposed, however, that the conspirators will readily abandon their purpose, although they may change their tactics. They have set out to forge about Los Angeles the same chains of union slavery as those which they have succeeded in fastening upon San Francisco. They will omit no effort, however unscrupulous, for the accomplishment of their purpose. They propose to elect a labor union tool, if possible, as Mayor of Los Angeles. That accomplished, they could secure the appointment of totemites to the Police Commission, and would thus secure control of the Police Department. Then would begin the reign of lawlessness which is essential to their control of the city. With a Mayor, a Police Commission, and a Chief of Police subservient to Jim Gray, Lem Biddle, Fennessy, and their fellow agitators, the shackles of Los Angeles would be complete. Union demagogues and loafers would be the real rulers of the city, while the actual officials would be mere figureheads, as they are today in San Francisco. The freedom which every man in Los Angeles now enjoys, to live safely and to labor freely, would be at an end, and it would be replaced by union thuggery, intolerance and crime, amounting even to murder. No man's life would be safe if he dared to assert and sought to maintain his independence. In place of peace we should have discord; in place of contentment we should have discontent; in place of plenty we should have want; in place of prosperity we should have industrial stagnation and failure.

These things will not come to pass in Los Angeles. Forewarned is forearmed. To recognize our peril is to avoid it if we will. We have won our liberty at too large cost, and we have maintained it at too great sacrifice, to abandon the fruits of our victory now.

The people of Los Angeles can keep themselves unfettered if they choose to do so. They have only to stand firmly up for freedom in the future as they have done in the past. To oppose the demands of union demagogues with courage and firmness is to defeat them. To yield to them is to submit to bondage most intolerable.

The people of Los Angeles undoubtedly have a fight ahead of them before this question can be settled. But they are used to fighting for freedom. They have won many industrial battles, and they will continue to win so long as they continue to "hold fast that which is good."

A more scathing indictment has seldom or never been set forth in a public document than that furnished in the report of the grand jury of San Francisco city and county, submitted August 19 of the current year. Liberal extracts from the report are published in another column. These extracts speak for themselves, and they tell a tale of corruption and graft of which even the hardened grafters of the union labor régime ought to be ashamed. The iniquities uncovered by the grand jury are a disgrace, not alone to the city of San Francisco, but to the State of California. They furnish a significant commentary on the folly of placing in control of a municipal government an irresponsible gang of labor union grafters.

When the investigations of the grand jury were made, Abe Ruef and his pliant tools governed the city and county of San Francisco, while Schmitz was, as he is today, a mere puppet, who had to perform his grotesque gyrations when Ruef pulled the string. Since the report of the grand jury was submitted another election has been held in San Francisco, and the Ruef-Schmitz machine, through all manner of ways that are dark and tricks that are not in vain, has further intrenched itself in municipal power. Has the scorching arraignment of the grand jury had the effect which it ought to have had in bringing about a reform of the abuses pointed out? The present condition of affairs in San Francisco furnishes a sufficient answer. The municipal government has never been so corrupt as it is today. Vice runs rampant, and graft flourishes without rebuke. The work of the grand jury was performed in vain, so far as any effect it might have had in reforming abuses is concerned.

The end of this scandalous situation must come sooner or later. Not always will the people of San Francisco submit to be plundered and disgraced. As Philadelphia had its Weaver, so will some strong, just man arise in San Francisco, at the opportune moment to rout the forces of graft and corruption, and bring the people to their own. Public sentiment will sustain him, and the Lord will bless him.

The Gilhooley trial in Chicago is opening up new avenues of evidence tending to show that the union sluggers in that city have been guilty not only of maiming and murdering non-unionists, but of committing arson for the accomplishment of their criminal purposes. One of the witnesses, George Meller, has revealed union "secrets" that may land some of his co-conspirators in the penitentiary, if not upon the gallows. Many mysterious fires have accompanied strikes in Chicago, and the testimony of George Meller has put the insurance companies on the qui vive, with a strong possibility of sensational developments.

When it comes to making "demands," the totemite contingent is "strictly in it." Their demand that a trade unionist shall be appointed to membership on the new Board of Public Works is entitled to the same consideration as a demand from the Masonic order, or from the Knights of Pythias, or from any other secret society, for representation on the board. The men appointed to that important branch of the city government should be chosen solely on account of their fitness, and not because of their religious, social, industrial or political affiliations. The Mayor will hardly fail to keep this thought in mind in making his appointments.

A WORD TO STRIKERS.

A cheerful worker who goes ahead and makes himself a necessity to a business—never adding to the burden of his superiors—will sooner or later get all that is his due, and more. He will not only get pay for his work, but he will also get a bonus for his patience and another for his good cheer.

A man who makes a strike to have his wages raised from fifteen to eighteen dollars a week may get the raise, and then his wages will stay there. Had he kept quiet and just been intent on making himself a five-thousand-dollar man, he might have gravitated straight to a five-thousand-dollar desk.

I would not risk spoiling my chances for a big promotion by asking for a little one, and it is but a trite truism to say that no man ever received a big promotion because he demanded it—he got it because he was worthy, and for no other reason.

Ask the man who receives a ten-thousand-dollar-a-year salary how he managed to obtain it, and he will tell you that he simply did his work as well as he could. Never did such a man go on a strike. The most successful strike is a defeat; and, had the man been a striker by nature, sudden and quick in quarrel, and jealous of his rights, things would have conspired to keep him down and under. I do not care how clever he may be, or how well educated, his salary would have been eighteen a week at the furthest, with a very tenuous hold upon his job.

"He that endureth to the end shall be saved."—[Elbert Hubbard in "Success Magazine."

INJUNCTION NECESSARY.

Take away the injunction, said the celebrated Judge Jackson, and the threat of punishment for contempt, and neither person nor property would be safe in our day. There is no such thing as a "peaceable strike." You might as well speak of a "bloodless war." Neither phrase has any meaning. Disorder and violence, and lawlessness are of the essence of the strike, and victory for labor is impossible without these features. This being the case, society must protect itself by means of the omnibus injunction and the summary trial for contempt.

CUSSEDNESS UNCOVERED.

Shameful Story Comes Out of San Francisco.

Woman Patient Maltreated in County Hospital.

Story Supported by Affidavit. Bluff Called.

(SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.)

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 8.—The cesspool of San Francisco's union labor government emitting more stench, this time the City and County Hospital being the odoriferous point. Mrs. Eva Morrison, a patient at the hospital, has sworn to an affidavit before Notary Public A. J. Henry in which she alleges that Resident Physician Walter Turnbull, Jr., of the City and County Hospital, has been guilty of conduct which, if her sworn statement is true, marks him as a man who is a disgrace to the medical profession and a credit to the rascally crowd of union officials with which he is connected, and by whose grace he is allowed to direct the affairs of a great public institution.

The investigation which has been demanded by the friends of Mrs. Morrison promises to be highly interesting to the public at large, for rumors have been prevalent during the last year that the City and County Hospital has been very poorly managed and that disgraceful acts there have not been infrequent.

SERIOUS CHARGES.

Most serious of all charges of this woman is the sworn statement that on Wednesday night Dr. Turnbull came into a small room in which she lay at the hospital and there made an indecent proposal to her. She declares she indignantly refused, and that he lay down upon her bed and tried to go to sleep. It was with difficulty that she at last forced him to leave the room. At that time she was suffering from a wound in her scalp made, she swears, by a surgeon who was either lacking in knowledge or was unable to properly perform the operation necessary.

On top of this she swears that when she first arrived at the hospital she was given a private room and the best of attention, but after she had rejected Dr. Turnbull's indecent proposal she was removed to the ward, her wound left without any attention one whole day and she was served with food which she could not eat.

Then, she swears, because her friends interceded with Dr. Turnbull and insisted that he give her better treatment she was sent away from the hospital yesterday afternoon when she was in no fit condition to leave. She states that Dr. McPike, an interne in the hospital, told her that she should not go away for at least five days, and yet she was told by the nurse that she must go yesterday afternoon.

Immediately after her departure from the City and County Hospital, Mrs. Morrison went to Dr. Harvey to have her wound examined. Dr. Harvey told her that under no usual conditions should she have been ordered out of the City and County Hospital. He advised her to go to a private hospital at once, as her wound was far from being in a safe condition.

On top of the statements of Mrs. Morrison comes the sworn affidavit of a friend who has interested himself in the case. This man swears before Notary Henry that he gave a certain sum of money to Dr. Turnbull with the understanding that Mrs. Morrison should have better treatment than was given to the ordinary patient. He swears that Dr. Turnbull took the money, and when Mrs. Morrison arrived at the hospital saw that she was operated upon immediately and then placed her in a private room in the maternity ward.

With this sworn testimony of Mrs. Morrison and her friend comes the statement of the people who live in the vicinity of the City and County Hospital. They state that Dr. Turnbull, as well as other surgeons about the hospital, is in the habit of getting drunk while on duty and is often carried into the hospital in a senseless condition. It was only a short time ago, they say, that Dr. Turnbull was in such an intoxicated condition in a saloon near the hospital that two of his fellow surgeons were forced to carry him out, and in doing so they burst the doors of the saloon. They openly state that at times Dr. Turnbull's language has been so vile that women have left the room where he has been in disgust.

MRS. MORRISON'S STORY.

The story told by Mrs. Morrison of the alleged attack on her is as follows:

"I was suffering from an abscess on the head, just above the ear. My physicians, Drs. W. C. Hassler and W. A. Harvey, told me I must go to a hospital immediately and be operated upon lest blood poisoning should set in. Having no money to pay for treatment at a private hospital, I went to the City and County Hospital. In the meantime a friend of mine had telephoned to Dr. Turnbull to see that I was given the best of everything.

"I arrived at the hospital Tuesday evening and was operated on immediately by a young doctor named Albe, I believe. That night and the next day I was well attended to, Dr. Turnbull dressing the wound.

"It was on Thursday night that Dr. Turnbull entered the room where I was lying and began to talk with me. He was in a fearfully intoxicated condition and made an indecent proposal to me. I would not listen to him and ordered him out. He then put his hands on my body and laid down and tried to go to sleep in that position. I ordered him to leave and he finally went out.

"The next day my wound went without dressing. Dr. Turnbull came in again in an intoxicated condition and drank from a bottle of whisky, for which he had made requisition in my name. The next day I was removed from the private room to Ward H and there given food which I could not eat. The bread was not buttered and the rest of the food was so hard and dry that I could not eat it. In seventy-two hours all that I had to eat was a little jelly which a woman in the next cot handed me. Saturday night a new incision was made in my scalp."

It is such men as Turnbull and his associates that the unions of San Francisco have placed in charge of the various branches of the administration. Is it any wonder that San Francisco advances like a snail when compared with Los Angeles and other cities?

A BLUFF THAT FAILED.

"Pinhead" McCarthy, the notorious union official who sneaks into Los Angeles occasionally to try and stir up trouble, occupies a high pedestal when in San Francisco. In Los Angeles "McCartee" acts like a "mongrel cur dog" who runs with his tail between his legs at the first sign of trouble. But in San Francisco "Pinhead" acts the part of a blustering bully. As an instance of his bluster the case of the Lutke Manufacturing Company of Portland is cited. The Lutke company had a contract with Hale Brothers, a large San Francisco dry goods house, to furnish and install some show cases. Mr. Mears, a representative of the Lutke company arrived in San Francisco for the purpose of taking charge of placing the cases. In some manner Hale Brothers learned that the Portland concern was being run on the "open shop" plan and became much frightened at the thoughts of a possible boycott by the unions should they learn that contractors with the "principals of Americanism" were doing the work.

To relieve their nervousness Hale Brothers insisted that permission to do the work must be obtained from "Pinhead" McCarthy. The representative of the Lutke company, on approaching "Pinhead," was told by that worthy that "no scab show cases can be placed in this town."

Not to be deterred by the bluffer's words, Mr. Mears sought an attorney, who advised that Hale Brothers could be forced to accept the show cases. Acting on this advice, Mr. Mears notified Hale Brothers that the cases would have to be accepted. After some further parley the work was completed.

COMPROMISE IMPOSSIBLE.

NO ARBITRATION OF STARCHERS' STRIKE AT TROY.

Manufacturers Refuse Petition for Compromise—Controversy Discussed and Good Reasons Given for Action Taken—Unions Not Discriminated Against.

Recently a petition was circulated among the merchants of Troy, N. Y., favoring a settlement of the starchers' strike by arbitration. The following answer to the petition was sent by the manufacturers:

We acknowledge the receipt of your communication of the 17th inst., and of the petition accompanying it, which is dated September 26. The suggestions emanating from a considerable number of citizens and merchants concerning the unfortunate trouble which has prevailed in the chief industry of this city for several months past are entitled to respectful consideration, even though they may not be assented to. In order that you and they may fully appreciate our position and the reasons for our inability to accept the suggestions made, we deem it proper to recall to your attention some of the facts connected with the existing strike.

The strike began on April 27, when the hand starchers in the collar laundry department of Cluett, Peabody & Co., left their places without assigning any reason.

Since the strike various reasons have been given for it, as follows:

1. Objections to starching machines.
2. Unsatisfactory work of the machines.
3. Unsatisfactory prices paid for starching after the machines.
4. Reduction in prices for starching.
5. Oppressive rules applied to starchers.
6. Starchers unable to obtain a hearing on the part of Cluett, Peabody & Co., and
7. That no strike exists, but that there is a lockout.

Concerning the above, we state as follows:

1. Starching machines have been in use in the Troy laundries for more than fifteen years, though they were not introduced by Cluett, Peabody & Co., until the spring of 1904.
2. The work of the machines has been entirely satisfactory, as indicated by their general adoption by the manufacturers.
3. The earnings of the starchers, whether by hand or after the machine, depend largely on the ability and experience of the operator, an inferior starcher being able to earn $9 a week, while an experienced one will earn as much as $18 a week.
4. No reduction in prices for starching was contemplated, and the claim that changing from hand starching at 4 cents to starching after the machines at 2 cents reduced the earnings of the starchers is shown to be false.
5. Starchers were not subjected to oppressive rules.
6. As to the hand starchers of Cluett, Peabody & Co. being unable to obtain a hearing, it should be said that the starchers stopped work without assigning a reason, and that a director of that company informed them if they would go on with their work he would, within a half hour, listen to any grievance they might wish to present. When work was offered them it was refused, and they left the premises, the superintendent informing them that they were not dismissed, but were leaving of their own accord.

As for the hours of labor, they range from eight to ten daily and rarely exceed fifty hours per week.

Not only do the starchers in Troy receive larger compensation than is paid in other cities of the country, but the work rooms are generally light and airy and the sanitary conditions excellent.

NO DISCRIMINATION.

As to the attitude of the collar and shirt manufacturers toward organized labor it has been the same for nearly twenty years, the manufacturers conceding the right of their employés to belong to labor organizations or to refrain from so doing, as they might prefer, the only requirements being that the employés should do the isfactorily and conduct properly. In other words, the rule of the manufactur discriminate for or against ganizations. To discriminat of unions would be an inj employés, who do not belong organizations, and in the coll shirt industry of Troy not 10 per cent. are identified wi organizations.

SOME IDIOCIES OF UNIONISM.

THOSE who fain would disbelieve the stories of outrages of a commercial nature perpetrated by labor unions, and in their name, should be made familiar with two incidents that occurred in New York City recently. In both, says the New York Commercial, the arbitrary action of the unions was so far-fetched that it would have appeared supremely ridiculous were it not so vexatious and costly. Both transpired in Fifth Avenue. Both were in new buildings being erected there. In one the union discovered that nuts obtained from a non-union dealer had been used to secure the stairway. The job was completed, stairway in place, ship-shape and Bristol fashion—but down it had to come or the contractor must suffer the inconvenience of a strike, the loss and the annoyance. Therefore the stairway was made all over again and clamped in place securely with "union nuts." And thereupon there was much rejoicing at a great "victory" for labor.

with stucco. The job was all completed, and it was worth while. What did the unions discover? That that plaster had been made in Philadelphia by workmen who received only $3.50 a day, while that class of skilled labor is entitled to $4.50 a day in New York. What did the union do forthwith? Compelled the contractor to tear all the ornamentations down and do it all over again in truly union style at the increased cost.

It is these things that prevent the popularization of the principles and example of unionism throughout the country. While it is possible for the workmen to compel an employer to do an act so impractical as the destruction of a good piece of work on a technicality that may have occurred through error, the reason for the open shop grows. Unionism permits stupidity to crop out too often. Thus is its oft-time honesty of purpose frustrated. The unreasonable exercise of power, resulting in financial loss and delay, as in the instance related of these two contractors, is a strong argument to every employer of labor to free himself and his business from the thrall-

GREAT COAL STRIKE IS PREDICTED.

How Vast Supplies of Coal are Being Accumulated by the Operators, and Great Funds by the Trade-unionists, in View of War.

BY JOHN FENNIMORE.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

CERTAINLY, unless averted by what the old law calls "an act of God," and by nothing else can it be averted, the April of 1906 will see the beginning of the greatest industrial war in history.

Starting in the anthracite fields of Pennsylvania, led by John Mitchell, president of the United Mine Workers of America, who dreams of being ruler of the forces of coal not only in America but in the world, it will be either brief and terrible or it will be long and—terrible.

Through plans conceived years ago, carefully developed since the great strike of 1900 and now, he believes, almost matured John Mitchell hopes to bring with the anthracite strike an absolute cessation of industrial activity from California to New York, and from Canada to Galveston.

He intends to call out the engineers who handle the coal, and the stokers who feed the furnaces, whether in mill or swift locomotive, department store or foundry; he intends to call out the teamster who carries the coal [illegible] and all the men who in this [illegible] of coal, mine or carry, or touch, or handle it.

If Mitchell can do this the miners will win their strike and the labor [illegible] will at last be a potent thing, a workingman's trust to be reckoned with in every detail in the future and with John Mitchell as its leader.

If he fails, and George F. Baer, president of the Reading Railway, the master of the greatest coal fields on earth, [illegible] and front of what are commonly known as the coal barons, the arch [illegible] of Mitchell, believes he will [illegible] the labor trust will receive a defeat from which it will take years and [illegible] a small eternity to recover.

BOTH PREPARE FOR WAR.

[illegible] are preparing fully for the [illegible]—Mitchell and Baer and the [illegible] each leads. Against the organization of the miner, the power he has [illegible] and controls, the coal owners [illegible] preparing to pit an organization [illegible].

[illegible] of tons of coal have been [illegible] the operators during the past [illegible] now stored in great [illegible] the coal carrying roads—[illegible] for the coming [illegible] mines a careful process [illegible] been going on for [illegible] aggressive blood has [illegible] the heads. BAER, THE COAL BARON.

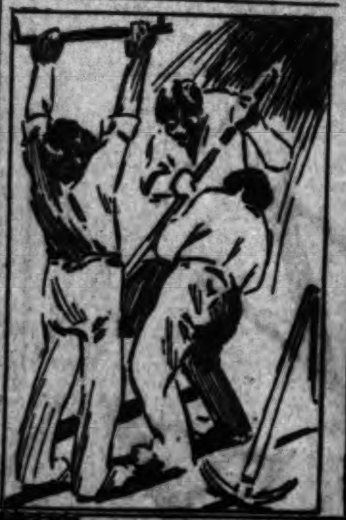
Against him is George F. Baer, president of the Philadelphia and Reading Railway, president of the Reading Coal Company, president of the affiliated coal carriers and coal producers, and the man who knows more about the production and the management of coal fields than any other man in the world.



A Typical Colliery

Coal Reserves

Building a Coal Mountain

On the anthracite coal fields.

Slim, erect, keen of feature as of mind, Baer comes from Dutch stock. He is polished, a man of the world, a man who likes a good dinner and a good glass of wine to finish it, who knows his Scriptures and ofttimes quotes it; who says that the first striker was Cain, but who did not say that thing which has placed upon him the appellation of "Divine Right Baer."

His basic fact is that the men who own the mines should control the mines. To support that conviction he has built an organization as potent and strong as that which Mitchell has fashioned for his ambition.

He does not believe in the labor union; in fact, he is its bitter enemy as the labor union stands at present and as it aims to be. The recognition of the union, he argues, means the recognition of a principle opposed to the dictum that the men who own industries are the only men who have a right to work them.

Determination is the keynote of the man, obstinacy it might even be called, but coupled with a brilliant resourcefulness.

Baer will be the spirit and soul of the operators' forces in the war, as Mitchell will be the soul of the workers.

CONDITIONS IN FIELDS.

Now, as to conditions in the anthracite fields. I went to Shenandoah, Pottsville, Scranton, Hazleton and Wilkes-barre, the great centers of the anthracite fields, and to the smaller towns which are of the mines entirely.

The condition of the miner is good. There is no doubt of that. One and all they are satisfied and contented—until Mitchell tells them not to be.

There are two distinct classes of miners. There is the contract miner, who forms the aristocracy of the fields and is the backbone of the Mine Workers' Union, and there are his helpers.

The contract miner is English, Welsh, Scotch, Irish and German, the ratio of their numbers being in the order given. Almost all of them have an income of over $600 a year. They usually have from three to six children, own their own houses and manage to give these children a good education. Their wives are comfortably kept and differ little in the manner of their life from those of any skilled artisan.

At present—and this is a point to be considered—the majority have bank accounts. This is important because these bank accounts, estimated in the aggregate at between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000, form an auxiliary fund to that now in the treasury of the Mine Workers and which Mitchell told me amounted to $3,000,000.

These men, the contract miners, are law-abiding. They are not those from whom violence is feared. But they will obey John Mitchell to a man, and one and all they are members of the great union.

In event of a strike their bank accounts will be thrown into the common fund, for this they will mortgage their houses to the limit and will starve determinedly if not cheerfully.

Curiously enough, these earnings, which will form one of the great sinews of war for the miners, were gained in producing the great sinew of war for the operator—the mining during the summer and winter of the tremendous reserve stores of coal before mentioned.

THE MENACE OF THE FIELDS.

But the helpers—the great army of ignorant Poles, Slavs, Hungarians, Russians and Italians—there is the black problem and the menace of the coal fields.

These are the lawless men, the hordes who have invaded the land. They cannot speak English at all, most of them. They know nothing of the laws of the land and in an emergency care nothing.

The census of 1904 gave the number of men employed in the anthracite region as 155,000. Of these the workers form fully 60 per cent. They are the men who do the violence, who brandish the torch over the house of the scab and who burn and beat and murder in time of strike.

Only slightly can this force be controlled when once, in time of strike, it is unchained. It forms a powerful weapon for the miner in its terrorizing influence, but it is a boomerang, inasmuch as it brings into the coal fields the soldiers of the militia and sometimes the regulars.

Its ultimate utility to Mitchell is doubtful. He recognizes this. Mitchell has never really been for violence in any of the anthracite disturbances in which he has figured.

These workers too are prosperous. They have their little bank accounts. They herd together, caring nothing for a home.

It is a fact though, and one to be weighed carefully, that these men, though nominally of the union, do not really belong to it and pay no dues in time of peace.

In time of war it is different.

"Do you belong to the union?" I asked a Pole at Scranton.

"Union? Sure!" answered he.

"What dues do you pay?"

"Dues," he cried. "Why dues to pay? No trouble yet."

That is the situation in a nutshell.

WHAT MITCHELL THINKS OF IT.

I met Mitchell in Wilkes-barre. He sat smoking incessantly the five-cent American cigar, one of which is hardly ever out of his mouth unless it gives way to a short stemmed meerschaum.

"It is true," he said, "that the miners are living better now than ever before. But that does not say that they are living as well as they should live. The work of the anthracite miner is more hazardous than that of any other class of men, except soldiers. They are paid in proportion to the hazard [illegible] any other class of men. I intend that they shall be, before I stop fighting, the best paid lot of workers in the world. Since the strike of 1900, the increase in wages taken straight through has been a little more than 15 per cent. In proportion the cost of living has not increased that much. The margin between increase in wages and increase in cost of living, however, is not enough to provide for the increased wants that have come to them with the betterment of conditions. They now want things and demand comforts to which they were unaccustomed before the strike of 1900. A man can live on a crust of bread and a little water, but because he can do so it is no reason why he should. No intelligent worker will accept lower standards and remain contented. If he is worth more should he not get what he is worth?"

"What have you to say as to the two demands which may precipitate the strike?"

"Recognition of the union is a business principle. How can the operators enter into any agreement with us unless they recognize us as a body? Recognition of the union as a concrete thing would bring peace where now there is warfare. As I have told the men in all my addresses, only by a united endeavor can the principles for which they are striving be obtained. Recognition on the part of the operators must come if the miners are firm. We want to do away with turmoil and strife. I would do away with strikes altogether. Only by recognition of the union can permanent and lasting industrial peace come.

THE EIGHT-HOUR ISSUE.

"As for the reduction in hours, we shall insist upon the eight-hour day, which is the desireratum of labor over the whole world. This will mean a reduction of 20 per cent. in the hours of our workers. We shall insist upon this without any reduction of earning for all employés paid by the hour, day or week.

"The bituminous miners work only eight hours a day, while the anthracite men work nine hours: So long as this difference exists there can be no contentment in the anthracite fields. Anything else than the eight-hour day is detrimental to the life, health, safety and well-being of the mine worker."

"And the strength of your union at present?"

"It is very strong. By the time I finish my tour I hope to have fully 100,000 men in the district and national unions, and perhaps 120,000 in the locals. The very most we could get out of the whole population would be 125,000, as two boys are counted as only one member. Now I'll tell you something so that you may see what this means. When the strike of 1900 began we had something more than 8000 members in good standing in the anthracite district. At the beginning of the strike of 1902 there were between 40,000 and 50,000 paid-up members. Do you see?"

"What will be the situation so far as support by the bituminous miners is concerned should there be a strike in 1906?"

"Our bituminous miners' contracts with the operators expire on April 1 in Arkansas, Kansas, Texas, Indian Territory, Ohio, Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, Michigan and Western and Central Pennsylvania."

"But that covers practically the whole bituminous field."

Mr. Mitchell smiled.

"Can you depend upon them to stand by you?"

Mr. Mitchell smiled again.

"Will there be a strike, Mr. Mitchell?" I asked bluntly.

"Not if the operators will grant what we ask," said the miners' president.

STRIKE INEVITABLE.

From what I have seen and heard in the anthracite fields I am forced to the conclusion that there will certainly be a strike; that the Mine Workers' Union will enter that fight stronger than ever before in the anthracite fields and with the assured support of the bituminous miners; that despite the influence of the Socialists, who are, to a man, against Mitchell and who are well represented among the miners, the coming convention in January will do as he wishes and that he will stake his all upon winning the struggle.

And now the operators. To a man they believe that a strike is imminent, that the struggle will be tremendously bitter, and to a man, under the active guidance of Baer, they are preparing for it. With their lips only they say that there may be no strike. Everything they are doing shows that their belief is the opposite of what they say.

THE STORED MINES OF COAL.

Millions upon millions of tons of coal lie along their roads, and are being constantly added to. All winter and all summer their collieries have worked at full head piling up these loose mines of anthracite. They are strengthening their affiliations with the bituminous operators, who, knowing their own danger, are only too willing to join in with them.

Already enough coal to last one year has been placed in reserve and before April the operators believe they will have a two years' supply in readiness. They do not believe the mines can be crippled by any strike for more than that time. Indeed, they do not believe that any strike can force them to be idle so long.

But they plan to play the waiting game, to draw upon this reserve store of mined coal until the reserve fund of money that the miners have has long been gone.

With the protection of the State constabulary, with their own guards carefully drilled to avert destruction and violence at the collieries when the Finn and the Hun, torch in hand and crazy drunk, start out to burn and slay, as they certainly will, and with all their forces of capital and organization behind them, it is hard to see how they can lose.

Besides, one of the greatest factors in the favor of the operators is that lack of cohesiveness that the unions have always displayed when the tide runs against them.

They have also the declaration of the President for the open shop, a system to which the union is sharply inimical and which full recognition of the union would cause utterly to pass away.

PUBLIC OPINION AGAINST MINERS.

There is another powerful factor—the force of public opinion. While this may not be with the operators in the coming fight, it still will certainly not be with the miners. The popular chord has never been touched by the issues of the eight-hour day and union recognition. The memory of the suffering in the strike of 1902 is still too fresh in the minds of the people.

On this strike of 1906 John Mitchell has built his dream of empire. If the operators accede to his demands without a strike he wins easily. If the strike is declared, he stakes his all on a losing game. And against him stands Baer, inflexible, immovable, not to be easily persuaded or swerved. The operators will not accede. One thing only seems certain. There will be a Titanic contest with results no man can foreshadow.

But it seems to me that Mitchell and his miners are foredoomed to defeat.

Increase in Apple Crops.

Consul Mahin, of Nottingham, forwards a report based upon publications in German newspapers describing experiments looking to the improvement of declining apple orchards: Of five long rows of apple trees one row was left untreated and the four others had different combinations of manurings. The row left unmanured gave 104 pounds of apples per tree during the five years from 1900 to 1904, both inclusive, and in the fifth year (1904,) which was the year of maximum yield for the entire orchard, the weight of the apples per tree was 55 pounds and the number 294. The best results from manuring were obtained by a complete manure, consisting of 1 1-8 pounds of sulphate of ammonia, 1 1-2 pounds of muriate of potash, and 3 1-2 pounds of basic slag per tree per annum, applied to the roots during the winter. During the five years the yield per tree from this dressing was 163 pounds of apples, while by the fifth year the bearing increased to 401 apples, weighing 105 pounds per tree—that is, the weight of the apples per tree increased by this manuring from 55 pounds on the unmanured trees to 105 pounds on the manured trees, or 90.9 per cent; while the number of apples increased from 294 to 401 per tree, or 36 per cent. The increase in the average size of the apples is remarkable. Those from the unmanured trees averaged 2.96 ounces each, and those from the manured trees 4.19 ounces each. In a corresponding experiment with pears (Josephine de Malines) similar results were obtained with a dressing consisting of 3 pounds of nitrate of soda, 2 1-4 pounds of muriate of potash, and 5 ing of 3 pounds of nitrate of soda, 2 1-4 pounds of muriate of potash, and 5 pounds of basic slag per tree. In 1904 the yield was 14 3-4 pounds per tree from the unmanured trees and 80 3-4 pounds per tree from those manured with the mixture.

Diamond Sorting.

Consul Snodgrass, of Pretoria, calls attention to a new method of treating diamondiferous earth for the purpose of extracting diamonds. It is the Elmore system, and has been quite successful in the South African mines. He says: The Premier Diamond Mining Company (Limited,) of the Transvaal, has ordered an oil concentrator plant under the Elmore system from a large English firm, to be used in the treatment of their diamondiferous grounds. This contemplated installation is interesting as being the first application of the Elmore process for the recovery of precious stones. Many tests were made on the dumps of waste of the Premier, near Pretoria. A portion of this waste material was carefully resorted three times, with a view to eliminating all diamonds from it as far as this was possible of accomplishment by hand sorting; then to this specially sorted waste was added a number of known weighed diamonds. The Elmore process was then applied, with a view to determine its efficiency for recovering the added diamonds. Not only were the added diamonds recovered, but, in addition, several other stones were also found. These trials were repeated many times, and proved that 100 per cent. recovery of the values was easily obtainable in every case. In addition to the advantages of the total extraction of the diamonds, the trials have shown that no preliminary sizing of the material to be treated is required, which is a distinct advantage over existing methods. Clean water, which is required in large quantities by usual methods, is quite unnecessary with the Elmore process, which is an important point where water is scarce, as it is in the Transvaal. Further advantages of the new process are the prevention of thefts of diamonds and the elimination of the whole of the pulsator treatment.

Spurt in Iron and Steel.

According to the London Iron and Steel circular, which was forwarded by Consul-General Wynne, there has recently been in the iron and steel trade a remarkable spurt of business and an all-round advance in prices. In September and, so far, in October, a large amount of purchases have been made by speculators and consumers. The greatest rise has been in hematite pig iron, owing to the active state of the steel trade. The price of West Cumberland warrants rose from 58s. to 67s. 9d. between September and October 6, and Middlesbrough No. 3 warrants, which were 44s. at the beginning of September, advanced to 53s. by October 6. The effect of the rise has been most manifest in the prices of all steel manufactures, but especially in ship plates and angles, these having been advanced 10s. per ton. But in addition to this the demand has been so large and urgent that many makers have closed their books altogether, having such large quantities sold, and feeling great uncertainty as to the future course of prices. The rise in raw material has been so rapid that there has scarcely yet been time for all the manufacturers to adjust their prices, but already advances are being announced, and we may expect to hear of further before long, especially in view of the quarterly meetings. Scottish steel makers at Glasgow have decided to raise the price of steel by 10s. per ton.

Foreigners in China and Japan.

According to Export, a leading German trade paper, there were 20,560 foreigners in China at the outbreak of the Russo-Japanese war. The number of foreigners in the Orient is constantly increasing. The 20,560 were divided as follows: English, 5662; Japanese, 5287; Americans, from the United States, 2512; Portuguese, 1930; Germans, 1658; French 1213; Russians, 361; Italians, 313; Belgians, 311; Danes, 236; Dutch, 224; Austrians, 172; Swedes, 130; Norwegians, 106; Koreans, 23; all others 64. Of the houses engaged in trade the English had 420, the Japanese 361, Germans 159, Americans 114, French 71, Portuguese 45, Spaniards 29, Russians 24, Austrians 18, Italians 18, Dutch 15, Danes 10, Norwegians 7, Belgians 3, Swedes 2, Swiss 1.

At the outbreak of the war Japan had the following foreigners inside her gates: English, 2136; Americans, 1639; Germans, 654; French, 564; Russians, 204; Portuguese, 178; Swiss, 121; Dutch, 95; Austrians, 59; Belgians, 39

The Only Shoe in 1/4 Sizes

A quarter size means just as much in shoe fitting as it does in hat fitting.

Yet the Regal is the only shoe—except those made to order at $12 a pair—that can be offered to you in exactly the size that fits your foot.

A shoe that's a little too large is almost as bad as one a little too snug—and if you've had any difficulty either way, just have your next "try-on" in a Regal store.

You will find every part of the Regal shoe as faultless as the fit of it. We build Regal shoes to please you when you try them on, and to prove both before you buy and while you wear them. The best of leathers all through and eleven kinds to choose from; the best of good hand-workmanship; the highest grade materials inside and out, and perfect up-to-date style modeled into every one of the 75 Regal patterns.

Seventy-five Regal styles—and the regular price, right through the whole list, is $3.50 as usual.

But to meet an insistent demand we have made up 15 special models at $4 per pair. The extra 50 cents enables us to build a wholly new line of shoes that we could never before include in the Regal list. The advantages of the special $4 models over the $3.50 Regal are in their extra custom features. All of the leathers and other materials in them are the BEST of the BEST and they have a little more hand-work, etc. They are true bench-made shoes, and few genuine custom-made $12 shoes equal their handsome appearance.

Profits in the Business for Those Who Know It.

Some Tricks of the Trade in City's Wide Field.

The lodging-house business is one of the occupations most followed in Los Angeles, yet it is not recognized as a profession or trade nor dignified by any sort of organization. It seems to be the general impression that anybody can run an apartment or lodging-house, anybody who can raise the price. There is a general impression, too, that almost any kind of house, run in almost any kind of style, will pay big.

There are many persons in this city who make a living by buying and selling lodging-houses. The lodging-house and hotel broker is numerous and apparently prosperous. There are also many men, and especially women, who make a business of buying leases of places that have run down, from the inexperienced or unwary investor who has failed to make good. The house is freshened up with paper and varnish, the rooms are filled by special inducements—then it is easy to show, in black and white, how the business pays.

The lease and furnishings of a fifty-room house, renting at $200 a month, may be obtained for $4000—$2500 cash, and the balance by assuming a mortgage on furniture. This is $4 a month for rooms which will rent at from $8 to $16 a month, or $600 a month for the house. That looks good. But there are light, water, help, laundry, repairs and incidentals. It can be shown on paper that these will come inside of another $200 a month, leaving $200 a month profit, or $2400 a year on an investment of $4000, which naturally is attractive to an investor.

SOME DRAWBACKS.

But no one who hasn't tried it knows how light and water bills, gas, help and incidentals can multiply, nor realizes how a vacant room or two now and then during the "season," and a half dozen or more vacancies in the dull season, eat up the profits.

There is money to be made in the business in Los Angeles, but, like every other business, it takes experience and good judgment to make it. It takes also natural ability to deal with all sorts of people under all circumstances, constant watching of expenses and personal attention to innumerable details.

With the exception of the largest houses, which represent heavy investments, the business is principally in the hands of women. Many of these are inexperienced. It is not surprising that many failures are added each season to the list, and that there are always places for sale.

Undoubtedly the most successful places are those which are carefully planned from the beginning to reach some particular class of trade. One swell apartment-house is especially adapted to tourists who may remain in the city two or three weeks, or as many months. Plenty of potted plants and ferns, a sun parlor, an attractive loggia, a big fireplace in the hall and plenty of steam heat and hot water are provided. The temporary tenant is willing to pay for these things at a rate which he wouldn't dream of for a permanent stay.

Another place of the same class, by a little different arrangement, may be made attractive to the business man and his wife, who lease their apartments by the year. Still another house is fitted up in a club-like manner that appeals to bachelors, while some one else may fit up rooms for business women. Many downtown places depend almost entirely upon transient traffic. One such place has built up a large following in near-by towns, cultivating the patronage of persons who frequently spend a night or two in the city. There are other places in the city where Arizonans congregate, and still others whose patrons are largely visitors from Sonora and the City of Mexico.

MEN LODGERS PAY BEST.

It is not necessarily true that the places representing the largest outlay of capital and charging the highest prices are the best investments. Indeed, it is said the moderate-priced houses are the most profitable. The place which pays the best, with the least trouble, is declared to be the lodging-house patronized by the better class of workingmen, who ask only a reasonable degree of cleanliness and comfort in a simply furnished room, for which they are willing to pay from $2 to $3 per week.

The poorest investment is said to be the furnished room for light housekeeping, of the cheaper order.

Whatever the size or character of the establishment, its success depends largely upon the tact, judgment and eternal vigilance of the landlady. She must see to it that the place is kept clean and orderly, that sanitary conditions prevail, she must keep her eye on the use of gas and electricity in each room, unless individual meters are used; she must look to garbage, rubbish and repairs; she must not allow loud talking and laughter in the halls or rooms; she must be able to deal with a drunken man or a hysterical woman—in short, she is responsible in a large degree for the health, comfort and, in a sense, the morals, of each occupant of her house.

WHERE SENTIMENT RULES.

There are hard working, needy women in this city who have allowed a roomer to remain week after week, without pay, because he or she was "down on luck;" women who have worked all night over a lodger on the verge of delirium tremens, rather than subject him to the disgrace of arrest; who have watched for weeks over some broken-hearted, despairing woman—lest she cast her life away.

The management of a large apartment-house, sheltering twenty, thirty, and even more, families, is a complicated business. These are the places where, as one landlord complained, "the women haven't anything to do but sit and think up the things they want," and, having cogitated, descend upon the unfortunate proprietor, with all sorts of demands.

The lodging-house business is one of the solid and paying industries of the city. With the increase in population and the large number of buildings put up especially to accommodate it, it has increased in importance in the past few years.

The Times' Word Contest

Conducted by

EDWARD B. WARMAN, A. M
944 W. 6th St.
PHONE: HOME 3099; MAIN 1027

AS PREVIOUSLY announced, The Times has arranged with Mr. Edward B. Warman, a past-master in pronunciation, to furnish its readers, each week, a list of words "often mispronounced."

These words are, as you will perceive, alphabetically arranged, and the correct pronunciation given according to the well recognized authority, "Webster's International."

The list of words is merely an educative feature having nothing whatever to do with the winning of the prizes. All that is required is to answer the twelve questions on the printed SOLUTION BLANK, fill out the SUBSCRIPTION ORDER BLANK and, if you are not a subscriber to THE TIMES, inclose 75 cents for one month's subscription. If you are a subscriber (no matter in what part of the country) no remittance is necessary; merely fill out the blanks and forward same to THE TIMES-MIRROR CO., LOS ANGELES, CAL.

WHO CAN NAME THEM?

(1.) Three words ending in ceed.
(2.) Two words having four consecutive vowels.
(3.) One word having no vowel. W is not a vowel.
(4.) Four words having cion as a terminating syllable.
(5.) Two words having the syllable ti under the accent, and immediately followed by a vowel.
(6.) One word of two syllables (not a compound) with both syllables accented.
(7.) Two words, beginning with a vowel, that cannot be pronounced without prefacing with a consonant.
(8.) Three words (the only ones in the language) ending in il, that drop the i in pronunciation.
(9.) Three words (the only ones in the language) ending in in, that drop the i in pronunciation.
(10.) Eight words (the only ones in the language) ending in th, in which, when forming the plural by adding s, the s has the sound of z; as bath, baths (bathz.)
(11.) Three or more words (three will suffice) in which the vowels (a, e, i, o, u) are in regular order in successive syllables.
(12.) Three or more words (three will suffice) in which the vowels (a, e, i, o, u) are in irregular order in successive syllables.

CASH PRIZES.

One hundred dollars will be paid in prizes at the close of the contest, as follows: Forty dollars to the one giving the correct answers or the nearest thereto; twenty dollars to the next nearest; ten dollars to the third; five dollars each to the fourth, fifth, sixth, seventh, eighth and ninth; to the tenth, "Gestures and Attitudes" ($3.00), illustrating The Delsarte Philosophy of Expression (Warman); to the eleventh, "The Voice" ($2.00), How to Train it, how to Care for it (Warman.)

ERRATA.

In the issue of November 26 the word chaperon should have the accent on the first syllable; the same with the word cicatrice. In last Sunday's issue, the word executive (noun and verb) should read (noun and adj.)

Toyland and Dolldom

Santa Claus Headquarters---Hamburger's as Usual.

Through printed announcements and by what the children and their elders say there is not a man, woman or child in Southern California who does not realize that Santa Claus' real headquarters is at the great Hamburger store where the exhibit of toys and dolls is the largest, best selected and yet the lowest priced to be found anywhere. There are plenty of toys for baby, plenty of toys for the children of school age and instructive toys for the young boys and girls just budding into manhood and womanhood. The dolls and doll belongings are in such variety as to please the fancy of every little girl. Everything has been selected with the utmost care. We yearly send our buyer to Europe where he visits the manufacturers and secures all goods at first hand, thus giving us the advantage of many novelties that would not be found elsewhere. Though our stocks are immense the trading has been exceptionally brisk the past several weeks and let us once again remind you to make your purchases as early as possible for we would not see you disappointed in any one article on which you had set your mind and later find it gone; for naturally the best toys and dolls go first; particularly when there is no other assortment in the city to compare with them. Santa Claus is here now every day to greet his little frinds so bring the tots along. As special announcements we will offer the three following for a few days:

The Deluge

THE DELUGE
DAVID GRAHAM PHILLIPS

"A cross-section out of the very heart of our life today, with its big and bold energies and passions, the swiftest and intensest life ever lived by the human race."

"The Deluge" is a story of high and frenzied finance. It is important to every fiction-lover because it grips the attention in a vise of steel. It is important to every patriotic American because it lays absolutely bare the financial dilemma toward which the country has drifted.

But in the clash of the great business conflict, the love element is not for a moment forgotten. It is the refreshing and glorifying touch in a novel of magnificent proportions and persistent absorption.

ional Problems.

STRUCTIVE DEMOCRACY. By William Smythe. The Macmillan Company, New rk.

Constructive democracy is the ius of the people engaged in build- their institutions," says the author this book. He adds: "We are liv- in a pregnant time. Questions of at import to our civilization, long uldering in the public mind, are aking into flame. Something is ing. In truly living institutions, Julius Seelye said, the instinct of elopment is wiser than the wisdom the wisest. Out of this instinct l be bred men with 'Strength for the e.' Their problem will be to re- e to terms of practical legislation phrase, intangible and nebulous, yet arged with meaning and appealing the popular heart like the first hint moisture to the lost traveler in the ert—'A square deal for every n.'" t is impossible, even in the most ended review, to do full justice to structive theory of a book like this follow the author's minute exami- tion of problems and analyse his itative solution of them. For the k is not one of mere theoretical eralizations, but one of practical itics—an attempt, from a broad oretical basis to show some way t of present evils and to indicate way for further manipulation of ie now developing, but not yet at ir head. The point of view, with ard to all questions, present and ure, is neither conservative nor ngly radical, but according to the le of the book, a middle way advo- ting progressive alteration. The blems which this progressive ange has practically to solve are ated as follows:

"Monopolies already highly devel- ed and actually or potentially cap- le of robbing producer and con- mer.

"The colossal evil of political cor- ption which is the outgrowth and companiment of plutocracy.

"The dangerous tension of relations tween capital and labor.

"The large and growing element of en and women who find themselves urplus' in an economic sense in con- quence of the rapid transition in the nditions of our commercial and in- strial life."

Not only in regard to the railroads the country, but also with reference other monopolies of capital the po- tion of the book is that "This power a real menace to popular liberty. nd yet, . . . it contains as much good as of evil. It is a tremendous gine of civilization. The problem to switch this engine onto the right ack and to make it pull humanity new heights of achievement." In l cases the author shows the unde- iable economy to the public gained the combination of interests, and ges further combination, as in the se of the farmers; yet contends that e time is here when the national overnment must take cognizance of e acts of all such combination in der to prevent the abuse of power. "There is but one line," he says, "of rue scientific progress. Instead of estroying monopoly, we should assist onopoly to perfect itself—then regu- ate it in a way that will be just to all oncerned. Whether or not this be the urpose of the administration, it is en- rely practicable under the plans out- ned by Commissioner Garfield." He uotes the President against those who ppose any national regulation of com- inations of capital. "The best possi- le answer to their contention is," he ays, "that which President Roosevelt dvanced in his speech to the Union eague Club of Philadelphia. He rushed aside all such objections with he declaration that only the nation an deal with the problem of consoli- dated wealth, and that, if the Con- stitution does not supply the authority for such a policy, then the Constitu- tion must speedily be amended to that end. The key to the whole situation," he adds, "lies in the President's further remark that no free people will perma- nently submit to the intolerable evils which have arisen from the power of wealth."

When it comes to the consideration of specific reform with regard to ques- tions of capital and labor, and of the power of moneyed combinations, the author offers one radical means, which will doubtless find many opponents— namely, the limitation of return upon capital; and in this regulation he finds the solution of the tariff question, out- side all party lines. He urges the ne- cessity of Congressional action to stay the present rape of the public do- main, and finds in the settlement of at present waste places, by govern- ment assistance, the temporary solu- tion of the problem of "the surplus man." He calls attention to the fact, however, that another century of our present increase will bring our popula- tion up to that of Germany, while the population of other lands also will have increased greatly, so that we shall find ourselves confronted with a new population question. Yet the final out- look of the book is hopeful.

The chapters on irrigation, consid- ered from the westerner's practical point of view, are perhaps as interest- ing as anything in the book in the way of specific argument. The work, as a whole, is thoughtful in tone and worth attention as a sincere and non- partisan attempt to reach some solu- tion of great economic questions of the day.

A Review of Progress.

THE FATE OF THE MIDDLE CLASSES. By Walter G. Cooper, Secretary of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce. Consolidated Retail Booksellers, New York. (For sale by Stoll & Thayer, Los Angeles.)

A second book on the present prob- lems of our social organization reaches n a measure the conclusions of the book reviewed above, but does not go o far in the consideration of specific eatures of the situation or of specific emedies. Mr. Cooper urges that com- inations of capital are a natural stage n social progress which "will, just as eudalism, hateful as it was, became stepping-stone to liberty. It looks," e says, "like a stumbling-block, but he stumbling-blocks of the present are he stepping-stones to the future." e believes that the social body moves pward, becomes with time more ighly organized. In this higher or- anization classes as such disappear. e advises coöperation among work- g men, and advocates the elimina- on of speculative promotion by law.

UREAU OF AMERICAN ETHNOLOGY, SMITHSONIAN INSTITUTION. BULLETIN . MEXICAN ANTIQUITIES. Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C.

The Smithsonian Institution issues a rge volume of twenty-four papers n Mexican and Central American an- quities and history. The papers are different authors—Eduard Seler, E. oerstemann, Paul Schellhas, Carl apper and E. P. Dieseldorff, and all ere translated from the German un- r the supervision of Charles P. Bow- itch of Boston. It appears that mericans have left to others, for the ost part, investigations into Mexican d Central American remains, and at many of the most authoritative ublications are in German. Mr. Bow- itch, therefore, set out to have some the most important of these trans- ted and this volume is the result.

naments; on antiquities; of Guatemala; on Alexander von Humboldt's picture-manuscripts in the Royal Library at Berlin; on the bat god of the Maya race; on the wall paintings of Mitla; on the significance of the Maya calendar for historic chronology; on the temple pyramid of Tepoztlan; on the Venus period in the Barguan codex group—all by Eduard Seler; papers on the aids to the deciphering of Maya manuscripts; on Maya chronology; on time periods of the Mayas; on Maya hieroglyphics; on the Central American calendar; on the sign of the Pleiades among the Mayas; on the Central American tonalamatl, or 260-day period; on recent Maya investigations; on the inscription on the Cross of Palenque; on the day gods of the Mayas; on temple inscriptions at Palenque—these by E. Foerstmann, and further papers on Maya antiquities by Paul Schellhas, and on the independent States of Yucatan, by Carl Sapper.

The varied character of the contents of the book is thus partly indicated; yet only in a measure. The study of the picture-writing, in particular, of symbolism in general, in the middle American territory of ancient civilization in this territory, is extended and of great importance and value. Three papers, in particular, which are not indicated in the table of contents, on "Unity of Mexican and Central American Civilization;" on "Zapoteo Priesthood and Ceremonials," and on "Deities and Religious Conceptions," are rich in ideas and information. These papers are not signed, but as they are among those of Eduard Seler, may be supposed to belong to his work. The paper on the unity of middle American nations, in which the argument is based on comparison of symbolism, is in itself worth a volume of ordinary papers on topics of ancient American civilization. The book will be welcomed by scientists everywhere.

Oyster-farming.

THE OYSTER. By William K. Brooks, Ph.D., LL.D., Henry Walters professor of zoology at Johns Hopkins University. The Johns Hopkins Press. (Price $1 net.)

Fifteen years ago the first edition of this book appeared. The second edition, just out, has been revised in accordance with new knowledge, chiefly, however, in minor points, save in one regard: The author has added a section to his account of the structure of the oyster, showing the peculiar fitness of this bivalve for gathering up the germs of cholera and typhoid fever and transmitting them to man. This is, as the preface claims, a notable addition to the matter of the book.

For the rest, the volume is intended for the information of oyster farmers and all other persons interested in the oyster in a business way or as consumers. It is a popular treatise of over 200 pages, thorough, yet simply and clearly written and amply illustrated.

FICTION.

A Strange Story.

THE TRIDENT AND THE NET. By the author of "The Martyrdom of an Empress." Harper & Bros., New York. (Price $1.50 net.)

"The Trident and the Net" is the story of two—brother and sister—who, born to noble rank in Brittany, wandered far away, with time and change of fortunes, the boy wrecking his life through an unfortunate connection with an unscrupulous woman until he ends in direst poverty in New York, where his sister at last discovers and rescues him. She finds him, however, a physical and moral ruin.

The opening chapters of the books are better than those which follow later; the study of conditions at the old family estate of the Kergoats is fairly good work; but the literary value of the book decreases with the progress of the story. One reason of this is, undoubtedly, that the book is far too thick, five hundred and fifty pages it numbers, two hundred at least, too many. The plot has, moreover, too little unity, too little climax; the story is a sour, sorrowful one, and the reader is not quite sure, when he is done, why it was written. Only the most bitter and forceful pen could adequately handle such a plot and not reduce it to mere melodrama or morbid sensationalism. Ibsen, Tolstoy, one or two others, might make a success of such a story; the author of "The Martyrdom of an Empress," possesses no such pen. The story is not without some merit, but this is not of high order.

A Plot Story.

STORK'S NEST. By J. Breckenridge Ellis. Moffat, Yard & Co., New York. (Price $1.50.)

"Stock's Nest" is a plot novel of fair interest, the story of a beautiful but untaught girl, who loves a school teacher, and aspires to self-betterment, and of a teacher who finally perceives the beauty of a deep and genuine love even beneath an untutored exterior. In so far the story is old; but the author's handling of it is original, and the other elements of the plot—the operations of a gang of counterfeiters, with their final detection—are also treated in a somewhat new manner. The interest is sustained to the end, and the story is concluded as one would like it.

A Musical Romance.

ZAL. By Rupert Hughes. The Century Company, New York. (Price $1.50.)

Rupert Hughes is author of "American Composers," and of "The Love Affairs of Great Musicians." In his latest book, however, he has left the realm of biography and undertaken to tell a love story of his own origination, the story of a Polish pianist who falls in love with an American girl of wealthy family. The plot is good, the literary workmanship of the book not without considerable merit, yet the story can hardly be ranked of first class.

Cyrus Townsend Brady.

MY LADY'S SLIPPER. By Cyrus Townsend Brady. Dodd, Mead & Co., New York. (Price $1.50. For sale by C. C. Parker, Los Angeles.)

Cyrus Townsend Brady's latest book is shorter and apparently more hastily written than some of his other later novels, and his recent books have been turned out somewhat rapidly, too. The story covers about 240 pages, however, that is because two-thirds of each page is artistic margin. The story is pretty but of an exaggerated romance—too exaggerated to be convincing. The volume is arranged for a Christmas gift book, with attractive cover in blue and gold, and gilt top.

JUVENILE BOOKS.

Memories of Boyhood.

WHEN YOU WERE A BOY. By Edwin L. Sabin. The Baker & Taylor Company, New York. (Price $1.50.)

Mr. Sabin's studies of boy life have come to be known, of recent years, among all who appreciate realistic and delicate work of this sort. His "When You Were a Boy," a series of sketches of school experiences, baseball and circus ambitions, adventures of sledding, skating, swimming, etc., are to ranked among the best of their kind for humor, pathos and faithfulness to reality. The drawings of Frederic Dorr Steele and much to the attractiveness of the book.

Not So Real.

REBECCA MARY. By Annie Hamilton Donnell. Harper & Bros., New York. (Price $1.50. For sale by C. C. Parker.)

This is a story of a very odd and [illegible] brought up by an [illegible] of children. The story is pathetic and in a measure good work; but both the pathos and the oddity of the child are overdrawn for sake of effect. A child that calmly starves herself for two days rather than sew a seam she is ordered to finish, is barely possible; but one that so starves herself, and, when on the verge of collapse from hunger, adds to the pathos of her condition by feeding her pet rooster and talking to it about its enjoyment of the meal, is too excellent a literary device to be real. In other parts of the book than this, also, Rebecca Mary is entirely too effective to accord with fact. The greatest pathos of life everywhere is that the deepest feeling does not reveal itself at all or reveals itself not impressively to onlookers, but often even somewhat ludicrously. This is especially true of the simple, whose acts are unstudied, therefore of children. Yet it is probable that "Rebecca Mary" will have a larger sale than many a better children's book, for the reason that pathos is more or less popular, even where of exaggerated quality.

Travel and Adventure.

SHIPWRECKED IN GREENLAND. By Arthur R. Thompson. Little, Brown & Co., Boston. (Price $1.50.)

Here is a story of adventure among the ice fields of the North. Its characters are a party of boys, a sea captain, and a young man, who find a drifting steamer not far from St. John, and set out to rescue the passengers and crew. The plot is full of action; the story well told; and the book will undoubtedly please many, both boys and girls.

Northern Heroes.

HEROES OF ICELAND. By Allen French. Little, Brown & Co., Boston. (Price $1.50.)

The Northern races have furnished us with our most beautiful legends and fairy tales; these come to us from Norway, Sweden, Denmark, North Germany. In his "Heroes of Iceland," Allen French has adapted the great Icelandic saga, "The Story of Burnt Njal," for the reading of youth. All children and young people, who are fond of fairy tales and tales of imaginative adventure, of heroes and demi-gods, will enjoy this book.

Joel Chandler Harris.

TOLD BY UNCLE REMUS. NEW STORIES OF THE OLD PLANTATION. By Joel Chandler Harris. McClure, Phillips & Co., New York. (Price $1.50.)

This new book of Uncle Remus stories will be welcomed by a large circle of admirers of the quaint tales—more particularly, no doubt, by those who were reared among tellers of such tales. Some of these new stories are better than most of the old ones; for certainly Mr. Harris's skill does not lessen with time.

Y.W.C.T.U.

The "Y" Almanac.

Y ALMANAC, 1906. Edited by Amy A. Swankie-Cameron, Assistant Honorary Secretary, World's Y.W.C.T.U. Sold for the benefit of the World's Y. Missionary Fund. The Leeds & Biddle Company, Philadelphia. (Price 25 cents. For sale by Ernest Dawson, No. 713 South Broadway, Los Angeles.)

The "Y" Almanac for 1906 is indeed "a thing of beauty" and a joy for the coming year, unique both in character and purpose, and because of its many attractions will be treasured long after 1906 has been recorded on history's pages. It is edited and published each year by the Young Woman's Christian Temperance Union and is sold for the benefit of the World's "Y" Missionary fund.

One of the most interesting pages contains a message from the present missionary, Miss Kara Grace Smart, whose successful work in Japan is largely made possible from the sale of the almanac.

This dainty book has for its cover a facsimile of the white marble statue of Frances Willard in Statuary Hall of the Capitol at Washington, D. C., embossed on a background of royal purple edged with white. "Y" leaders from twelve countries selected the daily texts and inspiring mottoes for each month. Every page has its attractions and among these are the loving messages from the national and world's "Y" secretaries. Charming bits of scenery of many countries and beautiful poems are scattered through the book. Inspiring words are found beneath the noble faces of such women as Susan B. Anthony, Lady Henry Somerset and the Countess of Carlisle; and such men as Dr. Theodore L. Cuyler and Sir Wilfred Lawson. H. M.

MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS.

Practical Advice.

MAKING THE MOST OF OURSELVES. By Calvin Dill Wilson. A. C. McClurg & Co., Chicago.

A number of books of this sort have appeared recently—some of small value, a few excellent in quality. This book belongs to the list of the good ones, and contains some sound advice on themes general and particular, together with a certain proportion of truisms and a number of theories of life on which opinions may well differ. The papers of which it consists have appeared in various periodicals and are here collected under one cover.

Some Iconoclasts.

HERETICS. By Gilbert K. Chesterton. John Lane Company, New York. (Price $1.50.)

The author of this book has been greatly influenced by the school of epigram writers to which belong a number of men whom he defends against critics actual and possible. We find in his work sentences like these: "Both realists and dynamiters are well-meaning people, engaged in the task, so obviously ultimately hopeless, of using science to promote morality;" "Mr. Rudyard Kipling has asked in a celebrated epigram what they can know of England who know England only. It is a far deeper and sharper question to ask, 'What can they know of England who know only the world?'" "London is a place, to be compared to Chicago; Chicago is a place, to be compared to Timbuctoo. But Timbuctoo is not a place, since there, at least, live men who regard it as the universe, and breathe, not an air of locality, but the winds of the world." "In the heated idleness of youth we were all rather inclined to quarrel with the implication of that proverb which says that a rolling stone gathers no moss. We were inclined to ask, 'Who wants to gather moss, except silly old ladies?' But for all that we begin to perceive that the proverb is right. The rolling stone rolls echoing from rock to rock; but the rolling stone is dead. The moss is silent because the moss is alive." Perhaps there is much wisdom in this; but it is not probable that it will appeal to all classes of readers. In fact, the epigrammatic qualities of the book are distinctly British and not likely to appeal to most Americans at all.

And yet the author says some clever things, even though he says them in a manner so studied, for the most part, that they lose their force for us while we are pausing to wonder over his antic expression; or—ocasionally—to read his sentences a second time in order to discover his exact meaning. Here is something about Bernard Shaw, for instance: "The truth is that Mr. Shaw has never seen things as they really are. If he had, then he would have fallen on his knees before them. He has always had a secret ideal that has withered all things of this world. He has all the time been comparing humanity with something that was not human, with a monster from Mars, with the Wise Man of the Stoics, with the Economic Man of the Fabians, with Julius [illegible] with the Superman standard may be a very good thing, or a very bad one, it may be excellent or unfortunate, but it is not seeing things as they are. It is not seeing things as they are to think first of Briareus with a hundred hands, and then call every man a cripple for only having two. It is not seeing things as they are to start with a vision of Argus with his hundred eyes, and then jeer at every man with two eyes as if he had only one. And it is not seeing men as they are to imagine a demi-god of infinite mental clarity, who may or may not appear in the latter days of the earth, and then to see all men as idiots."

And again, on the same subject: "A man with a definite belief always appears bizarre, because he does not change with the world; he has climbed into a fixed star, and the earth whizzes below him like a zoetrope. Millions of mild black-coated men call themselves sane and sensible merely because they always catch the popular insanity, because they are hurled into madness after madness by the maelstrom of the world."

Bizarre, thus, the book is; not without cleverness, and something more, perhaps, than cleverness; interesting in much, yet hardly of vast originality.

The heretics whom Mr. Chesterton particularly considers are Kipling, Bernard Shaw, H. G. Wells, George Moore, Lowes Dickinson, Nietsche, and a few others.

RELIGIOUS BOOKS.

Max Mueller.

LIFE AND RELIGION. An aftermath from the writings of the Rt. Hon. Prof. Max Mueller. Doubleday, Page & Co., New York. (Price $1.50. For sale by C. C. Parker, Los Angeles.)

From the many lectures of the great philologist, Max Mueller, his wife has selected pregnant passages likely to be of interest to all acquainted with his work, and to many others also. The world is interested, nowadays, in knowing the religious viewpoint of great minds, or whether they have no such viewpoint and are simply agnostic. Prof. Max Mueller was of those who, questioning somewhat, with his generation, was yet one who had faith in, or at least hoped for, an immortality of the individual, as he believed in the existence of an Infinite, all-ruling Mind. That his faith was not perfect may be gathered from passages like the following:

"There are moments in our life when those who seek most earnestly after God think they are forsaken of God; when they hardly venture to ask themselves, Do I than believe in God, or do I not? Let them not despair, and let us not judge harshly of them; their despair may be better than many creeds. . . . Honest doubt is the deepest spring of honest faith; only he who has lost can find."

"There is an atheism which is unto death, there is another atheism which is the life-blood of all true faith. It is the power of giving up what, in our best, our most honest moments, we know to be no longer true; it is the readiness to replace the less perfect, however sacred it may have been to us, by the more perfect, however much it may be detested, as yet, by the world. It is the true self-surrender, the true self-sacrifice, the truest trust in truth, the truest faith. Without that atheism religion would long ago have become a petrified hypocrisy; without that atheism no new religion, no reform, no reformation, no resuscitation would ever have been possible; without that atheism no new life is possible for any of us."

Here are some particularly good things on work, by one who gloried in it and whose work told:

"If you have found a work to which you are ready to sacrifice the whole of your life, and if you have faith in yourselves, others will have faith in you, and, sooner or later, a work that must be done will be done."

"What flimsy things the so-called pleasures of life are—how little in them that lasts. To delight in doing one's work is life—that is what helps us on, though the road is sometimes very stiff and tiring—uphill rather, it would seem, than downhill, and yet downhill it is."

Lilian Whiting.

THE JOY THAT NO MAN TAKETH FROM YOU. By Lilian Whiting. Little, Brown & Co., Boston. (Price 50 cents net.)

This is a beautifully written little book, full of ope and radiant life—a book that all Christians will find inspiring in its outlook. "Life," says its author, "is a wonderful mosaic in which all experiences combine in exquisite adjustment. It is governed by the same law that governs the universe and holds the solar systems in their appointed course. In this mosaic all things play their destined part; sacrifice and sorrow; joy and achievement. But the immortal gain in life is what one gives, not what he gets. . . The truth is that there is no time in this world for any morbid depression and regret. Life is too rich to admit of the possibilities of failure. To fail one day is to achieve a more enduring success tomorrow. 'To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life.' This overcoming is the privilege of every day. . . . One must live by the high affirmatives; by hope rather than fear; by conviction rather than doubt; by resolve rather than regret."

Lilian Whiting always writes well, and this book is work of her best in its line.

NEW MAGAZINES.

The magazines of ten years ago rarely contained any but superficial articles; to the magazines of today, the highest authorities on science, art, politics and finance are contributing; and the matter they offer, if in a sense popular, is usually by no means superficial. The magazines devoted to special subjects are now of notable number; also the periodicals of summary, such as The World Today, The Review of Reviews, and the always admirable Literary Digest—which let no one forget in his list of reading for the coming year.

"How Nestlings Are Fed," a beautifully illustrated article in the December Outing, will attract the attention of all nature covers.

James S. Metcalfe, dramatic critic of Life and recently prominent through his war against the syndicate, contributes to the December Atlantic, a paper on the theatrical outlook in this country. Mr. Metcalfe calls his article, "Is the Theater Worth While?" and in it scores his own countrymen and countrywomen, on several counts, for lack of culture—the patronage of inferior drama being one of the counts. The paper is fearless and hence interesting. Among the other articles of broad scope contained in the same issue are: "German Ideals of Today," by Prof. Kuno Francke; "A French Critic of Old Imperialism," by Gamaliel Bradford, Jr., and "Johnson and 'My Policy,'" the fifth in William Garrott Brown's great historical series upon "The Tenth Decade of the United States."

The fifth paper of Wolf von Schierbrand, Ph.D., on "The Coming Supremacy of the Pacific," published in the Christmas Pacific Monthly, is concerned with irrigation and immigration, and ought to be read by every one. "A Mecca for Astronomers," an article on the solar observatory on Mt. Wilson, by Frank G. Martin, is a short but excellent summary of facts, well illustrated. Two leading articles in this number are "Driving the Iron Stallions Down to Drink," on "The Second Great Era of Transcontinental [illegible] by Frank Ira White, and "The Personal Narrative of Homer Davenport," part II of an interview with the great cartoonist, illustrated with some of Mr. Davenport's most famous drawings.

Doubleday, Page & Co., announce a new magazine, to be called Farming. An illustrated home magazine devoted to the living and growing things on the farm. It will make its appearance early during the coming year. It is expected that this magazine will do for the real farmer what the very successful Garden Magazine does for the gardener. Although there are 435 "agricultural papers" in the United States, Doubleday, Page & Co., believe that there is a field for a really high class farm magazine that will take advantage of every resource of photography, fine printing and good editing. Farming will lay special emphasis on the farm home; it will not only show how to make a living out of land, but how to get the greatest satisfaction and comfort out of farm life. In addition to comprehensive and handsomely illustrated articles every month on all phases of agricultural life and activity, Farming will contain a group of practical departments. Among them will be "The Month's Work," "The Farm Home," "Farm Buildings," "The Household," "Forestry," "Irrigation," "Uncle Sam's Helping Hand," "Dairying," "Stock Raising," and all the different kinds of crops. There will also be a department for the various sections of the United States, showing what people are doing and how they are doing it there. Another extremely interesting department will tell the farmer all about farm laws and how to protect himself. This will be the fourth magazine started by Doubleday, Page & Co., within four years. The first was The World's Work, which was followed by Country Life in America, and that in turn by The Garden Magazine. Each of these magazines has created a distinctive and successful field for itself.

PEOPLE AND THINGS LITERARY.

And books, we know
Are a substantial world, both pure and good.
Round these, with tendrils strong as

The Island of Tranquil Delights, a collection of South Sea idyls from the pen of Charles Warren Stoddard, is in its third American edition.

Meredith Nugent, whose "New Games and Amusements" has just been brought out, is the man who originated the famous soap-bubble tricks. He gives the recipe for making giant bubbles that last from five to ten minutes. Mr. Nugent furnishes a great many simple drawings to illustrate the games.

Miss Ellen Glasgow has returned from Europe, where she devoted part of her holiday time to work on her new novel, "The Wheel of Life," which Doubleday, Page & Co., will bring out early in the new year.

George H. Warner, whose book, "The Jewish Spectre," has caused a storm of criticism and comment among Hebrews, is spending the winter in Tryon, N. C. Mr. Warner is a brother of the late Charles Dudley Warner, and this is his first book. He has lived the life of a literary gentleman.

Oliver Bronson Capen, whose "Country Homes of Famous Americans" has just been published, is a native of Binghamton, N. Y. He worked as reporter on the leading newspapers there. Subsequently he worked his way through Hobart College, and then spent a year at Columbia. He became one of the editors of Country Life in America, and while in that capacity began the series of articles which comprise his book. He now holds another responsible position with his publishers.

Mr. and Mrs. Williamson, authors of "My Friend the Chauffeur," recently arrived in America. Mrs. Williamson, who was Alice Muriel Livingstone, is returning to her native country and will find many friends in New York and elsewhere to welcome her and her English husband. Mrs. Williamson's life has been a full one and her experiences many. Few people, for instance, are aware of the fact that she has had some experiences on the stage. She made her first appearance with one of the Jekyll and Hyde road companies.

Josiah Allen's wife, the creator of "Samantha" in her various environments, contributes to the Christmas Lippincott's, one of her inimitably funny sketches called "The Last Straw." Preliminary to the story she shows how camels and women are alike in a lot of things: "Both on 'em willin' to carry tremendous loads for them they love. Both on 'em liable to break right down under a last straw."

The Christmas Critic for 1905 has been prepared with unusual care, showing upon its contents page such names as the Rt. Hon. James Bryce, M.P., author of "The American Commonwealth," Jerome K. Jerome, Richard Watson Gilder, and Emma Calve. Many of the articles have a special pertinence to the time of the year, while the text has been enlivened with the unusual number of nearly [illegible] illustrations, and the whole placed beneath a cover design entirely [illegible] its conception.

The Christmas number of Country Life in America is one of the most beautiful magazines ever published. It is full of Christmas feeling in [illegible] illustrations. The cover design—a [illegible] cock—is in three colors and gold. There are sixteen pages of text and illustrations in sepia double-tone, [illegible] pages of bluegreen double-tone, frontispiece and double page in [illegible] colors, and the rest of the [illegible] in black. The articles of the [illegible] are divided between the practical and the artistic, as to subject, with a number that pertain specially to the Christmas holiday.

IT isn't so long ago that practically every well-dressed man purchased his clothes from the custom-tailor and paid accordingly. The custom-tailor was a well-known, prominent business man in almost every community. Is it true to-day? Do you hear as much about Mr. Sewandsew, the tailor, as you used to? Some of your best-dressed acquaintances will tell you why. You'll be surprised to find how many of them wear clothes of the kind made by the House of Kuppenheimer.

Wherever you live, the best-informed clothier in your city has Kuppenheimer Clothes. It will pay you to know him.

GREW THIS HAIR AND WE CAN PROVE IT.

MISS BARBARA HENRY,
5050 Forrestville Ave., CHICAGO.

Miss Henry says: "Before I began using Danderine my hair was falling out in great handfuls, and I am pleased to say that Danderine not only stopped it at once, but has made my hair grow more than twice as long as it ever was."

Mrs. [illegible] Atherton, Little Rock, Ark., says: "It is surely remarkable the way Danderine improves the hair. It has made my hair grow ten inches longer in five months and it is growing thicker and longer all the time. I believe in giving praise where it is due, and you can use my name as reference if you so desire."

AMONG THE BUSY WOMEN.

Last month a new woman's club was [illegible] on the sea of clubdom here. [illegible] name, El Optimo, is suggestive of [illegible] to be, to do, and to get the [illegible] life and people. Its motto is [illegible] Golden Rule, and its spirit is anti-[illegible] for it has no treasurer and [illegible] dues. There are eighteen charter [illegible] with a limit of twenty-four, and the club meets once in two weeks, [illegible] headquarters, at the home of the president, Mrs. Dr. J. F. Fargo at No. 137 [illegible] Adams street. Miss Emily A. [illegible] is vice-president, and Mrs. M. [illegible] is secretary. The meetings [illegible] informal and hence delightful, and [illegible] discussions are animated, for the [illegible] include some of the brightest [illegible] in town.

"I believe that a great career is open [illegible] a new line of work for women," ob-[illegible] an authority on pedagogy, "that [illegible] professional storytellers. I would [illegible] it one of the tests of ability to [illegible] whether the candidate could tell [illegible] story. That mystic 'once upon [illegible]' has a hypnotic charm for children [illegible] nothing can surpass. We [illegible] women who make it their [illegible] to go from schoolroom to [illegible] as professional storytellers [illegible] way the classics could be [illegible] before the children in an attractive and delightful form, and they [illegible] become familiar unconsciously [illegible] the best writers. Mythology is [illegible] of all fundamental truths; literature, science, art and religion all [illegible] with it, therefore, mythology is [illegible] highest importance, and it in-[illegible] appeals to the child's imagination [illegible] holds its attention."

[illegible] do I manage to accomplish so [illegible]" remarked a brilliant club [illegible]. "I'll tell you. I learned years [illegible] heed the law of limitation. If [illegible] try to enter into the strain [illegible] intellectual, business and philan-[illegible] activities and escape the de-[illegible] of ourselves and the extinc-[illegible] of our families, we must learn to [illegible] ourselves to what we can do [illegible] calmly, healthfully and heartily [illegible] up the silly ambition to be [illegible] in half a dozen lines [illegible]. We must put health above [illegible] else, and care more to be [illegible] of love and gladness in a small [illegible] than recipients of flattery and [illegible] a large one. Every woman of [illegible] attainments and social [illegible]," she went on, kindling into [illegible] with her enthusiasm, "who [illegible] herself down, or brings [illegible] puny, half-nourished, [illegible] is doing more to dis-[illegible] the cause of woman's education [illegible] than a dozen brilliant [illegible] can do to com-[illegible]. My rule is to limit myself [illegible] the line in which I can [illegible] the best advantage and throw [illegible] and one appeals from [illegible] unconsciously into the [illegible]. It is so easy to appeal [illegible] ambition of tired, overworked [illegible] to get them to take on an ex-[illegible] to help some one out, and [illegible] easier to get one who is [illegible] to do more than it is to [illegible] who is doing nothing to [illegible] the busy women are [illegible]. My hobby is [illegible]—that's how I ac-[illegible]," and the wise [illegible] down Broadway, in-[illegible] Christmas shopping [illegible] the holiday rush.

The kitchen is presided over [illegible] who has had a career as [illegible]. Years ago she cooked at the [illegible] for President Arthur, and [illegible] chef in the restaurant [illegible] building in Washington. THE RAMBLER.

[illegible] lonely liveliness of the [illegible] the challenge that the [illegible] expectant maples stir [illegible], and behold! the [illegible] sheaf of arrows keen [illegible] homage to the glad-[illegible] before him [illegible] of darkness and af-[illegible] his arrows [illegible], the heart of yon-[illegible] round the mock-[illegible] grew vibrant as a [illegible], and lo! it [illegible], and divine de-[illegible]

[illegible] confesses it with-[illegible] deep and abiding [illegible] old ladies and very [illegible] one must be be-[illegible] the other between [illegible], but not much.

[illegible] lady comes along [illegible] unconsciously, [illegible] of his hard heart [illegible] only his own [illegible] of honor, and [illegible] love. And [illegible] a wistful joy and [illegible] to envy. "To [illegible] to exclaim, with [illegible] one of the im-[illegible]

[illegible] the ambit-[illegible] novels, "that [illegible] is not despair." [illegible] Rambler pondered [illegible] the other day, as [illegible] old lady who had [illegible] the conductor onto [illegible] and the [illegible] and pure [illegible] good and kind [illegible] nobly content [illegible] she seemed! [illegible] and being old [illegible] and so grown [illegible] the heritage [illegible] a dumb de-[illegible] of one born to [illegible] though softly [illegible] as if they [illegible] many years; [illegible] and—please [illegible] loving children [illegible] blessed. [illegible] was of [illegible] the Rambler [illegible] the shines [illegible] discreetly [illegible] as [illegible] began to weave a romance to fit the beautiful lines of that countenance. She had passed, he decided, "a youth of labor," to be crowned "with an age of ease." She had——

Just then the car gave a lurch, and four little maids from school piled upon it. Straightway the fickle Rambler's thoughts and eyes strayed to this fresh and shining "rosebud garden of girls," and so did those of the old lady. Both came to the same conclusion: that "we may always find time to grow old"—and ponder on age—but that when youth comes our way it is the part of true wisdom to give it the consideration it deserves.

The young girls chattered, and laughed, and giggled. They entered into happy squabbles over nothing. They wrestled and tussled. And watching them, the Rambler smiled and grew strangely sad at one and the same time. And he murmured under his breath:

"Youth! youth! how buoyant are thy hopes! they turn,
Like marigolds, toward the sunny side."

But soon, far too soon, the joyous quartette left the car. Their shrill, gay voices raise and fell, and were heard no more. The Rambler smiled and sighed, but the dear old lady, wiser than he, only smiled.

PROMINENT PERSONS.

Chester S. Lord has just completed his twenty-fifth year as managing editor of the New York Sun. Last week a dinner in his honor was held in New York, attended by more than a hundred present and former members of the Sun's staff. Mr. Lord has a wide reputation as an able journalist and is personally one of the most affable and popular men in the profession.

The oldest clergyman in England is Rev. John Edward Kempe, M.A., who has been in holy orders for seventy-two years, being now 95 wears of age. He has been chaplain in ordinary to King Edward since 1901.

Rev. Sedgewick W. Bidwell, a Methodist minister of Rutland, Vt., has just completed seventy-two years of preaching. He has preached in twenty-two towns in Vermont and New York, and has founded a number of churches and schools. He is now 96 years old.

Ontario's new Postmaster-General, A. B. Aylesworth, who is seeking election to Parliament in succession to Sir William Mulock, is described as closely resembling Abraham Lincoln in appearance, being 6 feet 6 inches in height, spare, a lifelong temperance worker, a champion of provincial rights and a strict Presbyterian.

First Lieutenant Philip von Franck, retired, the oldest German army officer, completed recently the hundredth year of his age in Charlottenburg, and was the subject of innumerable congratulations and attentions. The centenarian still enjoys exceptional vigor of mind and body, walking out every day and taking most of his meals at a convenient restaurant.

Senator Pettus of Alabama wears shirts made by his wife and socks which she has knitted. The old couple live in Selma when not in Washington, and new manners and customs have changed them little. Since their marriage sixty-two years ago, she has made all his linen garments. Until about twenty years ago she adhered to the ways of her foremothers and spun the flax herself. Now she finds her eyes are failing, and she buys the linen from a merchant in Mobile, but the remainder of the work is her labor of love. As she talks to her guests, whether at home or in Washington, her fingers are busy with knitting. Mrs. Pettus has a remarkable memory and tells entertaining anecdotes in a quaint, old-fashioned way. On every anniversary of their marriage the couple give a reception for the Senate and great is the shower of gifts.

President Roosevelt has received twice the number of honorary degrees ever given any other President. Two doctorates have been conferred upon him this year. His bachelor of arts was conferred upon him twenty-five years ago by Harvard. In addition he may now write after his name eight LL. D.'s and one L.H.D. He is the first President to receive the latter degree.

It is sixty years since Rev. Henry Francis Lyle, who wrote the beautiful hymn, "Abide With Me," died at Nice, and this year a final effort is being made in the far distant little seaport in Devonshire, where he lived and ministered for twenty-five years, to complete the rebuilding of the little memorial church which has taken the fishermen thirty years to build.

Mrs. Willis S. Parks, daughter of Senator Bacon of Georgia, has been decorated by the Sultan of Turkey, the order being the same as that received by Mrs. Robert Goelet some years ago. Senator Bacon was in Constantinople last summer and was invited to visit the Sultan, with whom he had a long conversation. In the course of the interview the Sultan expressed his desire to confer an honorable decoration on the Senator himself, but was informed that the United States government forbade its officials accepting decorations from foreign governments. The Sultan then suggested that the decoration be conferred on the Senator's daughter.

William Waldorf Astor, who bought Hever Castle in England, about two years ago, is building a Tudor village around the old place and will try to give it surroundings similar to those existing in the days when Henry VIII went there to woo Anna Boleyn.

Alexander Campbell, who has just died at La Salle, Ill., was at one time Abraham Lincoln's closest friend. It was said of him in 1860 that he furnished Lincoln more financial aid in his race for the Presidency than any other one man. Campbell was one of the first to suggest that treasury notes be issued by the government.

Sir Thomas Lipton possessed two interesting Nelson mementoes, both of which he keeps on board his yacht Erin. One is a cigar cabinet, which is made of oak and copper saved from Nelson's Froudroyant. It is three feet long, one and one-half feet wide and one foot deep. Another memento of the hero is the solid silver candelabra bestowed upon Nelson by the corporation of Portsmouth in 1798.

The present Duchess of Devonshire is considered the luckiest woman in the world. To most women to be a Duchess is an impossible dream, but this fortunate lady has twice had the strawberry leaves on her brow—first as Duchess of Manchester and now of Devonshire. She is chatelaine of Chatswodth and Hardwicke Hall, in Derbyshire; Holker Hall, in Lancashire; Bodton Hall, on the banks of the lovely Wharfe; Compton Place, Eastbourne; beautiful Lismore Castle, County Waterford and Devonshire House and Chiswick House, London, with a chateau in France and villa on the Riviera.

A Modern Magazine.

To make a modern magazine,
Take, say, three hundred pages.
Fill three of these with photographs
Of grafters, statesmen, sages,
Of sonnets, here and there, use one
To finish up a page,
And devote full twenty pages
To the people of the stage.
Three very smart short stories—
Motor car in every one—
Fill the rest with advertising,
And your magazine is done.

PEOPLE OF THE COAST.

After fifty years in the employ of one banking-house, part of the time as paying teller and all of the time as cash keeper in charge of the safe and correct bestowal of the cash, John G. Clark retired from the Bank of California at San Francisco on the 1st of December. Mr. Clark came to the Coast in 1851 by way of Panama, being a native of Delhi, N. Y.

Miss Mabel Gilman, the actress who is mentioned in connection with the prospective divorce of W. E. Corey, president of the United States Steel Corporation, is a Sacramento girl and a graduate of Mills College. It is rumored that the steel trust man has been infatuated with the actress.

Miss Alice K. Hoyt, a native of California, recently became the bride of Andrew J. Stone, noted as a scientist and traveler. Mr. Stone has made three voyages of exploration to the Arctic regions. He is a millionaire.

MEN AND THINGS OVER THE SEAS.

Wave of Socialism in France.

The great growth of socialism in France is one of the most ominous signs of the times. What will the next elections result in? Some of the keenest observers in France predict a sweeping Socialist victory. A leading official at one of the ministries has spoken as follows to the correspondent of a London journal: "I do not say that the Socialists will be in an absolute majority, but I do believe that their numbers will be largely increased in the chamber. As they are extraordinarily active, and the other groups more or less inert, they will certainly force the government to give them at least half the seats in the Cabinet. Then we shall see a little Socialist legislation. The railways and the mines will be nationalized, as well as the means of intercommunication. We shall certainly have the income tax. The teachers will combine against the government, and their example will be followed by the soldiers, postmen, and all classes of government employés. It will be anarchy. What I am afraid of in the immediate future is some very serious social disturbance."

The Dutch Succession.

The failure of issue to the marriage of the young Queen of Holland is causing serious disquietude, and there is even talk of reviving some old Dutch law, whereby the marriage of a ruling monarch can be dissolved if after five years it has proved unfruitful. It is also rumored that there is a specific clause in Queen Wilhelmina's marriage contract permitting of this procedure being adopted. Notoriously the marriage with Prince Henry of Mecklenburg-Schwerin has proved to be a very unhappy one, and the King consort holds no place in the hearts of the Dutch people. Failing the birth of a direct heir, next in the line of succession to Queen Wilhelmina is another German prince, and toward him there is also undoubted personal antipathy in the country. Out of this situation there may eventually be evolved a Dutch republic.

Perils of Alpine Climbing.

Alpine climbing as a sport is even more deadly than American football. The annually compiled statistics show that during the present year 172 climbers have lost their lives in the Alps. Only one-fourth of the accidents occurred in the highest and most dangerous mountains, and 90 per cent. of the cases were due to foolhardiness or want of experience, the mishaps due to unavoidable causes, such as falling stones, amounting to only 10 per cent. Among the hapless victims were eight well-known climbers. The Swiss themselves were the heaviest sufferers, then followed the Germans, French, Austrians, Italians, and English in the order named.

STREAKS OF HUMOR.

Lawyer: What occupation are you following just now?

Witness: Several, but I ain't caught up with any of 'em yet.—[Baltimore American.

Brabantio: Thou are a vil'ain.

Iago: You are a Senator.

But it was not until very recent times that the full force of this retort could be appreciated.—[Kansas City Times.

Physician: Your ailment lies in the larynx, thorax and epiglottis.

Hooligan: Indade? An' me afther thinkin' th' trouble was in me throat.—[English Standard Magazine.

Sergeant: Where are you going, Smith?

Smith: To fetch water.

Sergeant: In those disreputable trousers?

Smith: No, sergeant; in this 'ere pail.—[Tit-Bits.

Smythe: Bjohnson says his wife never disobeys him.

Brown: No. He never gives her any orders.—[Somerville Journal.

Jings: Who is the really perfect man, anyhow?

Jangs: The man your wife was going to marry if she hadn't married you.—[Chicago News.

"How do you know that that couple is married?"

"They ride on my car every day."

"Oh, then you are acquainted with them?"

"No; but she always pays the car fare."—[Houston Post.

A clever old lady who went into society in the days when conversation was more important than cooking asked a niece on her return from a recent function if it had been enjoyable.

"Very," replied the niece. "The menu was great!"

"My dear," said the old lady severely, "it isn't the menu that makes a good dinner; it is the menu sit next to."—[Youth's Companion.

"I believe," said Mrs. Oldcastle, "that what a boy is depends largely upon his environment."

"I know it," replied her hostess, as she carelessly toyed with her jewel box. "There was my cousin Ebenezer's boy. He never knew what it was to have a well day 'till the doctors found out that it was his environment and cut it out."—[Chicago Record-Herald.

"Why do you call that dog of yours Camera?"

"Because he's always trying to get a snap at people he meets."—[Baltimore American.

Jeffreys: How does your brother take married life?

Esther: According to directions, I believe.—[Illustrated Bits.

Mrs. Al de Mustahd: You appear to be very fond of your poodle, Mrs. de Bunch.

Mrs. Justin de Bunch: Yes, indeed. Mrs. Cutler was unkind enough to say that I loved it more than I do my child.

Mrs. Al de Mustahd: Well, that's natural. The dog has a pedigree, hasn't it?—[Cleveland Leader.

"Jake, I understand the fight you had last week was of no moment."

"No, sah; it didn't last more'n a moment, boss; but widin dat time I sholy got enough to las' me."—[New Orleans Times-Democrat.

"This train is four hours behind time. We can't put up with any such delays as that."

"Can't help it, sir. It takes so much time to stop and untie the college students on the track."—[Baltimore American.

High: So you have given up your high ambitions and are going to follow a routine life?

Jinks: Yes; I decided it would be lonesome up there on the top rung of the ladder of fame. I'm going to stay down with the push.—[Detroit Free Press.

Friend (at a French play:) Why did you applaud so vigorously when that comedian made his speech before the curtain?

Spriggins (confidently:) So that folks would think I understood French. What did he say?

Friend: He said the remainder of his part must be taken by an understudy, as his mother was dying.—[Tit-Bits.

"Where is our guide?"

"Over in the bunkhouse, drunk. Why?"

"I wanted to make sure. I'm just going to fire at a deer."—[Louisville Courier-Journal.

Ethel (excitedly:) Oh, mamma, what do you think, Willie Jones and I are almost twins!

Mother: My dear! What can you mean?

Ethel: Well, he was born on the ninth and I was born on the tenth.—[Boston Transcript.

BITS OF VERSE.

Song of the Mountain.

Son of all the cities,
With their culture and their code,
What brings you to my doorway
By the lone and starry road?
You may come with seven pack-mules,
You may walk or steam or ride,
But you'll never, never know me
Till you come without a guide.

You may come with rod and level,
With compass and with chain,
To parcel me for profit
And barter me for gain;
You may tell my age in aeons
By the scars on drift and slide;
But you'll never, never know me
Till you learn how I abide.

You may range my slopes for silver;
You may wash my sands for gold;
You may tally every jewel
Till my gems have all been told;
You may cross my widest cañon,
You may top my last divide,
But you'll never, never know me
Till you watch me wonder-eyed.

You must sleep for nights together
With your head upon my breast,
The companion of my silence,
The receiver of my rest.
You may come with all your wisdom,
To subdue me in your pride,
But you'll never, never know me
Till you love me like a bride.
—[Bliss Carman, in The Reader.

The Fall of Galahad.

Her hair was brown, but dusted gold
Shone on it, by a young wind blown;
It lived in light and seemed to hold
The sun or star shine for its own.

Her eyes were like Our Lady's, gray;
They ransomed light for other light;
They were a daydream of the day,
The echo of a perfect night.

The beauty of her face compelled
All thought, all reason, everything,
Yet half-withdrew, and just withheld
The crown of its imagining.

Her step was like a soft leaf's fall
That wakes a sleeper in the wood.
It came, and then it went, then all
Had gone from life that seemed most good.

One instant, for a moment's space,
She stood before him where he prayed:
He felt her eyes, he felt her face—
The wind that touched her in the glade.

He left his prayer, forgot the place,
Forgot the Vision of the Grael;
He saw her eyes, her hair, her face—
His hilt-cross struck the altar-rail.

The music ceased, the shrine was rent—
He never cast one glance behind,
But followed on the way she went,
A hidden way and hard to find.
—[A. H., in the Spectator (London.)

"First Time He Kissed Me—"

First time he kissed me, he but only kissed
The fingers of the hand wherewith I write;
And ever since, it grew more clean and white,
Slow to world-greetings, quick with its "Oh, list,"
When the angels speak. A ring of amethyst
I could not wear here, plainer to my sight,
Than that first kiss. The second passed in height
The first, and sought the forehead, and half missed,
Half falling on the hair. O beyond meed!
That was the chrism of love, which love's own crown,
With sanctifying sweetness, did precede.
The third upon my lips was folded down
In perfect, purple state; since when, indeed,
I have been proud, and said, "My love, my own."
—[Elizabeth Barrett Browning.

Love and Falling Leaves.

Ah, love of mine, come wander out
In yonder wood with me,
Where brilliant leaves float all about
Beneath each shrub and tree,
And whispering they softly sing
A forest symphony.

Come wander far where loveland lies,
Through winding, golden ways,
And let me see within your eyes
A glimpse of summer days
And hear your voice bid me rejoice
As soft the lovelight plays.

Ah, love of mine, come out with me
Where violets are dead,
And watch the dry leaves dance in glee
When zephyrs softly tread;
The piping breeze sings in the trees
Whence singing birds have fled.

Come, tell me that you love me, dear,
Beneath the bittersweet,
And I will whisper in your ear,
Afar, in that retreat,
Such words of love, my sweet, my dove,
As only gods repeat.

CALIFORNIA.

O bards who long to wear the bays,
List to the birds' melodious praise;
Take up their joyous roundelays
And sing of California.

O artists who delight to gaze
On mountains veiled in opal haze
And foothills limned in greens and grays,
Look first on California.

Let him whose restless spirit strays
Afar in life's distressful maze,
Turn to the calm, idyllic ways
Of peaceful California.

Let all who crave salubrious rays
Come where the sea breeze ever plays
Through starry nights and sunlit days
Of balmy California.

Whoe'er would shun the vain displays
Of pomp and fashion, ne'er delays,
But flees from Mammon's power, and stays
In God's own California.

Wells Fargo & Co's Bank
Mr Blank $1000.00
One Thousand & no/100 Dollars
Dr M B McLaughlin

I Will Pay $1,000 Forfeit

For a case of Nervous Debility, Varicocele, Early Decay and Waste of Power, Rheumatism, Lame Back, Lumbago, Sciatica or any case of Kidney Disease that has not gone as far as Bright's Disease, Indigestion, Constipation, or any weakness caused by ignoring the laws of nature, which I cannot cure with my new Improved Electric Belt, the marvel of Electricians, the most wonderful curative device that has ever been introduced.

This Belt is Complete with Free Electric Suspensory for Puny Men

This Electrical Suspensory carries the current direct to the weak parts and cures all weakness of men, varicocele, etc. It develops and expands all weak organs and checks unnatural drains. No case of Failing Vigor, Varicocele or Debility can resist the powerful Electric Suspensory. It never fails to cure. It is free with belts for weak men.

No man should be weak, no man should suffer the loss of that vital element which renders life worth living. No man should allow himself to become less a man than nature intended him; no man should suffer for the sins of his youth when there is at hand a certain cure for his weakness, a check to his waste of power.

Most of the pains, most of the weakness of stomach, heart, brain and nerves, from which men suffer, are due to the early loss of nature's reserve power, through mistakes of youth. You need not suffer for this. You can be restored. The very element which you have lost you can get it back, and you may be as happy as any man that lives.

My Electric Belt, with Special Electric Suspensory (free,) will restore your power. It will check all unnatural drains and give back the old vigor of youth.

E. E. BEEBE, Kirkland, Ariz., says: Your Belt gives perfect satisfaction in every way. After having worn this appliance only a month I am almost cured.

This drain upon your power causes Kidney Trouble, Rheumatism and Stomach Ailments. You know it's a loss of vital power and affects every organ of the body. Most of the ailments from which men suffer can be traced to it.

I have cured thousands of men who have squandered the savings of years in useless doctoring.

My belt is very easy to use; put it on when you go to bed; you feel the glowing heat from it (no sting or burn, as in old style belts,) and you feel the nerves tingle with the new life flowing into them. You get up in the morning feeling like a two-year-old.

AL POWELL, Searchlight, Nev., writes: I used your belt for ten weeks, and am glad to tell you that it cured me of lame back and kidney trouble. I am now sound and well, in perfect health, and weigh more than I ever did. My appetite is better than it has been for years. Your Belt is all and more than you claim for it.

An old man of seventy says he feels as strong and young as he did at 35. That shows it renews the vigor of youth.

It cures Rheumatism, Sciatic Pains, Lumbago, Kidney Trouble. It banishes pain in a night, never to return.

REV. G. B. BEHRENS of 883 State street, San Diego, writes: Your letter of Oct. 30 is at hand, and in reply will say that the results of the use of your Belt have been very satisfactory. You may remember that in my previous correspondence I stated that for some time before coming to you I had been wearing various electrical appliances, but the one received from you is far superior in makeup and effect to anything in the line I had ever tried. To be sure when I consulted you I was in a very serious condition—crippled, ruptured, and within two years and a half of eighty. But now I am able to go seven miles every Sunday to preach, and I am indeed thankful to you for what you have done for me. Many of my neighbors notice the change in me and I do not hesitate to recommend the Belt to them.

What ails you? Write and tell me, and no matter where you are, I think I can give you the address of some one in your town that I have cured. I've cured thousands, and every man of them is a walking advertisement for my Belt.

Every man who ever used it recommends it because it is honest. It does a great work and those whom I have cured are the most grateful because the cure costs so little.

Every man who uses my Belt gets the advice and counsel of a physician free. I will give you all that any medical man can give you, and a lot that he can't.

Try my Belt. Write me today for my beautifully illustrated book, with cuts, showing how my Belt is applied, and lots of good reading for men who want to be "The Noblest Work of God"—A MAN. INCLOSE THIS AD. AND I WILL SEND THIS BOOK, SEALED, FREE.

Only 12 Shopping days to Xmas

Just think of it! Only twelve days in which to plan and purchase for the Great Day. Our invitation backed by values and prices of exceptional merit to trade early was splendidly responded to, and we take this occasion to thank you for the doing of it. Here are two whole pages of extraordinary offerings and still the half has not been written. For additional bargains look in every Department for signs that will read: "UNDERPRICED, BUT NOT ADVERTISED." The people of Los Angeles KNOW where values are greatest, assortments largest, prices lowest and trading safest; and to the stranger within our gates we would merely say: "Ask Anybody." The response is likely to be—"What others advertise they sell for less."

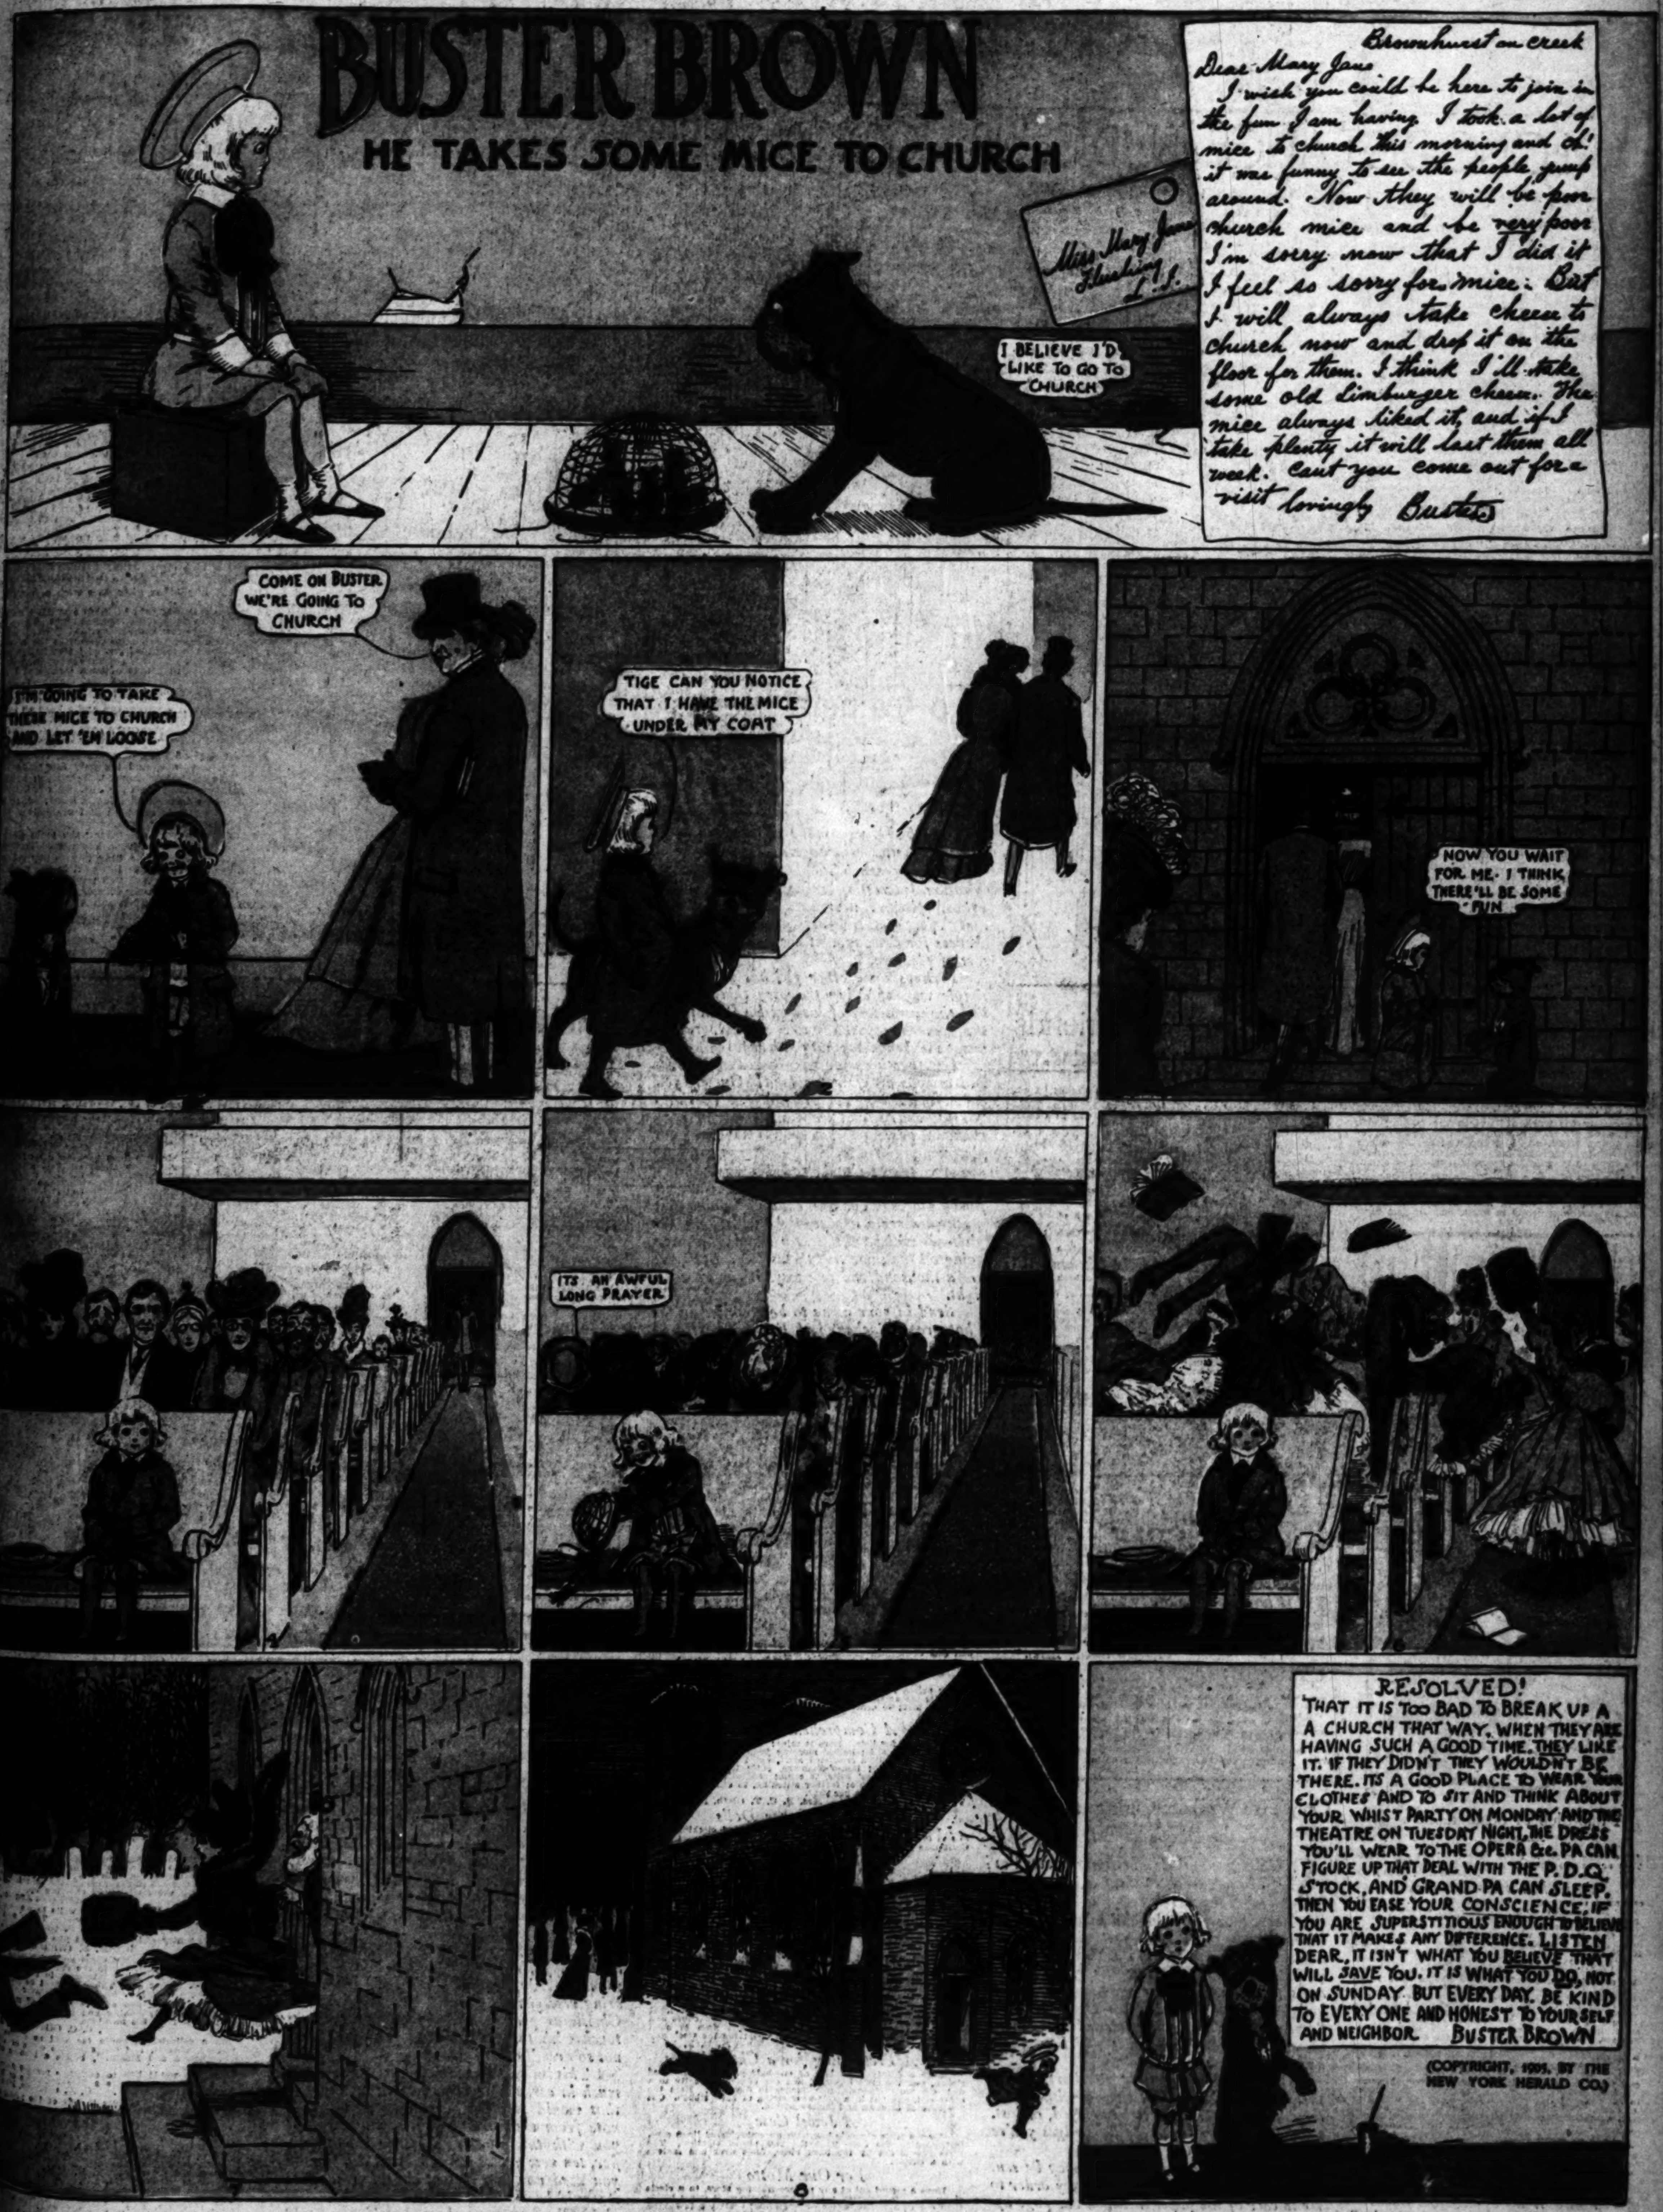
BUSTER BROWN

HE TAKES SOME MICE TO CHURCH



Brownhurst on creek
Dear Mary Jane
I wish you could be here to join in the fun I am having. I took a lot of mice to church this morning and oh! it was funny to see the people jump around. Now they will be poor church mice and be very poor I'm sorry now that I did it I feel so sorry for mice. But I will always take cheese to church now and drop it on the floor for them. I think I'll take some old Limburger cheese. The mice always liked it, and if I take plenty it will last them all week. Cant you come out for a visit lovingly Buster

Miss Mary Jane Flushing
L. I.
I BELIEVE I'D LIKE TO GO TO CHURCH
COME ON BUSTER WE'RE GOING TO CHURCH
I'M GOING TO TAKE THESE MICE TO CHURCH AND LET 'EM LOOSE
TIGE CAN YOU NOTICE THAT I HAVE THE MICE UNDER MY COAT
NOW YOU WAIT FOR ME. I THINK THERE'LL BE SOME FUN ITS AN AWFUL LONG PRAYER

RESOLVED!
THAT IT IS TOO BAD TO BREAK UP A A CHURCH THAT WAY, WHEN THEY ARE HAVING SUCH A GOOD TIME. THEY LIKE IT. IF THEY DIDN'T THEY WOULDN'T BE THERE. ITS A GOOD PLACE TO WEAR YOUR CLOTHES AND TO SIT AND THINK ABOUT YOUR WHIST PARTY ON MONDAY AND THE THEATRE ON TUESDAY NIGHT, THE DRESS YOU'LL WEAR TO THE OPERA &c. PA CAN FIGURE UP THAT DEAL WITH THE P. D. Q. STOCK, AND GRAND PA CAN SLEEP. THEN YOU EASE YOUR CONSCIENCE, IF YOU ARE SUPERSTITIOUS ENOUGH TO BELIEVE THAT IT MAKES ANY DIFFERENCE. LISTEN DEAR, IT ISN'T WHAT YOU BELIEVE THAT WILL SAVE YOU. IT IS WHAT YOU DO, NOT ON SUNDAY BUT EVERY DAY. BE KIND TO EVERY ONE AND HONEST TO YOUR SELF AND NEIGHBOR. BUSTER BROWN

LONG-DISTANCE SUB-CLUBS CONDUCTED BY CORRESPONDENCE

ST week you may recollect that we had a talk about some of the sub-clubs. To-day I am going to talk on the same subject, with a difference. For the clubs that we discussed then were those that ace to face, while those which we will consider to-e conducted by correspondence. You know about and many of you belong to them.

Art Club, of which I printed a report last week, is them; the Invalid Help Club is another, so is the etting Club. These three and some besides are in rking order, but I am not satisfied with only these want to have hundreds of them, linking together y common interests in all parts of the country. was there such an organization as Each and All for g into touch girls from the East and the West, the and the South. The girl from Manitoba can ex- letters and views with the girl from Texas or Ari- e girl from Massachusetts and the one from Los e may be chums by letter.

t good cannot fail to come from such association. we tend to become narrow and limited. This ill widen our minds by showing us the point of anding in different surroundings and in natures ave been influenced by such surroundings.

k what it is to a girl who has lived all her life in ll Eastern village to have a correspondent from a or California or Arizona! The very circumstances life of the latter are absolutely different from those former. The letters open up a whole new field of t to both of them, and teach sympathy and com-sion, as well as stimulating each to learn more of ch girl encourages another who is working along e line, and there is a freshness, a benefit that is ilable.

e, for instance, the stenographers' sub-club, in as you know, I have been interested for some time. airman of this sub-club lives in Harrisburg, Pa. ll, I hope, be assisted and counseled by one member is Massachusetts and another whose home is in an. The girls whose names I have sent her for rship are from California, Pennsylvania, Canada, chusetts, Delaware, West Virginia, New York, North a and Michigan.

e States are represented already, and there will be Do you see what a chance there is here for corre-ence, for one girl to interest and stimulate another, exchange of experiences that will amuse and help tertain? I have this sub-club very much at heart, ope I may receive many more names to be enrolled. at the help they give one another will be so great as one member has said and I have previously "the highest praise an employer will give his ste-her would be to say, 'She is an Each and All girl!'" ou help me in this, my stenographer girls?

r some time I have been hoping for a sub-club of ll nurses, past, present and to-be. Finally I have just the right chairman for it. She writes:

graduated as a nurse in [illegible], and have had experi- both as teacher and student, and also in doing ate work. I was so glad to see in the page that discouraged "the would-be nurse" from taking a course in some school other than a hospital train-chool. There are so many, many things that go to e up a nurse that cannot be gained in any other than a good, large training school.

am happy to accept the chairmanship of the ed nurses' club, and will do my best to make it ccess. Tell them to hurry up and write to me.
K. C. B. (Philadelphia).

d me your letters to be forwarded to her, or write inclosing stamped and self-addressed envelope, for dress.

other sub-club for which there is a demand is one rature. Girls are constantly writing to me and ask-y advice about courses of reading or seeking corre-nts with whom they can exchange views on books. irman to whom they can send for advice and who eep a list of those who wish to correspond on these topics must be one who is herself a reader and has had experience.

Such a one I have found in "J. S. H.," of Nantucket, Mass., with whom some of you have already had correspondence. Send your names to her, you reading girls, and get her to counsel and help you. There are many of you, and you have a boundless field for enjoyment and improvement. Here is an extract from a letter from one of our girls which gives an idea of some of the points such a club would cover:

I notice the letter "Phyllis" writes in regard to reading one good book a week, and like the idea very much. It would not only be a benefit to the readers, but a pleasure as well. But it seems as if a book a week is more reading than a person can do and do it thoroughly, especially if she can only devote the evening or a part of it to the work. Some books can be read for months, and there would still be much of interest that had escaped notice. I hope the girls will take up this idea. The club could embrace girls from different cities, for we could write and exchange our ideas and opinions, and this of itself would be an excellent drill for us.
O. B. J. (Scranton, Pa.).

A number of girls have expressed a desire for a drama sub-club. Here is a letter from one who is willing to act as chairman. Who will send in her name as a member? We want a lot of you!

I would like to hear from all girls interested in amateur theatricals. Send in your suggestions, girls, and see if we can't make a success of the drama club. I am willing to work hard to succeed, but I need the help of all you girls who are interested.
CARLOTTA (Reading, Pa.).

And here are several calls for sub-clubs. I hope to get a number of responses from girls who feel each of the clubs would fill felt wants in their lives.

Don't you think it would be nice to have an exchange club, so that we could exchange with each other? We could exchange such things as quilt pieces or reading, or advise how to make articles for Christmas, or recipes or patterns.

If you can find time and place to notice it in the paper, it may be we can help one another.
S. M. M. (Camden, N. J.).

Has a sub-club been formed relative to the suppression of slang? I feel very deeply the need of it for myself. I do try—sometimes—to use the best English I can, but it's so easy to forget!
BETTIE HAIGHE (Pottstown, Pa.).

In your talk a few weeks ago you spoke of a traveling club by correspondence.

Now, do you think it could be done by taking about twelve girls that would care for it and number each, then on the first of the month let each girl write a letter describing some place she has been or some building she has seen, and send it to the one having the number next to her own?

To do this each girl would have to know the number of all the girls, and when it got to twelve she would have to send her letter to No. 1, would she not? Wouldn't it be a good plan for each girl to sign her name, number and the date to each letter before she sends it on?

In that way no one would be so likely to have the same letter twice. Of course, the letters would have to be kept going until each girl had had eleven, her own making the twelfth.
ERNESTINE (Lawrence, Mass.).

This is the kind of club suggested by "Faith [illegible]." We have girls who are widely enough scattered to make such a circle very interesting.

From time to time I have noticed a letter from some teacher, and several times, when I have heard of good positions, have wished that I knew of some one who might want just such a chance. If we teachers could get into touch, perhaps we could help one another materially.
M. K. (Middletown, Pa.).

Surely there are enough teachers in Each and All to form a flourishing sub-club that might also serve as an employment bureau. Let me hear from them.

You mentioned a current topic sub-club during the summer. I would like very much to take the chairmanship of this club, for I am much interested in the branch; but I do not feel as though I can just now, as I am in school and have about all that I can attend to with my lessons. I also assist in a store two afternoons and evenings in the week.

If somebody else would take this club, I would do all in my power to assist her; and I think I could help her, for I took a course in current topics last year, and have a fair idea of the way in which this should be conducted.
M. L. R. (Brockton, Mass.).

Are there any other girls who wish a current topic sub-club?

There are few interests in Each and All that are not in a fair way to be met by the sub-clubs. Their success is in the hands of the members. As I have said more than once before, we wish no drones in the hive, and I do not ask for the name of any girl who is not prepared to work well and keep up an unflagging interest in the club. But there are plenty of such girls, and I want to hear from them.

Now I wish to say one more thing about the correspondence sub-clubs, and I think it so important that I am going to give it a paragraph and a head all to itself.

POSTAGE

A great deal of work devolves upon the chairman of each of the sub-clubs, and the only fair thing that can be done is to spare her expense. When you write to her inclose a stamp for return postage. This is little enough to do. A stamp is a small thing, I know, but it becomes important when it is repeated and multiplied. So spare your chairman this, at least.

To some girls who are taking the main part of the work of these sub-clubs' expense is a consideration, but it is not upon that ground I urge you to pay return postage, but because it is your fair part in the work of conducting the sub-club. Will you try to bear this in mind, girls? After all, it is only carrying out consistently the spirit of our pledge in Each and All.

To Camera Fiends

An Exchange Sure to Rival the Post Card Exchange

Why could not amateur photographers, like myself, exchange pictures? I would like my address to be given to any one who would.
SUSIE (Dorchester, Mass.).

TO THE thousands of camera fiends scattered through the land, "Susie's" suggestion should come like an inspiration. Interesting scenes, character studies, "ghost" pictures, new ways of getting this or that effect—there are almost unlimited chances for development through the greatest sort of pleasure.

Perhaps some other girl has mastered a simple way of doing the very thing you've had the worst sort of luck with. Perhaps, at the same time, you know a photographic secret she'd give anything to learn.

Get together, you two—twos and threes and crowds all over the land! One of you come forward to act as chairman (perhaps "Susie" will?), and we'll make this new exchange a power. It has all the planks of our platform in it—there's self-development, help for some one else, and good, healthy fun.

Think how much you can learn about the far-off places in our own country. Think how much pleasure a trip you take will give other girls—it will be the next best thing to their going on the same trip themselves. But there are a thousand and one ways it can be a delight.

Send in your name to be recorded in the Photograph Exchange of Each and All.

uggestions for Mutual Help for My Girl Friends

HIS week I am putting more work suggestions on the page. I wish to offer our girls as many chances as possible to order work for Christmas from our own members. So I am mentioning ds for work in the effort to help those who are r for acceptable Christmas gifts, as well as those re trying to earn money by making such gifts. the requests for work are not in the holiday gift ut the need for money seems greater at this time ar than any other, and I group together the pleas mployment and money-making occupation of every n the hope there may be responses to all of them.

Little Capes of Shetland Floss make circular capes of Shetlands floss, and would like dispose of them. They can be made in any color pre-d, but are especially dainty in white, and are just the ing for evening wear, to throw over the head and shoul-rs. They are in two sizes. The cost is $1.50 and $2.

W. (Somerville, Mass.).

A Sub-Club of Stenographers

Paints Shirt-Waist Fronts

I can paint either pictures or decorative work. It would e nice for Eastern girls to have their cuffs, collars and the ront piece to silk or poplin waists done in the California oppy and pepper sprays. I have done some for people to ake back from the West with them. I have a cream poplin one in wild roses. I could do them for $1, or the collar and uffs for 50 cents.
I. I. R. (Pomona, Cal.).

Hand-Painted Postal Cards

Would any of the post card collectors like to have hand-ainted cards? I can make simple designs in flowers, and m very anxious to get some orders. I will make holly and mistletoe cards for Christmas, also calendars. I can also aint dinner cards, and make cute "sun-bonnet babies," which would be appropriate for children's parties.

I am trying to make some money to help with my col-ege expenses. I will make the post cards for 5 cents apiece, and the dinner cards, souvenir cards and so forth for 50 ents a dozen.
H. C. M. (Salem, Ohio).

A Crocheted Kimono

I can make beautiful things of wool—shawls, kimonos, sweaters, baby jackets, etc. It is my one talent. I would be glad to get some of this work to do, and I am willing to teach any one. The kimono is especially beautiful, entirely crocheted. Crocheted handkerchief cases make another pretty gift.
E. V. P. (Lynn, Mass.).

Another Girl Who Paints Postals

I would like to sell some hand-painted post cards to the members of Each and All for 10 cents each, or 50 cents a set (six in a set). Colored views of places of historical or literary interest, costumes of different nations, or wild flowers of America.
J. W. (Concord Junction, Mass.).

Sofa Pillows With Spun Glass Backs

I would make cotton or ordinary wool shirt waists for $1 each, silk shirt waists for $1.50. I will furnish materials and make nainsook marguerites, with Valenciennes lace, beading and ribbon trimmings, entirely hand made, for $2.50. These marguerites have lace on edge of hem as well as on body.

I can make very pretty smock sofa pillows of checked gingham, with back and ruffle of spun glass, ruffle either feather-stitched or trimmed with narrow ribbon, good quality [illegible]. I think these of green and white gingham, with dark green back and ruffle, worked with white silk, are the prettiest.
SYMPATRICA (Medfield, Mass.).

Interested in Sketching

I would like to hear from girls about 18 years old. I am also interested in pen-sketching, and am making a number of sofa pillows for Christmas presents. Would like to know of some one who would like to purchase. Living in a small town as I do, I find little or no sale for them.
VIOLET (Raymond, S. D.).

Pen and Ink and Pastel Work

I would like to get orders for pastel crayon pictures—simple pen and ink sketches and family coats-of-arms. I would also like to correspond with some of the girls and exchange postals.
MOLLIE (Milford, Mass.).

Pillow Tops and Slippers

I would like to receive orders for pen and ink pillow tops or hand-painted ones of California poppies or oranges. I also make eiderdown slippers. I would be delighted to furnish any one with the prices of these articles.
MAY ID (Glendale, Cal.).

A Chance for a Splendid Exchange

I would suggest to "M. E. A." to make a book club by asking every friend of the church to give a book suitable for such a library. If the book costs less than $1 it admits the giver to membership for six months; a book costing $1 or over makes a member for a year, while a $5 book or set of books makes a life member. Many people would rather give the price of a book than choose it. This makes a nucleus—and with suitable rules for fines, and, perhaps, a charge of a cent a week or more for readers who are not members, a good library could be built up.

Now, I want something. I am to take a position which will take my help out of the home, and I want a girl to come in and help in our light housework—washing dishes, dusting, etc., for one or two hours a day, morning or afternoon. In exchange for this I would give her piano or violin lessons (she could practice on my instruments), or mandolin or banjo lessons if she has an instrument. Or I could arrange with one of my friends to have her taught shorthand, elementary French, German or Spanish. There must be some girl in Los Angeles who wants lessons in some of these things, and who would exchange with me. Or I would pay a small sum. The work is light, and it could be a very pleasant arrangement.
MIGNONETTE (Los Angeles).

This letter needs no comment. Surely there will be a rush for the position.

An Invalid Who Wants to Help

For three years I have been an invalid, and most of the time cannot even sit up; but still, if you try, you can find lots of chances to help others; at least, I have. I do fancy work—lace, colored embroidery, mount mellick, eyelet and shadow work—and have lots of ideas for girls that are pretty and easily made. I will gladly tell them all I can.
CARRIE L. (Portland, Me.).

Another cheerful and helpful invalid. Who will take advantage of this timely offer?

Who Wants to Study the Banjo?

I have a banjo, which I will loan to any one in the club who would like the use of it for the winter.

I would help any of the girls in embroidery, burnt-wood work, the piano or anything I can do, but I am not an artist at any one thing.
FRENCH-AMERICAN (Lowell, Mass.).

Offers of help are plentiful to-day.

A Plan for Sketching Trips

I should like to meet a young lady, about 18, who is interested in the study of art and would go on little sketching trips.

Is there some one who would like dancing lessons in exchange for a few instructions in elocution or drawing?
LOTTIE (Los Angeles).

I hope some member of the Los Angeles sub-club will write promptly for "Lottie's" address.

Only Two Weeks to Christmas—Where the Bee is to Go

SUCH pretty little Christmas secrets I'm learning—where this bee is to go and where that!

There's one little invalid who has to go without even the necessary medicines sometimes—they cost so much. But there's a badge on its way to her. One of my girls sent 50 cents to buy some other girl a Christmas badge—she'd do without her own, she said. Somehow, that 50 cents stretched to a dollar in no time—both those girls will have their badges by Christmas.

But the time's getting so short to get them in. Nearer Christmas, with mails crowded, some are sure to be delayed, or lost.

So, send in at once for the badges you're going to give for Christmas.

Each pin is 50 cents, which may be sent in stamps, registered letter or money order to me in care of the paper in which our page appears.

Be sure to write addresses plainly.

CHRISTINE TERHUNE HERRICK,
President.

MANY OFFERS OF HELP IN CHRISTMAS WORK

MORE offers of Christmas work and the like head the list to-day. I only hope that there has been a generous response to the other notices I have put in this corner of the paper and that the girls have not waited too long to send for addresses and to turn in orders. Remember that it takes time to forward letters and get orders filled, and don't wait until the last moment.

For a Girl's Room or a Den

Will you tell the girls of the odd sofa cushions, table and couch covers I make? They are of burlap, red, green or blue, with strands of different colors interwoven, so as to produce a very Oriental effect.

I will make a sofa cushion all ready to slip the pillow into for $1; also a table cover for the same price—just the thing for a girl's room or a den.

Couch covers would be $2, as there is much more work to them, and portieres, $2.50 or $3 per pair, according to size.

I am able to give the best of references to any one ordering. I should pay the expense of expressing.
H. T. (Everett, Mass.).

English Embroidery

I can do pen and ink sketches, plain sewing, collar and cuff sets of English embroidery, etc.
Mrs. E. W. S. (Forest Hill, Mass.).

Menu and Dinner Cards

My prices for menu cards are 15 cents apiece and $1 a dozen for the smaller ones; 25 cents apiece and $2 a dozen for the next size; 50 cents apiece and $4 a dozen for the large heads.
MARY A. B.

A Comprehensive List

You asked for lists. Here is mine: Crocheted shawls, all styles, $2.75, $3, $3.50; ladies' morning jackets, $2.50; bedroom slippers, $1.25; child's crocheted skirt, age 1 to 3 years, $2.50; babies' sacques, $2; tam-o'-shanters, $1.50; table mats (five per set), $2.50; ladies' belts, 75 cents; crocheted hearts, with sachet powder, 25 cents; feather stitching, 10 cents per yard; star stitching, 10 cents per yard.
Mrs. F. C. T. (Bath, Maine).

Families of Paper Dolls

I make paper dolls, with seven articles of clothing, for 25 and 50 cents a set, or in families for $1. They make nice Christmas presents for little sisters or cousins.
J. N. W. (Concord Junction, Mass.).

A Quaint Calendar

Have you ever seen an "Auld Acquaintance Kalendar"? All the residents and former residents of a little town are written to and requested to send a quotation, the date (not the year, of course) of their birth and 10 cents (to cover cost of printing). The "kalendar" is nine inches long and six inches wide, having seven days and their quotations on each page; the pages fastened together at the top with a fancy cord.
YTHIA (Gloucester, Mass.).

A Suggestion and a Request for Work

I made a cradle quilt of a patchwork top, lined with unbleached muslin; the lining comes up two inches over the top all around, and is feather stitched in two rows with colored silkatine, and would make a pretty but inexpensive gift. There is room for lots of love in every stitch.

Please give my address to any one who wishes crochet work done. I make shawls, fascinators, infants' sacques and afghans. I make large shawls of Shetland floss in shell stitch, one and one-fourth yards square, finding the wool, any color, for $3.
M. E. B. V.

A Pretty Bag for a Chamois

Make a dainty little bag of one-half yard of variegated ribbon, sew the ends together, and one edge join neatly to a disk cut from chamois, four inches in diameter. Hem the other end, and put in a gathering string of baby ribbon. Cut a square of chamois and inclose within.

A Jewel Case

Cover a little chamois bag with an embroidered linen case. Buttonholing the edge joins the two pieces together. The little flap is cut on the back piece, folds over and fastens with a button.

For Our Motto

Have a mount cut at any picture-framing store, in a circle eight inches in diameter, print a good motto on it (what better than our own?) with water color gilding; scatter a few flowers, birds or butterflies; tie with baby ribbon.

In Cross-Stitch Work

Get a piece of canvas and fashion a hang-bag, working it with black, green, red and a little yellow. The mercerized goods work up and wear well. Put a heading of green silk for the part that gathers with a double draw-string and line throughout.
ALFLEDA M.

The Correspondence and Post Card Exchange

ADDRESSES will be given only to members of Each and All. Every application for an address must be accompanied by a stamped and self-addressed envelope.

Last week you may recollect that I spoke severely—though not so severely as I felt—concerning the members of the post card exchange who received cards without returning them. I do not withdraw any remarks I made upon the subject, but something has come to me which makes me think that those who do not return cards are not always in fault.

I have been asked by no less than three members for the addresses of girls who have sent out cards unsigned or with nothing to indicate the address whence they came. The only guide in one case was the postmark of the town where the card was mailed. The girls who sent out those cards are doubtless blaming the false members who did not send return cards. I can well believe that this is the trouble in many cases, if I may judge from the letters I receive in which the address or the signature is missing. The girls who write those letters, especially if they inclose stamps, probably think me terribly negligent. So be sure you have your address on the card you send.

One thing more. It should be a point of honor with the members of Each and All not to let any one else have the use of the post card lists that are supplied. Someone has been lacking in this honor. I should be sorry to refuse to give out the long lists I have been sending, but I shall be forced into doing it if they cannot be kept sacred for the use of the members of the club.

The writer of the following has suffered from the faithlessness of some of the girls:

Is it right for girls to deprive others of a pleasing correspondence with their sisters in other cities? If one of the girls, as she says, has waited four or five weeks after sending a stamp for a reply, and yet is waiting, you ought, by your right as president of this society, to know the name of that member. Also the names of any members who will not return a card. I think, if each girl on receipt of a card would go directly and send one in return it would be the correct way.

I keep a half dozen or so postals on hand, which makes it easy to return one as soon as one is received.
G. M. S. (Brockton, Mass.).

Please take special note of the two letters following:

I don't like to cry "quits," but would you do me a favor by not giving my address for postal cards to any one in Philadelphia? I am exchanging with seven in that city and four in other parts of Pennsylvania, and I am beginning to get duplicate cards. Every one of the eleven girls wants me to send them a dozen or more cards, so you can readily see that I have about all that I can handle from that place. I am exchanging with six from Massachusetts and seven from other places.
A. L. B. (Los Angeles, Cal.).

I wonder if some of the "Each and All" girls would not like to send postals to those girls who could not return the favor, especially to the invalids of the club? These [illegible] are a source of great pleasure to the sick, especially [illegible] they are views of other places than where they live. What I Want From My Girls for Christmas

DO ANY of you girls make Christmas lists? That is, do you write down the things you would like for Christmas presents, and then hang up the list in a conspicuous place, that the other members of the family may see the suggestions and benefit by them—or rather benefit you by them?

I know some children who do that, and it strikes me as such a good plan that I am going to do it myself. Only, I mean to ask for just one kind of thing from you girls, so that I may not lay myself open to the charge of greediness. Here it is: more members for Each and All!

Will you give them to me, girls? And how many shall I have? Oh, dear! that sounds greedy, after all! But then, when you bring new girls in you will be making them a Christmas present, too, by putting them in touch with the club; and so, perhaps, I am not so dreadful.

This isn't a make-believe, girls. I am very much in earnest. I cannot think of any gift that would please me so much as to get a note from each one of you, saying, "I send you with this a merry Christmas and two, five, ten new names for Each and All." And you need not stop at ten, either! I suppose it would be too much to ask for a whole sub-club, all of new members, but if you could tuck it into Santa Claus' pack for me, what a rich and happy woman I would feel on Christmas morning!

Polly Evans' Story Page For Boys and Girls

"Winter is Summer's Heir"

A RAINY DAY RACE

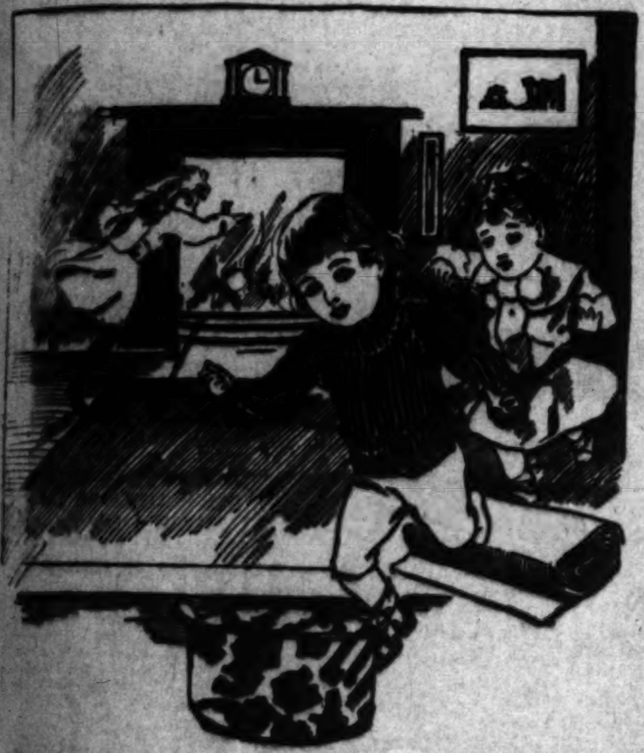
HOW many of you boys and girls have seen a hurdle race? Those who have know what sport it is. Well, to-day Polly Evans will tell you of an obstacle race you can run in the house the next snowy, stormy day when you don't know what to do with yourself.

Gather all the children in the play-room or hall—for this game is apt to prove rather rough on furniture—arrange a number of hazards, such as low stools, boxes up and down steps, or a jump from two rugs placed a short distance apart. Then give to each player a teaspoon with a spool standing upright in it, and tell him he or she must hop on one foot over the entire course without upsetting the spool.

If the spool topples over or the racer rests on two feet, even for a minute, he is out of the game.

The one who gets over the course with the least mishaps is the winner, and can be given a small prize.

You can make jolly prizes by getting one of the little wooden jumping-jack horses that are sold for a few cents and trimming it with gay ribbons; or give one of the clear toy candy horses; or cut a picture of some famous runner from a magazine or paper and frame it in one of the photograph frames of red cover paper, such as Polly Evans told you about a few weeks ago.



A Good Game for Christmas Evening

Many boys and girls have family parties on Christmas, when lots of cousins come together, sometimes from far-distant cities.

But the dinner is over and all the presents have been examined, the children must be amused. There are many jolly games that can be played—but do you know the thing Polly Evans used to enjoy most on Christmas evenings, when she was a girl? A grab bag.

Such fun it was!

There would be a big muslin bag—a pillow case will answer—tied from the chandelier. In this bag were dozens and dozens of little gifts, not one of them expensive, but all sorts of trinkets that you can pick up for a few pennies each, every one neatly tied in paper, so no one knows what's inside.

Then a boy or girl is blindfolded, given a cane in one hand, turned round three times and told to strike at the bag.

It is great sport for the watchers to see the frantic efforts made to hit that bag, and equally exciting when, having succeeded, the blindfolded player dips into the grab bag and pulls out a gift.

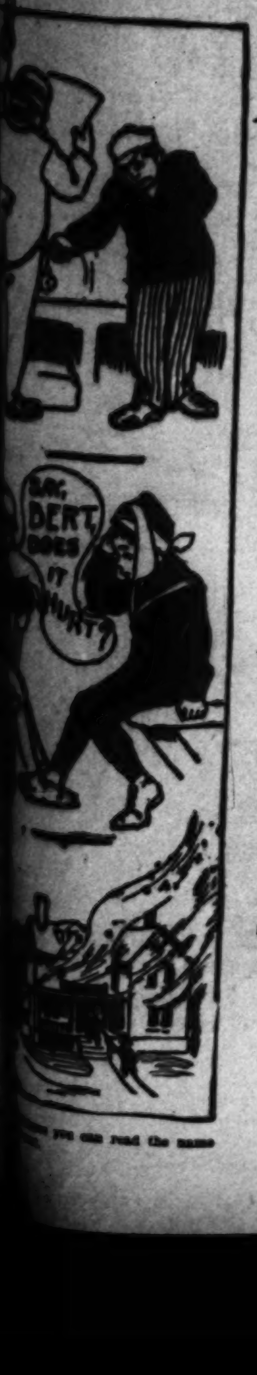
Such fun it is to open the packages! For there are enough gifts in the bag to give every brother or sister or cousin lots of hits.

If you are going to have a family party this Christmas, why don't you children determine to get up a grab bag for yourselves. Keep it as a surprise even from father—mother will doubtless have to help collect the gifts. Begin right now to gather together little things to put in—such as penny toys, little china dolls, tin horns, a clear toy wrapped in a big bundle, Christmas cards, dolls' hats, whistles, little books, etc. You can make it a rule not to pay more than 10 cents for any one present.

Not only will you boys and girls enjoy preparing the bag, but you'll find it makes the jolliest possible way to spend Christmas evening.

Puzzles and Problems

Who Is He?



Curtailment.

Curtail a flowing mantle worn by Senators of Rome,
Which to-day is also vestment of a priest,
And you'll have a wandering body that in space does make its home,
And revolves around the sun from West to East.
If this wanderer in its orbit you should carefully curtail,
You will have a true and useful tool as well,
That a carpenter employs to smooth and polish without fail,
If his work is to be good enough to sell.
Now rob this workman's implement of just one-fifth—no more,
And you'll find what each one does from day to day
To arrange his future life, though one can't tell what's in store,
That may any moment make it "gang agley."

A Diagonal.

X • To perform.
• X • A nickname for Edward.
• • X • A food loved by Chinese.
• • • X • What Bo-Peep lost.
• • • • X • A novel by Marie Corelli.
• • • • • X • To undress.
• • • • • • X • A fruit that is pickled.
• • • • • • • X • A sauce for turkey.

Guess the following words, place them one below the other and the diagonal marked by crosses will spell a favorite season of the year with boys and girls.

Enigma.

I'm a safeguard 'gainst robbers;
I'm found in a gun;
I'm a clog on a team
When down hill it does run;
I'm a barrier to waters,
Raise or lower a boat;
I'm a mixup of horns
When a goat fights with goat;
I keep prisoners in jail;
I'm a bolt, bar or key,
I'm a small tress of hair.
Now what can I be?

Funeral Procession

The Cliff

Where the Tortoise Was Seen

Asama-Yama

The funeral procession pictured here is one that Polly Evans witnessed in Japan. She journeyed to the volcano Asama-Yama. Last week she told about seeing a giant tortoise. Here is the scene. The cliff is one she visited.

Dear Boys and Girls:

WHEN we alighted from our train at the Shimbashi (the principal railway station of Tokyo), our friend clapped his hands to hail a red-capped boy.

The boy rushed up and relieved us of our hand luggage—seven pieces in all—carrying it to our kurumas, or jinrikishas—Japanese two-wheeled carts for passengers, drawn by men.

For this he charged two sen apiece. That means one American cent apiece, or seven cents altogether, and it is all the railway permits the boys to be paid. Remarkably cheap, wasn't it?

Our course from the station led us up the main street, the Ginza—Tokyo's shopping district. The first thing that attracted Jacky's notice was a great clattering sound.

"Why, the boys of Tokyo rattle bones just like the kids at home, don't they?" asked Jacky. Then, looking all around him, he exclaimed, "But I don't see any boys. What is it makes all that clattering noise?"

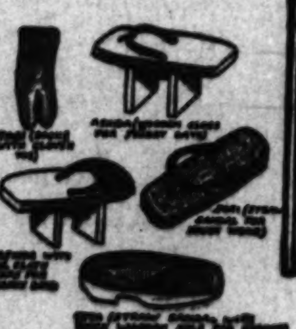
Our friend laughed.

"It is the ashida, or wooden clogs, that all the people have on their feet. Do you see?"

"Oh, I do see! My, what a noise they make! And they walk just as boys do on stilts, don't they?"

"Yes, the gait is very similar—rather stiff and rapid."

"Oh, I want a picture of that man with the cart!" exclaimed Jacky, seizing his Brownie and turning it on a coolie who was dragging a load of bamboo poles down the street.



Street scene in Tokyo

"Notice when a tramcar comes up, and take the car and the cart together, Jacky, the ancient and the modern side by side," suggested our friend. And so Jacky did.

Accidentally, also, he caught two Japanese dressed in totally different styles; one in the old-time native costume—kimono, outside cloak and geta (or straw sandals), the other—a policeman—in a very modern European costume, with the addition of cap, boots and sabre.

A little way off from the policeman stood a soldier in khaki, with fixed bayonet.

"Martial law, you see," said our friend. "Everywhere, all over the city just now, you will see policemen and imperial soldiers standing guard together."

"Why? Are the people so dangerous and bad?" asked Jacky.

"Oh, no; but when they read in the newspapers that in arranging peace terms with Russia their representatives in Portsmouth agreed not to demand an indemnity, after all, they were so disappointed and angry that many of the hot-headed ones got up a mob, burned policemen's boxes and street cars and attacked a number of church buildings. That naturally frightened the foreigners somewhat, and for that reason, among others, the government thought best to place the city under martial law for a time."

After luncheon at our friend's home, we were taken out to Uyeno Park, one of the most beautiful and popular parks of the city, where we saw hundreds of children having a good time.

Here and there were tall poles with long ropes hanging from them. To each rope hung a boy, his kimono carefully tucked around his legs so as to be out of the way, when at a given signal all the boys gave a hop, skip and jump, lifted their feet from the ground, and swung rapidly around and around the pole.

"Oh, I want to do it," said Jacky.

"All right. Go ahead," said our friend.

So Jacky went up to one of the poles, and pointed at one of the ropes, with a look on his face that plainly asked, "May I swing with you fellows?"

The boys understood. They smiled and bowed in a very friendly way, while several of them chattered away at him as if they thought he surely must understand.

"What are they saying?" asked Jacky, turning to our friend.

"They are saying, 'Will the honorable young gentleman honorably accept their ropes,'" explained our friend.

"And what shall I say?"

"Bow pleasantly to all of them, take one of the ropes and say, 'A-rig-ato,' which means thank you."

Which Jacky did; and such a good time as he had with the boys!

From here we passed on to where a group of little girls and boys were playing a sort of "Blind Man's Buff" game. Some of them had baby brothers or sisters strapped on their backs, but they seemed not to mind their burdens in the least, for they ran and skipped and did everything that the other children did, while the babies' heads bobbed this way and that, or hung helplessly back in the full glare of the sunlight as they blissfully slept.

Such dear little babies as they were! And how cunning their little legs looked spread out astraddle across their big sisters' hips!

On our way home from the park we stopped at a Japanese boot and shoe shop, and Jacky purchased one pair each of the four styles of Japanese footgear—a pair of zori, a pair of geta, a pair of ashida and a pair of waraji.

"Can I send them home for the boys and girls to see?" asked Jacky.

"It'll cost a good deal to do so," warned our friend.

"Make drawings of them and send with my letter," suggested Polly Evans; and that was what Jacky did.

The only style of shoe he did not sketch was the waraji, because it looks so much like the zori, only it is coarser and a little thicker, and is fastened to the foot by means of straw ties.

"And the queer stockings, or, rather, socks, that many of the people wear, let me make a picture of them," said Jacky. "What are they called?"

"Tabi," said our friend. "You see the idea in dividing the toe, do you not? Every shoe, you notice, has a piece in front. Well, all a person has to do is to catch it between his big toe and his other toes and it stays on."

"My, how jolly!" exclaimed Jacky. "I'd like to do that. It's such a nuisance to have to lace up my shoes when I'm in a hurry."

"You'll have a chance in a day or two, Jacky," said our friend, smilingly, "for when we go up to the mountains (as you will to-morrow) we shall plan a climb up Asama-Yama, and for that climb I shall provide you three or four pairs of waraji."

"Gee!" exclaimed Jacky, "am I going to wear out that many pairs in one day? Won't that be pretty expensive?"

"Oh, no; they only cost three or four sen a pair."

Jacky calculated for a minute.

"That's only six or eight American cents for three or four pairs, then! My, wouldn't my father be glad if I wore waraji all the time! He says it's awful the way I wear out shoe leather."

"But what is Asama-Yama?" asked Polly Evans.

"Asama-Yama," explained our friend, "is a real, live volcano. I understand you visited Haleakala in the Hawaiian Islands; it is only an old dead thing. But when you see the inside of Asama-Yama you will find something to look at, I assure you."

"When do we start for the mountains?" asked Jacky.

"To-morrow morning, on the 6 o'clock train."

More next week, boys and girls.

A Funny Mistake.

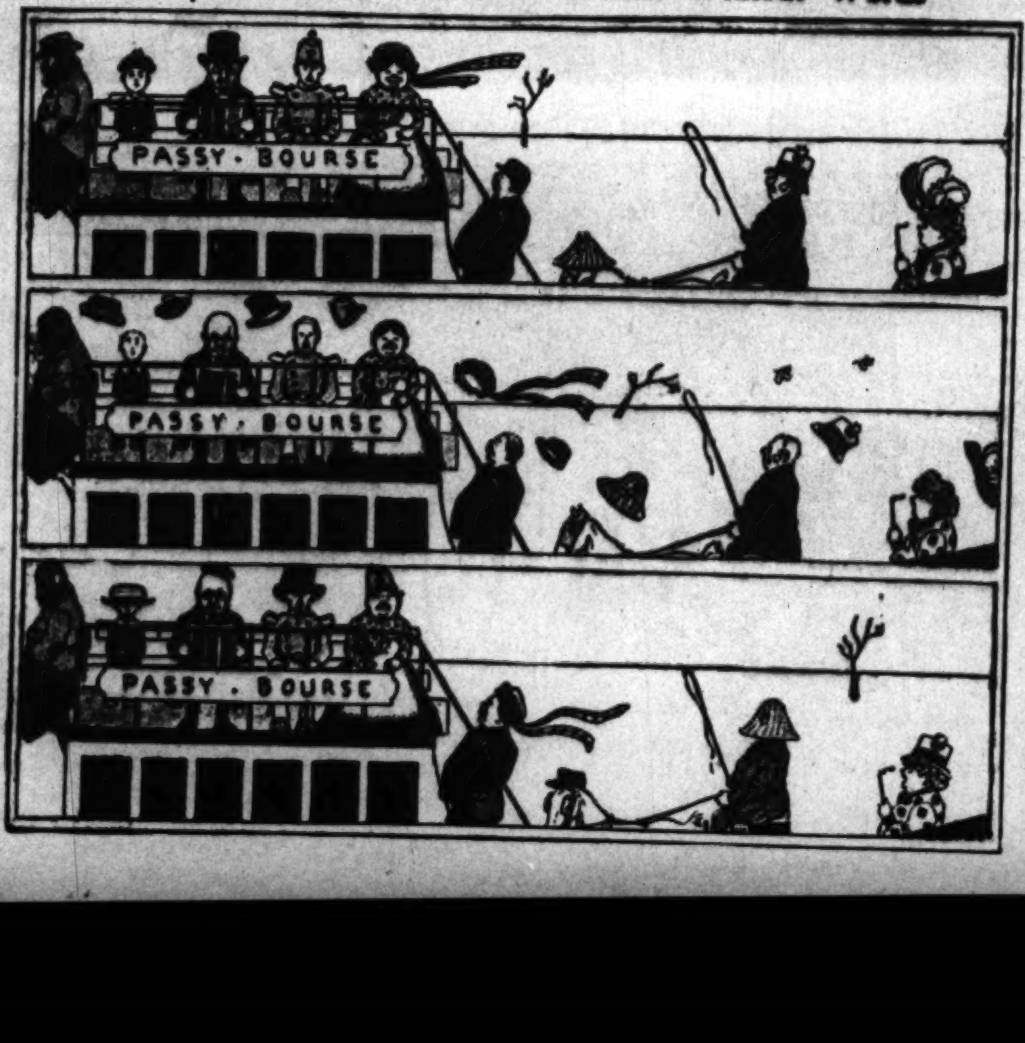
ONE afternoon small George, out in the cemetery with his mother, saw two maiden sisters sowing grass seed in their lot.

"Mamma, what are they doing?" asked George.

"They are sowing seed, dear," replied his mother.

"Why, mamma, where's their needle?"

When the Wind Blows — A Tale Without Words



LITTLE FRAULEIN GIRAFFE

HERE is a picture of a "baby giraffe," over which the young Berlinese have been much excited this summer. The German boys and girls are so fond of natural history that when they hear of a new animal being born at the Zoo they all flock there to see it, and then come back often to watch it grow.

You would hardly think that great, long-necked animal, to whose mouth the keeper must stretch up, was a baby, would you? But so it is.

It is a female giraffe, only a few months old, and were it not for its kind caretaker I am afraid it would not be alive to-day. Poor little thing, her mother neglects her terribly. She will not feed or sleep with her baby daughter, and so the keeper is bringing it up on a bottle to be a fine healthy young animal.

The baby giraffe took at first about a gallon of milk a day, but now it drinks more, and takes a little hay besides. When night comes, where do you think she sleeps? Why, with her kind keeper.

When little Fraulein Giraffe arrived it created much wonder, for baby giraffes are not often born in captivity. Perhaps it is because the mother is shut up in the Zoo that she is so indifferent to her child, for down in their native Africa giraffe mothers are very attentive to their children.

One might think Mrs. Giraffe would be very proud, indeed, of her daughter, who was a fine, large baby, weighing fifteen pounds and measuring almost six feet from the point of her nose to the beginning of her tail. It was a dear, gentle-looking little baby, with yellowish skin patched with brown, big brown, full, shining eyes and a very gentle expression.

By and by baby giraffe will grow to be eighteen feet high. Then, if it were back in its African forests, it would reach up its long neck and feed on the tender shoots and leaves of trees.

It is said to be very amusing to see a giraffe run. They are not very swift, and when they gallop they bring their hind legs at each step in advance of their front legs and a foot or two outside them. What a happy spring motion that would be! No wonder hunters and dogs can easily catch them!

But if the giraffe is not very swift, it is plucky, and when attacked it will kick its hoofs so rapidly and so hard that even lions are afraid of them.

Some people think young giraffes are very good to eat, but Polly Evans would rather not taste them to find out. How about you, boys and girls?

Down in Africa, too, they use the giraffe's skin for soles of shoes and sandals or to make water vessels, or even for roofs to their huts.

Little Fraulein Giraffe will come to no such end. The Germans are all very proud of her, and she will be brought up in ease and luxury.

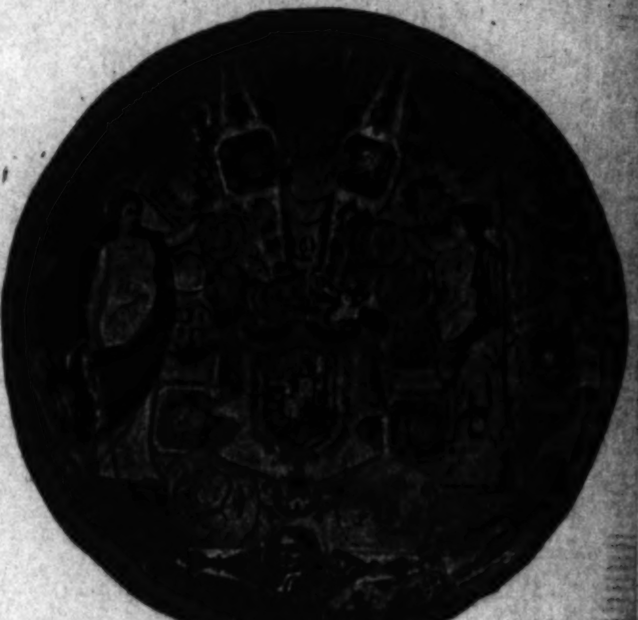
Christmas Gift to Make—An Ash Tray



Here is a picture of one of the ash trays which are so popular just now. They are not hard to make, and are really very pretty when tastefully cut out and pasted together. One advantage is that boys, who are neat and careful, can make them just as well as girls, and every father or big brother would be delighted to receive one next Christmas, I'm sure.

The plates, which are really plain glass saucers, can be bought in any size at a department store for about 10 or 15 cents, including the red felt for the background. That is the only cost, for every boy and girl can beg old cigar bands from smokers.

These bands, as you know, are usually covered with gilt figures and little pictures, which can be cut out and pasted with white photographer's paste on the bottom of the saucer. When the saucer is entirely covered and perfectly dry paste the felt neatly on the saucer back of the cigar bands so that it just reaches the edge.

The cigar bands shining through the glass look as if painted on it. Be careful not to use large bands and figures, and fit all the little pieces as closely together as possible.

A Cat With a Wonderful Pedigree

NOT long ago they gave a great cat exposition in Hamburg, Germany.

Don't you think it must have been a funny sight? Polly Evans does. Even more amusing than a baby show, which is odd enough when ever so many of the babies begin to cry at once.

Imagine if several hundred cats took a notion to mi-au-w at the same time. Wouldn't it be a terrible noise? I am sure the people at the exposition would have run away in terror.

Well, at this German cat show there were big cats and little cats and wee, tiny kittens; gray cats, yellow cats, black cats and cats all snowy white; cats with long, bushy tails and several Manx kittens with no tails at all.

Of course, every cat's mistress or master was very anxious for it to take a prize, so they wrote all about its parents and grandparents as far back as it was known. This is called a cat's pedigree.

Now, there was a very proud cat, indeed, at this exposition, one that belonged to a very ancient cat family—probably there is no other kitten in the world that can claim to be quite so aristocratic. This cat was Dodo, a magnificent white Angora, with long, fluffy tail, smooth, silken fur, thick, full whiskers and a very intelligent face.

Dodo won a prize not only for her own beauty and clever tricks, but because of her wonderful pedigree. Her owners could trace pussy's family back to 1794 in an unbroken line. One hundred and eleven years! Just think of that! They could tell all about her father and mother, and grandfather and grandmother, way back to the great-great-great-greats!

Very few boys and girls can do as well, I am sure. Perhaps, some of you are interested in genealogy—which means a study of one's pedigree—and love to look up your ancestors. It is a very interesting study if you once begin it. However, most boys and girls are like Dodo, they do not care anything about such things.

But if those ancestors could have seen Dodo they would have been proud of her, no doubt. She was such a fine, big, beautiful cat.

JOE'S CHRISTMAS GIFTS

CHRISTMAS nearly here,
And—oh dear! oh dear!
I'm not one bit ready!
What'll I ever do?
'Sides, I've spent each penny
On gumdrops and tulu,
That my papa gave me
To buy presents, too.
Guess I'll write to Santa,
When my stocking he does fill,
To bring some things for mamma,
And papa, Bert and Jill;
And print right big upon them,
So they'll be sure to know,
These things are not from Santa Claus—
They're Christmas gifts from Joe!

CHOOSING THE RIGHT

ONE evening, when little Howard's mother was suffering with rheumatism, she said to him:

"Howard, dear, run up stairs in a hurry and get mother the slipper for her right foot."

The boy ran upstairs quickly, but did not come down for many minutes.

At last he called over the stairs:

"Mother, which slipper do you want?"

"The right one, Howard, and bring it at once."

There was another wait, and then the little fellow called:

"Mother, which way are you sitting?"

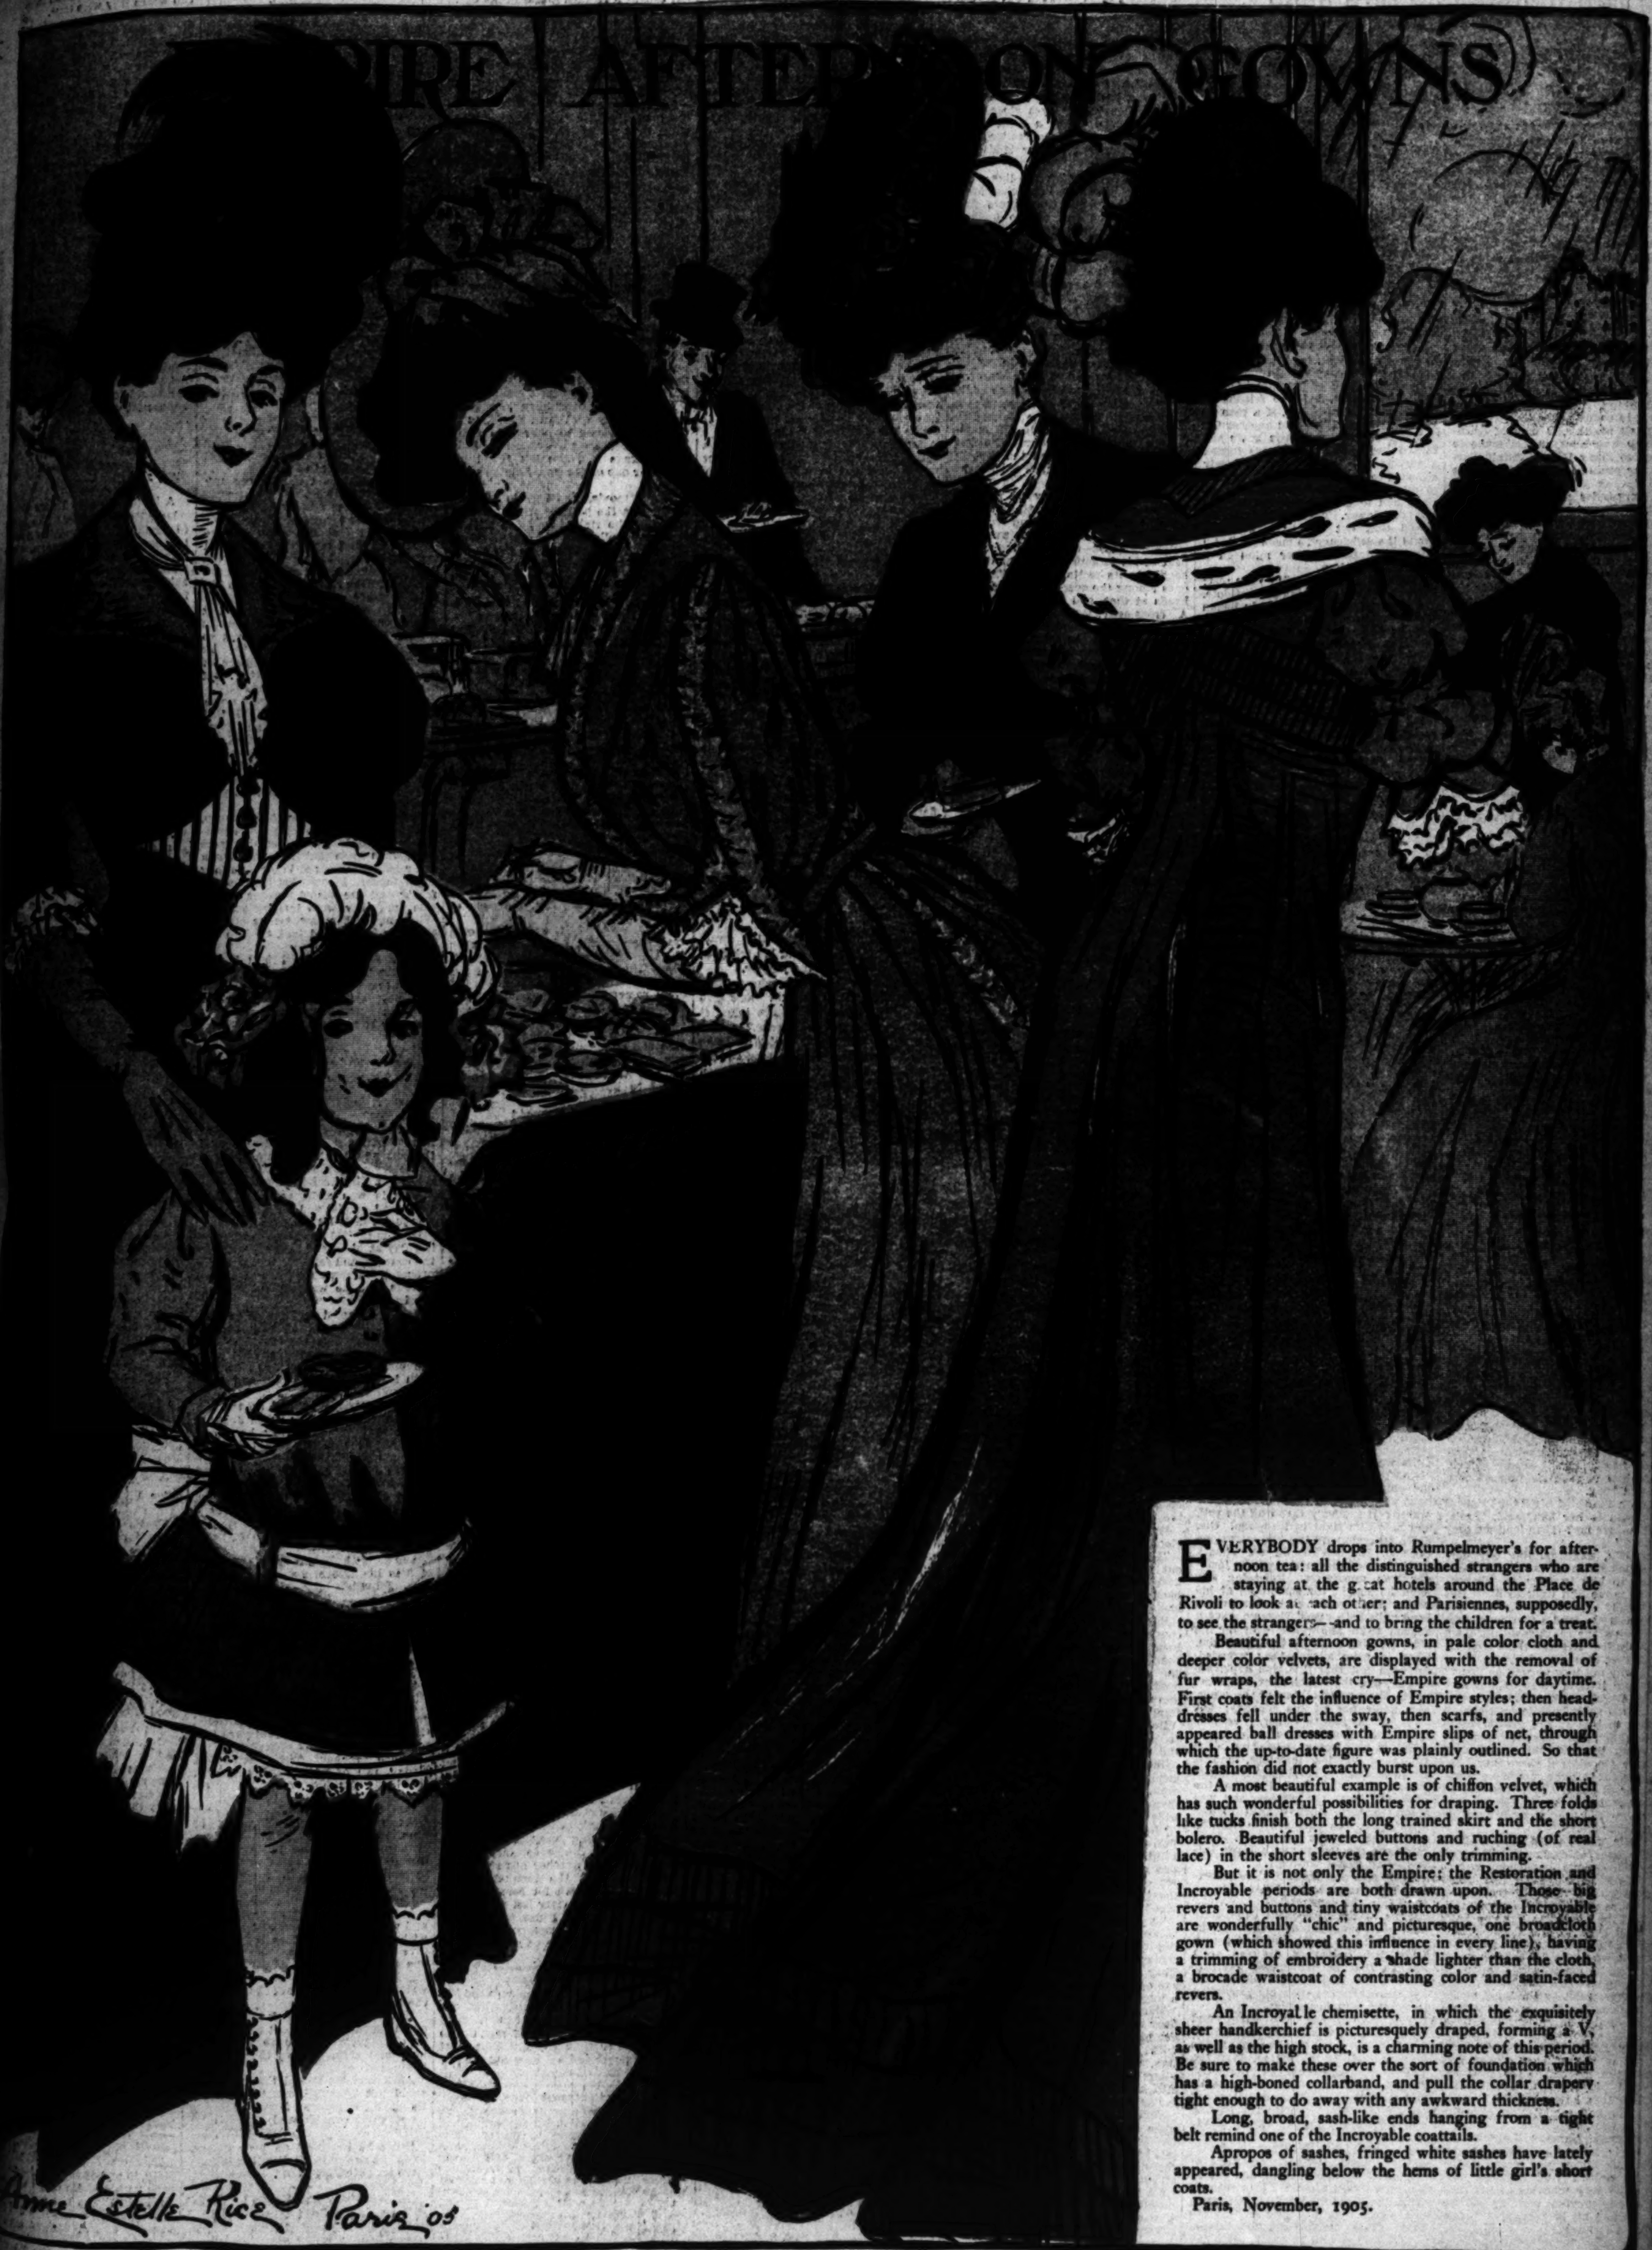
EMPIRE AFTERNOON GOWNS



EVERYBODY drops into Rumpelmeyer's for afternoon tea: all the distinguished strangers who are staying at the great hotels around the Place de Rivoli to look at each other; and Parisiennes, supposedly, to see the strangers—and to bring the children for a treat.

Beautiful afternoon gowns, in pale color cloth and deeper color velvets, are displayed with the removal of fur wraps, the latest cry—Empire gowns for daytime. First coats felt the influence of Empire styles; then headdresses fell under the sway, then scarfs, and presently appeared ball dresses with Empire slips of net, through which the up-to-date figure was plainly outlined. So that the fashion did not exactly burst upon us.

A most beautiful example is of chiffon velvet, which has such wonderful possibilities for draping. Three folds like tucks finish both the long trained skirt and the short bolero. Beautiful jeweled buttons and ruching (of real lace) in the short sleeves are the only trimming.

But it is not only the Empire; the Restoration and Incroyable periods are both drawn upon. Those big revers and buttons and tiny waistcoats of the Incroyable are wonderfully "chic" and picturesque, one broadcloth gown (which showed this influence in every line), having a trimming of embroidery a shade lighter than the cloth, a brocade waistcoat of contrasting color and satin-faced revers.

An Incroyable chemisette, in which the exquisitely sheer handkerchief is picturesquely draped, forming a V, as well as the high stock, is a charming note of this period. Be sure to make these over the sort of foundation which has a high-boned collarband, and pull the collar drapery tight enough to do away with any awkward thickness.

Long, broad, sash-like ends hanging from a tight belt remind one of the Incroyable coattails.

Apropos of sashes, fringed white sashes have lately appeared, dangling below the hems of little girl's short coats.

THE VERDICT OF THE GODS.

By Sarath Kumar Ghosh.

Ten days after, a haggard and ema- iated form, with hands and feet cut pen in a hundred wounds, a mad- an's haunted look in his sunken yes, and raving, delirious words upon is lips, was brought back by the uards to the palace.

"The manik, O King!"

With these words Narayan Lal de- vered up his trust, and fell down in swoon at his master's feet.

. . . .

"Of a truth, high was the destiny this man," the Great King mur- ured. "Verily, such perils could be nt to him alone for whom much ward was in store." He mused while, thinking of the perils of his n youth on the field of battle; and us thinking, gathered hope for the ys yet to come.

"But tell me this, O man of learn- g: Why was Narayan Lal made to dergo so many trials? Surely Par- eshwar could give his verdict once all?"

The story-teller marveled at so great wisdom.

"True, O Heaven-born; but it is as y for Parameshwar to manifest his ll six times in succession as once— sixty times six time. In an ordeal pendent upon divine judgment, we rtals may make any stipulation we oose. If Parameshwar accepts the ms, he will fulfil them in their irety. So, if five times Narayan l escaped, but at the sixth suc- mbed, then indeed would the verdict the Diety have been against him m the beginning. The race is at the sh, not at the start."

But tell me, what was the design Parameshwar in sending the earth- ake?"

To aid him; and yet to try him. thquakes and landsl.ps are not un- wn in the lower altitudes of the nalayas. And perchance the heavy fall, and then the mechanical ce that caused the fall of the ax, ht have set into action the initial ement. Would it not be e to test if verily Narayan Lal ht escape death by divine aid be- e of his innocence? For it was in- Narayan Lal's fate that he should r peril upon peril, and a thousand en perils.

"Thus in his next trial," continued story-teller, "but for an unknown d he had died a cruel death. True, as his fate to have that friend; rtheless he had cause to thank the for so great a love."

the night before a strange scene n enacted in the palace court- Going with her silver pitcher to ner fountain, Leila saw the self-same mendicant that once before had begged alms from the palace guards.

A vague presentiment seized her heart. She called the mendicant to the fountain and gave him of her bounty. The old man, stooping down to give her his blessing, whispered into her ear:

"Within the King's packets lies death. The alchemist who made them up is a friend, but must needs obey the royal command. Thus all night must I seek the antidote; but at my return it may be too late! Say, hast thou a lover amongst the guards?"

"But he may be impotent!" she murmured softly. "His very duty may keep him away——"

"Then the lover of a friend of thine whose duty might take him to the trial? Answer quickly!"

A vague light crept into Leila's mind. She must find two friends in the palace: Harnam Das, if a man of position were needed; and another for humbler duties. In frantic haste she racked her brain. There was indeed a serving-maid of the palace, deeply attached to the Princess and betrothed to one of the attendants; their marriage had long been deferred for the want of a dower. Then Leila inwardly vowed that out of her own dower would the deficiency be made good. All this passed through her mind in a flash of inspiration.

"Enough! The guru will do the rest; I but obey him in seeking the antidote. Yet the trial may have already begun when I return; thus prepare thy friend's lover for his task." Saying this, the mendicant vanished in the dark.

Inside, in a corridor, the Jemadar of the Palace, the thug in disguise, was waiting for Leila, seeking to waylay her. Since his friends had perished in the ravine in Narayan Lal's fourth trial, he knew that he must carry out his evil deeds within the palace. Before the end of the trials Narayan Lal must die; else his own life would be forfeited; the secret spies of his master would see to that. Thus if Narayan Lal were not killed in the trials, if instead he triumphed over them all, then must he slay the youth in the very moment of triumph, or perish himself; for afterwards it would be too late.

Thus his first endeavor was that the youth should die in the trials; that would spare him his own peril. And somehow the false jemadar seemed to realize that he must silence Leila for ever to gain that end. He awaited her coming in the corridor, his hand upon the dagger in his girdle. If she shrieked, he would silence her then and there. But if possible, he would carry her away noiselessly, as once before he had nearly done—fulfill his other nameless purpose upon her, then slay her and cast her body into the ravine beyond the palace wall. . . .

Suddenly Leila paused. At the beginning of the dark corridor she dreaded there was a short side passage leading into an alcove. Here behind a curtain she paused to take breath. Young as she was, the hidden perils of the palace had taught her wisdom—and stratagems.

Awhile after a maiden's veiled form, with a pitcher balanced upon her head, seemed to be dimly visible at the beginning of the side passage, nearest the corridor. It seemed to hesitate a moment, before plunging into the corridor.

A stealthy sound was heard—less a muffled footstep than a hard breathing. Nearer and nearer came the sound—from pillar to pillar. With a sudden swoop the jemadar fell upon his prey—flung his arms around the veiled form. Down came the pitcher with a crash and lay broken in a thousand fragments; for it was an earthern pitcher. That instant another form whisked past him, holding a silver pitcher in her hands, not upon her head. With a muttered curse the jemadar turned to her. But already Leila was far down the corridor.

And the veiled form, that had borne the empty earthern pitcher upon its head and whom the jemadar had embraced? It suddenly threw off the veil, and held him tight in its grasp! One fierce struggle, and the two were upon the floor, Harnam Das on top. Then a quick turn of the wrist, and the jemadar was uppermost. Releasing one hand he sought for something at his girdle. But clutching his antagonist's head with both arms, Harnam gave a sudden twist and rolled over on his side, bringing down his foe before him. Thus in grim silence they wrestled, for each felt that this was a private matter, and the world must not know of it. Each saw nothing of the other, and knew not of his identity; but each felt instinctively that, if so permitted, the fight must be to the death.

But it was not so permitted. The sound of hurried footsteps, and a crowd of eunuchs burst from the inner palace. Even as Leila had reached the door, set down the pitcher, and was about to turn single-handed to her lover's aid, the eunuchs heard the scuffle through the open door. They ran down the corridor with drawn tulwars—but found nothing!

With common instinct the combatants had parted, and had fled different ways into the darkness! . . .

Thus in the subsequent commotion and talk among the attendants of the palace on this night before Narayan Lal's fifth ordeal, it did not seem strange that an affrighted serving-maid of the palace should confer with her betrothed and seek his protection in going about her duties.

The day of the trial came, and Narayan Lal was taken before his master. The scene was once more the audience-hall of the palace. Narayan Lal was taken there in his bare clothes—white trousers, white tunic, and white turban. The councilors sat once more before the throne, leaving a space for the juggler twelve cubits in diameter.

At a sign from the King an attendant approacheu with a long piece of leather three fingers thick, and cut off with his sword a portion that reached from his waist to his feet. He came and placed it on the floor midway between Narayan Lal and the throne, and on a line with them. There it lay inert and motionless—a piece of leather. All wondered why it lay there.

"Roll up thy sleeves," bade the King.

Without a word Narayan Lal obeyed and stood with arms bared to the elbow.

"That is thy subject," said the King, pointing to the rigid black line. "Breathe life into it before my eyes, so that it may live and move."

Narayan Lal seemed lost for awhile in deep thought, his eyes closed, his lips half open. Then a faint smile broke upon them as he realized the nature of the task he was bidden to perform.

He knelt down before the line, resting upon his heels, and stretched forth his right hand till the fingers just closed over the end of the leather. Gently he began to wriggle it upon the floor, the undulating motion passing along the leather from end to end. His left arm was bent round over his back in the manner of a fencer. Perhaps he did that to indicate that the left hand would be no confederate of the right.

Gradually he accelerated the motion, working with his wrist alone. The curves began to increase in width, and the further end to come nearer.

Soon the vibration became so rapid that the coils seemed to telescope into one another. Suddenly he thrust forward the whole arm, while still maintaining the lateral motion. The free end shot out and licked the foot of the dais—then was drawn back as rapidly.

Faster and faster grew the pace. It became a haze of sweeping curves. Once he raised the left hand from his back, and rapidly circled it over the wriggling mass—then seeming to repent of his forgetfulness, drew it back hastily to its resting place. The wise ones among the spectators shook their heads at that, and smiled knowingly. A cross-eyed sage plucked at his neighbor's sleeve and silently pointed to the head of the mass. The other dropped his spectacles upon his nose and peered over them curiously.

"The end is in the air," he muttered, gravely readjusting his glasses.

The end of the coil was no longer upon the floor; it was a span above it. Perhaps the rapidity of the motion had given it some species of centrifugal force.

The gray-haired councilors around heard the words, and, casting gravity to the winds, craned their necks like excited schoolboys.

"A thick wire at the end of the leather, to give it that support," exclaimed one in a moment of inspiration. "It must have been caught up from the floor."

"Too thick for a wire," objected another; "it is even thicker than the leather."

"That is only a deception of the eye," maintained the sage, when someone on the other side of the dais gave a loud gasp.

"It is expanding! It is as broad as a child's hand."

"A woman's rather," corrected another.

"A man's!" cried out a heavy old warrior, clutching at his huge whiskers that lay twisted over his ears.

Truly, the end of the leather was like a man's hand, the fingers bent slightly inwards; it was just visible over the haze. That instant the middle finger seemed to lengthen out, a full inch beyond the others.

"And it is a wire at the end of it," murmured the man of wisdom. "Only it seems very thin now."

His neighbor protested that there was no wire. Then hastily he admitted there was—not one, but two. A moment later he denied there was any. Then, again, he ate his words, and confessed there was.

Two tiny wires seemed to emerge from the tip of that middle finger. They quivered the tenth of a second in the air, then were withdrawn. Again they darted out, and as quickly vanished. Like miniature forked lightning they vibrated to and fro.

Suddenly Narayan Lal leaped to his feet, lifting the mass of curves still wriggling in the air, flicked it violently, then dashed it to the floor—a supple line of black flesh, thick as a man's hand at the other end.

Slowly the head begin to rise, higher and higher, slowly the tail began to coil inwards, round and round. The black wires began to dart anew, in and out. Two shining points of light burst forth on the broad head behind the wires.

It was a living serpent. Awhile it stood erect, seeking a prey.

"Maro! Maro! (Kill! Kill!)" broke out a babel of voices. The huddled heap of undignified councilors fell back towards the walls in sudden haste.

But with a swift stride Narayan Lal caught up the serpent in his right hand by the tail. In an instant the head curled round with an angry hiss. An arm's length from his hand it oscillated just once back to take sure aim upon it, then launched out for the fatal blow.

But quicker than lightning Narayan Lal's left hand closed over the right—slid along the serpent's body, tightening the fingers as it went—and gripped the baffled creature by the neck. He pressed the thumb upon the throat, forcing the serpent to open wide its mouth.

"Behold the poison fangs, O King!" Two pairs of white ivory gleamed within, one on either side. Each fang was no bigger than a grain of rice; yet one single scratch from it upon the jugglers arm would have turned him into a blackened corpse.

"A sword and a flute!" he gasped between his pursed lips, his wrist shaking violently from the desperate struggles of the serpent to escape. They were brought after a seeming age and placed by his side—the sword, a long narrow blade.

Narayan Lal bent down over the floor and thrust the serpents tail under his right foot. He seized the flute with his right hand that was now free, and began a weird chant upon it—stretching forth his left hand that still held the serpent by the neck, as far as it could reach.

Suddenly, with a furious climax upon the flute, he sprang back from the floor, releasing that instant his left hand from the serpent's neck. Ere the dazed creature could resolve to strike, he stepped back four cubits from it and began a soft soothing melody—like distant music across still waters.

For awhile the serpent hesitated. Anger and joy battled in its glistening eyes. It raised its head, poised it a moment in the air, arched its back, recoiled to take aim—then relapsed into a suppliant column, bowing humbly to the music.

The music changed. Narayan Lal glided into a lullaby, low and gentle. In response the serpent waved its head from side to side in graceful motion. Softer and softer came the music, and gentler and gentler bowed the serpent's head. The music seemed to die away in a muffled echo, and the serpent held its length erect in the air as if lulled to sleep in that upright attitude.

Again the tune was changed. It was now the quick-pulsing beat and broad rhythm of "Tasa bi tasa," the most famous melody of the land. In a moment the delighted creature awoke from its dream, puffed out its head to the utmost, and swayed its entire length in harmony. But yet the time grew faster. The oscillating coil swept out in pride and pleasure and joy, the tail beating upon the floor in unison.

The music burst forth into a rhapsody, wild, fierce, interwoven with passion and pain. Narayan Lal strode across the arena, stamping at each furious blast. The serpent leaped to the strains in frantic motion, hissed and struck out at imaginary foes, circled round the juggler, and followed him about like a trailing shadow. Thus did Narayan Lal beguile it, and work it up to the frenzy of madness.

Suddenly the flute rang out in a shrill screech; a series of discordant notes burst out in a loud crescendo, then stopped dead short.

The serpent winced and writhed in pain, as if struck by a whip. With an angry hiss it launched forth from the unfolding coil, straight at Narayan Lal.

But an instant quicker he had seized the sword with his right hand, the left still clutching the flute. While yet the approaching line was a yard from his breast the glittering blade passed clean through it. The head sprang from the blow; Narayan Lal raised the flute before him; the severed head of the serpent fell upon the bulb of the flute, the open jaws closing upon it in that dying grip.

The body relapsed upon the floor, quivered and writhed, and marked its passage along it with a broad red band—then lay still. Narayan Lal stepped to the dias, lifted up the flute, and pointed to the crimson drops issuing from the severed head.

"Behold, O Heaven-born, this living flesh!"

"Shabash, Narayan! Shabash!" a cheer passed from lip to lip, swelling to a wild shout in the courtyard beyond. But even in that moment of exultation the voice of the King hushed them all.

CHAPTER X.

THE POISONED CUP.

Ere the applause had died away, and in the very midst of his triumph, the King turned to the juggler.

"Thou hast given life where there was no life; that was well. Now give life to thyself—after I have taken it from thee for an hour's space."

Narayan Lal caught his breath as he heard these words. He marked the signal that brought forth two men from a doorway beside the throne. What danger threatened him he knew not; the nature if this trial was beyond his anticipation.

He marked the two men well; his instinct led him to gather quickly whatever clue he could. The first was middle-aged; he was unknown to him. The other, a young man, he recognized as one of the attendants of the palace. They bore trays in their hands, that of the first containing three silver goblets, that of the other two pieces of conch shell, and two little packages of cloth. They knelt before the King, who broke with his own hands the seal upon each package. The seal was that of his signet-ring.

Two of the goblets were empty; the third, double the size of the others, was full of water.: Setting the tray down, the first attendant retired. Narayan Lal instinctively noted that the second attendant, the young man, lagged somewhat behind. He laid down the tray, and opened one of the packages—a piece of cloth a quarter of a handkerchief in size. It contained a white powder.

"Diamond-dust," spoke the King from the trone. "One shellful of it will be mixed with water. That thou must drink."

But diamond-dust was a deadly poison. One shellful would kill three big men.

The attendant opened the other package. It contained a dark brown powder.

"Datura," said the King calmly. "One shellful of it will be mixed with water. That thou must drink likewise."

And likewise datura was a deadly poison. One shellful would kill three strong horses. In either case Narayan Lal would die an agonizing death. He realized that without the royal word. He saw darkness before him. There was no escape this time.

Yet from his infancy had he been trained to struggle to the bitter end. And if he refused the feat, he would forthwith be adjudged guilty. That, surely, was certain death.

The King noted his hesitation. He smiled grimly, and waved his hand. A curtain was flung aside at the further end of the hall, revealing the outer courtyard. A huge elephant, a fine tusker, eight cubits (twelve feet) high came into view. Guided by the mahout, it paused before a block of wood a cubit high.

For the elephant was the high executioner of the kingdom. The criminal, found guilty of high treason, would be made to kneel before the block, and place his head upon it. The elephant would lay its foot upon the head, and press with its whole weight upon it. The next instant the traitor's head would be flat with the wood.

"Choose between the elephant and the poisons," bade the King, in a level voice; for to him Narayan Lal still seemed to be a traitor.

In calm acquiescence the youth bowed his head; he would choose the poisons; if need be, would die fighting to the last in silent protestation of his innocence. If he failed—well, he could die but once. And the Princess? Surely merciful Parameshwar would grant her a happy release simultaneously with his own. For he remembered that she had at her bosom a true and unerring friend that would release her from all pain.

These thoughts passed through his mind while yet the attendant was measuring out the poisons. Suddenly, in the very deed, the menial raised the shell before him as if to see that it were brimful. That instant Narayan Lal caught a strange gleam in his eye. It was just a momentary glance, but full of a hidden fire. A mute appeal, passionate, fearful.

As he lowered the shell into a goblet, the glance traveled down from Narayan's face and lingered the fraction of a second at the edge of the tray.

Peeping from beneath it Narayan observed the fringe of a cloth, no wider than a wisp of straw; that alone was visible. In a flash of inspiration he realized. It was a third package. The attendant had held it in his fingers under cover of the tray.

A thousand emotions rending his heart, the juggler tortured his mind to guess what this could mean. Some unknown friend had sent it to him; instinct and the memory of his love told him that. But how it could save him, he knew not yet. For a moment he thought that perchance he could substitute its contents for the poisons. But with a sinking heart he saw the attendant fill each goblet of poison with water. To dispose of them secretly now was impossible; he had no means of concealing two goblets of fluid. One hope remained; the package itself might suggest a method.

As the attendant withdrew, Narayan seized the tray with both hands, as if to draw it closer to him. The right hand covered the edge where the hidden package lay; the left found its grip near one of the empty cloths upon it.

Whilst moving the tray to his feet he drew in the package with the little finger of the right hand, and slipped it to the hollow of the palm. With the left hand he picked up the empty cloth and transferred it to the right—as if intending to wipe the goblets with it.

The right hand now held two similar pieces of cloth; one empty, the other that from an unknown friend. But the spectators knew only of the former.

With the litle finger, curved beneath, he felt that the package was loose. It contained something soft; perhaps another powder. To transfer the contents from one cloth to the other—whilst ostensibly smoothing down the creases of the latter—was not a difficult task to him.

Hiding the cloth now containing the powder in the hollow of the hand, he proceeded to wipe a goblet with the other. The world thought it was the same one as before. The world was wrong.

With a catch in his breath he manipulated this cloth, his hungry eye searching for some hidden clue. First one corner, then another he used to wipe the sides, the rim, the stem of the goblet.

"This first." His swimming eyes read these words faintly traced upon it. He felt the earth reel beneath him. The writing was that of his guru.

He remembered the guru's skill in poisons and antidotes. And like a flash of lightning the remembrance came to him that the young attendant, who had secretly given him the package, was betrothed to a handmaid of the palace; that the handmaid was devoted to her mistress, the Princess Devala.

Mrs. French-Sheldon.

Mrs. French-Sheldon, who started recently on a short expedition to the west coast of Africa, is an American explorer who also enjoys the distinction of being one of the few women Fellows of the Royal Geographical Society of Great Britain.

Mrs. Sheldon has journeyed extensively in Africa and has written a book on the Congo, which is soon to be published. Her interest in travel and exploration is the outcome of enforced inactivity when a child, delicate health debarring her from many of the pleasures and pastimes of childhood. She resolved, if ever she got well, that she would travel and seek out unknown countries.

Her father, the late Col. Joseph French, was a great mathematician and her mother was one of the first women to obtain a doctor's degree in this country. Her parents' home was frequented by men and women distinguished for learning and culture and her early education was acquired chiefly in Italy. Mrs. Sheldon is exceedingly fond of music and at one time thought of making it her profession. But she could not keep up her music in her wanderings and in consequence has let it drop.

Mrs. Sheldon's interest in humanity is intense, and the objects of her journeys are almost entirely ethnological, the women of the countries in which she travels, calling forth her special attention. She has great sympathy with her sex as a whole, and in return wins sympathy and confidence.—[Chicago Tribune.

Washing Blankets.

A housewife whose blankets always retain their softness without shrinking gives the secret. Make the suds in a tub with any good white soap, having the water hot. Dissolve in it a tablespoonful of borax. Run threads around soiled spots on the blanket so that they may be found after they are wet. Rinse the blankets up and down vigorously, rubbing only the marked spots. Never rub soap directly on them. Prepare another hot suds with borax and put the blankets in it. Rinse up and down for several minutes, then rinse in clear hot water softened with borax. Rinse in as many hot waters as necessary, then run blankets through a wringer.—[The Housekeeper.

What She Means.

When a married woman says she has all the rights she wants, what she realy means is that she has a good husband. In America most men are so much better than the law that most women never find out how bad the law is.—[Woman's Journal.

New Landscape Forming.

An entirely new landscape is in course of formation by the activity of the Vavau volcano in Samoa. The crater is seven miles inland, and mountains of lava form and slowly travel for great distances. A visitor says, "Fancy a traveling mountain range four or five miles long, a quarter of a mile wide at several points, and in many places 200 feet high, and you get some idea of the magnitude of the forces at work. There are probably five or six if not more of these shifting chains of mountains being carried on the bosom of the molten lava sea."

Lost in the Snow.

I live in a country where it is very cold, and it snows a great deal, I have three miles to walk to school.

One morning, as I was on my way there, a storm came up and it snowed very hard. When I had gone half way I could not see three feet ahead of me. I was afraid I should never see my dear father and mother again, and I thought of my kind teacher at the little schoolhouse, and of the warm fire she would have there. It made me feel very lonesome.

I kept walking and walking and it seemed as if it took a long time to walk a little way. At last I got so tired that I stopped, and peering through the snow, I saw a piece of fence sticking up out of a drift. I went over and sat down on it to rest.

After a few minutes I heard a noise, it was something like this: "B-a-a! b-a-a!" I looked round me, and there in the cold snow I saw a little lamb with beautiful white wool. It was cold, too, and I stooped down and picked up the dear little creature, and held it close in my arms, and we kept each other warm.

Soon the storm began to clear up, and I saw in the distance a sleigh coming up the road. I waited until it came near, when I saw that there was a man and a lady all wrapped in furs. As they came nearer, I saw that it was my father and the school teacher by his side, and they were looking for me. When my father saw me he stopped the gray horses and took us into the sleigh.

When we got home I told how I found the lamb, and how we kept each other warm.

I think he is very grateful for the kindness shown him, and we have grown to be very fond of each other.

A very prettily told story, Faustina. Let us hear from you again.

A Sad Thanksgiving.

Dear Editor Good Cheer Corner: I am a little boy ten years old, and have never written to you before, but I thought you might be interested in this story of how my cousin Johnnie spent last Thanksgiving Day.

Johnnie was eight years old, and very fond of pie, and I am afraid he was just a little bit greedy.

He was invited to spend Thanksgiving Day at his grandmother's home in the country, and felt very happy at the prospect, for grandmother's pies were famous, and he was sure of a good-sized piece.

The day seemed very far off to him, but it finally came, and Johnnie took an early train into the country.

His anticipations were fully realized; grandmother's sideboard was covered with large golden pumpkin and spicy mince pies.

Soon they were all seated around the table, and grandfather asked Johnnie which part of the turkey he would have, but Johnnie said he did not wish any, and all of the good things were in turn refused as grandfather passed them to him, so that he would have plenty of room left for the pies.

"Johnnie must be ill,' said grandfather, "he has no apetite."

"I think he had better go to bed," said grandmother.

And so, with the taste of bitter medicine in his mouth, not grandmother's pies, Johnnie's day of thanks was spent.

Well, I guess I will say good-bye now. Yours truly,

MERLIN BLY.

Poor Johnnie! He overreached himself that time, didn't he?

Prince.

Dear Editor: I have written because I am sure you and all the "Good Cheerites" will be much interested in my little white spitz dog, Prince.

Prince is about four months old, strong, full of tricks, and altogether too lively for his own good, sometimes.

One day some friends and myself went to West Lake Park to spend the afternoon. We took Prince with us. Walking through the boathouse, we descended the steep steps to the platform, intending to go for a row. Prince did not follow us, but stood upstairs taking his first look of a sheet of water. We all called, he became excited, and rushing forward, cleared the steps with a bound, and took a head-first dive into the lake. A moment after, one of my friends pulled a very much humiliated, dripping dog from the water, amid the shouts of the people in the boathouse.

Wet as he was, we took pity on him and allowed him to go out rowing with us, although we had all we could do to keep him from chasing the ducks in the water.

After that we vowed that if Prince could not behave himself henceforth he should remain at home.

Yours sincerely,
GLADYS LEWIS.

Don't be too hard on poor Prince. Dogs are so full of vitality that it must have an outlet somehow.

Betsy and Rufus.

Dear Editor Good Cheer Corner: I read the stories of this little corner every Sunday and enjoy them. So I thought I would try my luck.

Gentle zephers blow around
Plumed birds fly o'er
Everything seems gay and Everybody, young and Fills the air with joyous
Laughter better heard

'Tis a fine day for Thanks
For Thanksgiving Day is
And our hearts are filled with
And are free from every
We shout and play and
We wish every day, yes,

[illegible] HAT OF VELVET.

[illegible] and ribbon are seemingly the chosen materials for millinery. While there are also many ostrich and other feather ornaments being used, it is almost the exception to see a hat which has neither velvet or ribbon in its make-up. Hats of the picturesque type, as well as those in the more practical everyday styles, show a free use of ribbons. The velvet-covered shape is practically the leading idea in winter millinery modes. Where the felt shape is used it has either brim facing or covering or a crown trimming of velvet. Milliners cling closely to this idea of velvet and of ribbon. Their customers like them, and their best results come from the use of these two materials. Fancy ribbons are a new note in millinery. The chene printed taffetas of very soft lustrous weaves are being used in millinery as well as the solid colors. An attractive hat with medium high crown and broad brim, raised with a high bandeau at the left side, is velvet covered, and has a simple trimming of soft wide ribbon on the bandeau and the under brim. About the crown is a wreath of roses and foliage, the roses repeating the color tone of the ribbon.

BEADED OPERA BAGS.

Beaded opera bags in Empire design and conventional devices made to harmonize with the gowns of the wearers are seen in all the New York theaters this season, and in the corridors and lobbies where the women promenade between acts those who are carrying silk or even lingerie ones made this year are dubbed "old fashioned."

The beaded bags are decidedly simple, and are made on the same lines as a good-sized purse, with metal frame of filigree work that corresponds with the patterns done in beads. The most attractive of these has gold beads worked on a white background. The pattern is a fleur de lis surrounded by squares of beads, with a looped fringe around the edge. This same design in silver beads is effective. The framework and chains correspond in color and pattern.

Other beads have blue backgrounds, with red, green or brown flowers, such as roses, lilies-of-the-valley, forget-me-nots, done in shades that will match the robes of the wearers. Some have metal framework in gilt, imitation gold, silver, dull antique silver, or even gun metal to correspond with the beads. The exact shape of the bag is determined both by the style of the gown and the height of the woman as well as the size of the glass to be carried.

If the gown is full of frills and elaborately trimmed a perfectly plain opera bag, about eight inches long and four or five wide, with a prettily cut clasp and framework, would show to better advantage than one that is round and pulled together with a drawstring, or on wire pieces, or with silk-covered eyelets. A broad, squat style tucked up at the corners would look all right if carried by a woman wearing a plain dress. So much attention need not be given to the size of the glasses used if the bags are not finished with a stiff foundation, for they will fit in any place provided it is large enough.

All of these bead bags are simply made and lined with moire silk, usually white. Th sell at from $2 up.

Despite the popularity of these, many women prefer silk ones, because they can more nearly match their gowns, or are made from the same material, if desirable. They are less expensive, and a bag may be had for each dress. In silk they are made in fancy design , some look like puffs, while ot are large and fashioned on the same lines as medium-sized shopping bags. The latter are fitted with metal frames, prettily carved, that work on hinges, so that when open they form a complete square large enough to receive field glasses and a fan, besides powder puffs, handkerchiefs and any toilet article the wearer cares to put in. These are special favorites with many women.

Cues for the Cook.

Individual china bakers are attractive and convenient to use for the cooking and serving of puddings. They may be used for baked puddings by setting them in a pan of hot water. And they can be just as successfully put into the steamer. Custard in proportion of one egg to one cupful of milk and one tablespoon of sugar, is steamed without overcooking more easily than by baking. The dishes should not be filled quite full to leave room for whipped cream on top.

Whipped chocolate is delicious and easily prepared. Make the chocolate entirely of milk, boiling it thoroughly and put in the egg beater while it is over the fire, churning steadily until it is a yeasty froth. It will hold the foam for a long time and when served part of the whipped cream should be stirred down in it.

A remnant of apple dumpling or apple pudding with crust may be warmed over into a fresh pudding similar to a Brown Betty. Break up all crust and apple lightly and finely with a silver fork. Butter a dish and put the pudding in in nice shape. If you find there is not enough apple in proportion to the crust mix a little apple sauce or fresh, finely chopped apple with it. Drop in some bits of butter, cover the whole with a pretty thick layer of white sugar, and set in the oven to heat and brown.

To boil a pudding in a tin boiler, butter the tin well and fill it only two-thirds full with any mixture that swells or rises. Fit on the cover tightly without removing it again until the pudding is done. Have just enough water in the large kettle to boil around it, without reaching too near the top as to boil over the tin. If it is inclined to rise up in the water put on a slight weight. Keep the outer kettle covered, so that the steam may surround the pudding boiler with the same effect that the surrounding water would have.—[Chicago Tribune.

What Gibbons Says.

HEAD OF CATHOLIC CHURCH IN AMERICA OPPOSED TO RACE SUICIDE.

BY KATE SCOTT BROOKS.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

"Race suicide is the curse of this country."

Cardinal Gibbon's face was grave as he spoke the words, and in his voice was the earnestness of deep conviction. It was plainly a subject to which he had given long and careful thought.

"It is shocking to me," he continued, "to see the women of today unblushingly acknowledge their approval of this awful thing. It is murder, the terrible murder of children by their mothers. There could be no more grievous crime. All violations of the laws of nature are violations of the laws of God, and violation of God's laws must ultimately be punished. There is no race suicide in Catholic countries."

"Does it exist among Catholic women in America?"

"Only where those women have associated with other women who believe in it," the Cardinal answered. "Women of the Roman Catholic faith are taught the wickedness of the practice, and whenever they admit in the confessional that they have been guilty of this crime, they are denied the sacraments of the church and warned against repetition of the wrong. It is such a terrible crime."

The home of Cardinal Gibbons, in Charles street, next to the Cathedral of Baltimore is big and broad and free and sunny, with an atmosphere of culture and a charming simplicity. There is an absence of that mystery and coldness which frequently are felt by strangers in the homes of priests. There is a wide, old-fashioned hall through the middle of the house, at the end of which there is a door leading to the cathedral.

It was through this door that His Eminence came, just as I arrived. He was returning from the morning service and presented a picture that might well have stepped out from the canvas of some old master. He had no advance guard of altar boys or acolytes carrying candles; he was entirely unattended, but wore the gorgeous and beautiful robes of his exalted office. On his head was the familiar red cap, set a little back from his forehead, showing his noble brow.

He walked quickly and with vigor in his step and there was warmth and hospitality in his greeting.

"Do you believe in the higher education of women, so much talked of and so strenuously pursued in this generation, your Eminence?" I asked.

His answer came promptly: "Overdone, Madam, very much overdone. I believe in the education and cultivation of women, but too much education of the head is apt to cool the heart. The cultivation of the soul is too often neglected in the pursuit of the so-called 'higher education' of women. The head, the heart and the body should all be educated together, then they grow and develop equally."

"What do you think of the many societies and club organizations which attract women so largely just now?"

"A society like the Daughters of the American Revolution I heartily approve of, for it tends to foster patriotism and keep it alive. But other clubs of all kinds for women I strongly disapprove of. They tend to lure a woman from her home. Woman is the queen of her empire and that empire is her home. If she is frequently absent, as she must be to attend the duties or pleasures of her clubs, the atmosphere of her home grows cold. Her husband grows apart from her and she from him. Her children are weaned away from her and they grow up without intimate acquaintance on either side. Public sentiment does not permit our President to absent himself from the country, for this is his domain. We need him here. It is just so with woman and her home. It needs her almost constant presence, and she needs it."

"My favorite book? Why, the Bible, madam, the Holy Scriptures."

"And your favorite author?"

"You mean secular?"

I nodded.

"Oh, said he, "I have so many. Sir Walter Scott, I am very fond of and Shakespeare, and Charles Dickens—No, I don't care for the modern writers. Their books, for the most part, are written for commercial rather than literary value. They do not take time in the labor of writing. The presses are waiting, the advertisements are all out, publishers are clamoring for the manuscript, and, I dare say, hungry readers are waiting. They are hastily written, hastily read, and hastily forgotten. Of course, there may be exceptions, but this is generally speaking."

"What is your favorite recreation, your Eminence?" I asked.

From the manner in which his face lighted up I knew I had hit upon a favorite theme.

"Walking," he declared with enthusiasm. "I walk every day from five to six miles, always in the suburbs. I always walk at least three miles, and this in all kinds of weather. I visit with many of my friends during those walks. I just take them along with me. There is no exercise so good for people as walking. I always feel sorry when I see the women and girls come out here to the corner and step aboard the street car. If they only knew how much beter off they would be to walk they would save that carfare.

"The women of England and Ireland prove this. They all are good walkers. They prefer it, and their health and complexions are so benefited by it. They all have red cheeks, from a glow of health. Always remember, madam, the fresh air is the best medicine you can take, and walking is the best exercise. Few women exercise enough to be good for them, and men, too, many of them, take too little. I feel that I owe my good health and long life to the fresh air I have had and the regular walking I have done."

I promised to benefit my health and complexion by that suggestion and put the resolution into effect by walking back to the station.

I found that in Baltimore everybody knows Cardinal Gibbons and that everybdy admires and loves him. There are no church lines in this. Even the street gamins can tell you where "de Cardinal" lives, and they speak as though he were the city's proudest possession.

And what of the personality of this American prince of the Roman church? Tall and slender, though now bowed by the weight of years, with the most polished, even courtly, manner, and frank, kindly eyes, his face is positively saintly and reflects the purity of his mind.

He has passed his three score years and ten, but in his heart there is the spirit of eternal youth and his mental vigor is as of a man in the prime of life. A great and kindly man, he impresses you, whose love is truly Catholic, embracing all mankind.

THE MARRIAGEABLE AGE.

It Varies Greatly in the Different Countries—Lowest in Tropical Latitudes.

[Pearson's Weekly:] In Austria a "man" and a "woman" are considered to be capable of conducting a home of their own from the ages of fourteen—a fact which accounts in no small degree for the spirit of "child fatherhood of the man" so prevalent in Austria.

In Germany the man must be eighteen years of age; but the age of the bride-elect is left to popular discretion.

In France the man must be eighteen and the woman fifteen, while in Belgium the same standard prevails.

In Spain the intending husband must have passed his fourteenth year, and the woman her twelfth. These figures, in connection with the admitted poverty of Spain, socially considered, are full of the deepest meaning.

In Hungary, for Roman Catholics, the man must be fourteen years old, and the woman twelve; for Protestants the man must be eighteen, and the woman fifteen. This speaks well for Protestant common-sense in this particular matter.

In Greece the man must have seen at least fourteen summers and the woman twelve.

In Portugal a boy of fourteen is considered marriageable, and a woman of twelve.

In Russia and Saxony they are a little more sensible, for in both countries a youth must refrain from matrimony till he can count eighteen years, and the woman till she can count sixteen.

In Switzerland the men, from the age of fourteen, and the women from the age of twelve, are allowed to marry.

In Turkey any youth and maiden who can walk properly, and can understand the necessary religious services, are allowed to be united for life.

To go further afield, mere children of ten, nine, and even eight years of age are, by Indian custom, often married. This applies to the girl only, although native boys of from twelve to fourteen become husbands, and the nominal heads of households.

In Chi , too, the custom is nearly as senseless, boys and girls who ought rather to be on the school bench, or playing battledore and shuttlecock, set up their family gods and start upon their own.

It is curious to note that the "marriageable age" standard increases in cold or temperate latitudes, and that the lowest point is touched in tropic latitudes, lack of civilization also having much to do with it.

CHRISTMAS CANDIES.

How to Prepare the Ingredients for the Christmas Sweetmeat Roundelay.

[The Housekeeper:] A box of homemade candies is a welcome gift much appreciated at Christmas. There is an art in preparing such a box for one's friends and the end gained is worth the trouble.

Candy boxes of any desired size can be purchased at a box factory, or boxes covered with the art crepe paper, sold at so reasonable prices nowadays, make attractive receptacles. A bolt of crimson baby ribbon, a few sprigs of holly and several sheets of white tissue paper will enable a dainty package to be sent from one's home.

In packing the candies it is wise to cut paraffin paper and stiff bristol boards to fit the boxes in layers. A sheet of paper, then the layer of board will keep the softer candies, such as chocolate creams, from crushing.

Uncooked candies are never palatable, and no amount of flavoring will mask the raw taste. On this account take the trouble to prepare fondant, which is the basis of all fine cream candies. It is not at all difficult to make if the instructions are correctly carried out.

A week before Christmas prepare the fondant, which can be placed in a jar; cover with a damp cloth and keep in a cool place until two days before Christmas, when it should be made up into the various confections. This time will allow the chocolate, used in dipping, to become firm.

The chocolate used in the following formulas is unsweetened, unless otherwise stated. The molasses is Porto Rico or New Orleans. A variety of flavorings can be purchased at the druggists by the ounce.

Colorings for tinting can also be purchased at the druggists, and always state that they are to be used to color food to insure getting the vegetable coloring.

Red will produce any shade of pink, rose or scarlet according to the amount used. Violet will produce any shade from pale lavender to deep blue; pistachio or spinach will give green; egg yolk can be used for the yellows and a few drops of strong coffee will give a mode shade and chocolate will give the browns.

The following table may be a guide in flavorings: White—vanilla or almond; pink—strawberry, raspberry, rose; green—pistachio or almond; pale yellow—lemon; deep yellow, orange; mode—maple or coffee; brown—vanilla.

WORTH KNOWING.

FURS CLEANED AT HOME WITH SAND AND SAWDUST LOOK LIKE NEW.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

If women realized that hot sand and sawdust rubbed into dark furs and then beaten out with light rattan sticks would clean and make them look like new, and that ermine, and other white ones treated similarly with plaster of paris and corn starch would be freshened and softened, every one would be wearing practically new coats, boas and collarettes.

Most furs are aired out of doors for a day or two after being removed from the boxes in which they were stored all summer, and occasionally they are pounded gently with a light-weight stick, or whisked vigorously, to take out the dust that is on the surface, but the skin is not softened or the fur cleaned or freshened.

Cleansing white pieces is really difficult and entails much labor, but if properly done the results are so satisfactory that the trouble is quickly forgotten. Ermine and white fox, etc., should be aired for a day or longer in the sunshine on a clear windy day as they are taken out for use. In this way the odor of camphor or moth balls that clings to them for weeks is removed, and they are ready for cleansing. This will be easiest done by going into an empty room where it will make no difference if the plaster of paris and corn starch used to take out the dirt settle on the walls, etc. First rub the plaster of paris into the fur, working it carefully in with the fingers and putting it on in generous handfuls. When thoroughly covered apply the small thin rattan sticks with quick, light movements, and beat out the dust and dirt that the powder should have absorbed. Then the corn starch is put on in exactly the same way, and when it has all been pounded out, the fur should not only be clean, but soft, crisp and white as snow.

Sealskin, mink, sable, etc., are cleaned by the same process, only hot sand and sawdust are used instead of plaster of paris and corn starch. After a good airing and whisking the sand, freed from small pebbles, is heated and rubbed into the fur; it softens the skin and makes the surface crisp and fresh. When removed by rattan sticks the sawdust is worked in, to absorb the dirt and grease brought out to the surface of the skin by the sand. This in turn is knocked out by quick, vigorous strokes with two light rattan sticks. If seal is rough or a part of it looks as if it had been rubbed the wrong way, and this cleansing fails to improve it, or if the gloss so much admired is gone and the skin looks dull, it should be placed on a figure and carefully combed with a fine steel fur comb specially made for such use, and then brushed all over with soft wet bristles, always in the direction of the grain of the skin. When thoroughly wet and smooth it should be put in a cold, dry room to dry. After two or three days the sealskin should have a fine gloss, but it should not be worn until beaten because the fur will have a stiff look after the wetting.

Dark furs lined with white ones should be treated by both methods, and the best plan will be to first cleanse the mink, or seal, for the ermine or white lining might be soiled by the sand, and the plaster of paris or corn starch will not harm the darker skins.

If lined with light silk or satin, naptha or gasoline should be first applied to clean it, so if any got on the fur it would be taken out with either sawdust or plaster of paris.

Less expensive furs, such as coon, skunk, Australian 'opossum and Persian lamb should be well dusted and cleaned by beating and then carefully combed with a furrier's comb.

AN ANSWER TO GROVER.

The Views of a Famous Prima Donna Concerning Woman's Sphere.

[Brooklyn Eagle:] "God knows more about it than Grover Cleveland."

This is the way the great soprano Emma Eames concisely let down Grover Cleveland.

Not long ago several articles appeared in a prominent magazine over the signature of the former President. In these he took the stand that the place for woman is in the home, and that she is transgressing her true functions when she goes into public life.

Naturally, this touches Emma Eames on a tender spot, for she has made of her life one of the greatest public successes that come to modern women.

"No, I did not vote for President Cleveland, and I don't think I ever would if he talks like that," said Madame Eames. "The older I grow the more tolerant I become of the individuality and the tendencies and beliefs of others. I believe in every one, man or woman, working out his or her own salvation; that is to say, making the most of himself or herself. What I have done, I know, has been by the hardest kind of work; I am painfully aware of that, and I believe in others doing the best their natures and their fates will permit."

"Then you are a fatalist, madam?"

"Yes, to a certain extent; I think it is not only what we make of life that counts, but what life makes of us; there is no use of discounting inheritance and environments.'

"But what about woman's sphere, so-called?"

"Her sphere is in most cases in the making of the home and in rearing the finest children she can produce and educate. Far be it from me to say anything against the idea. More than that, this is the natural course of life for perhaps 80 per cent. of the women of the civilized world. I agree with Mr. Cleveland that it is their proper walk in life."

"But how about the other 20 per cent.?"

"That's just it," answered the prima donna, in her vivacious and convincing manner. "What of the other large portion? God knows better about it than Grover Cleveland. God placed in the minds and hearts of those women other aspirations; He surrounded them with other environments; He seems to have set them aside for other things.

"Shall they, then, crush out their individuality and sit around in corners waiting for some man to throw a handkerchief at their feet? Shall they put all their endeavors into finding a husband, when, perhaps, they are not suited to marital life or homely cares, and thus add to the thousands of unhappy homes that unfortunately exist?

"No, I believe in a woman following the promptings of her own inclinations, not rushing into public life at the first oportunity, not leaving the happy home life unless driven to do so by circumstances or by talents that will not be crushed into the background.

"The women who go before the public have a mission to perform besides making a living or gaining popular applause. For myself, I follow my profession to give people pleasure. It has been the highest aim of my life to put into my mind and heart and voice that which will give the highest enjoyment of my art.

"Gounod once said to me, 'Don't ever tell a lie with your voice,' and I don't think I ever have. I have tried to keep my life and my music undefiled and present to the public the best art I am capable of.

"But coming back to the status of women, you know, I was raised in Maine, and I was surrounded by and imbibed the strait-laced New England way of looking at things. I suppose I had some of the Puritan intolerance—it was to be expected; but my views have gradually broadened, until I have the widest tolerance for the individuality and rights of others. Because most women find the true expression of the physical and emotional life of a woman is in the home and the child; yet there is also the intellectual side to consider. A woman may be strongly intellectual and weakly emotional.. Is her sphere the maried life? No, I am inclined to think Mr. Cleveland knows more about politics than about women, although he has an adorable example in his own home.

"I have come to the point of reaping the reward of my labors, if you will allow me to speak for myself. I have just begun to enjoy life because I don't ask too much of it. My whole soul is in my art and the enjoyment I can give others through my expression of it."

Training Boys.

Regarding the management of boys, I would like to add the widow's mite to the store. I have had the rearing and management of one boy, an only child, and not a spoiled one either. When my boy was still in kilts, four years of age, I started him on what I consider the right path—to Sunday-school, where he still continues to go at the age of seventeen. I impressed upon him from childhood to be respectful to all, but especially to his teachers and elderly people. Many a teacher's part I took that I never saw or heard of.

I always paid particular attention to his home studies, seeing that they were properly done. I purchased the best of toys and books for him that I could possibly afford, and always allowed his companions access to our home, as our surroundings did not permit him to play on the street (which is a ruination to so many boys.) I shared in his pleasures as best I could. I allowed him all the privileges I thought best for him, exacting from him the promise that he would be home when requested, whether from school, pleasure or business.

Many times I have been termed hard-hearted, too exacting, etc., but I am willing to stand for all that, as I have been fully paid up to the present time by having a good boy. Perhaps some of you will say or think that I had nothing else to do but look after him, but such is not the case. I have made sacrifices, left work undone, to do for him, to educate him, to be with him and near him. Character, in my estimation, is superior to wealth and fame, and that is what I have tried unceasingly to establish in my boy. All the rest will take care of itself if that foundation is laid. For untruths I administered good spankings; for all other offenses other ways of punishment, such as going to bed early or being deprived of some pleasure. Of course, I can speak only of the bringing up of one boy, but today I am one of the happiest mothers in the United States. I look forward to the future of my boy, who is at present a student in one of the high schools and who has chosen his own life work, who, I trust, will stand for and represent all that is clean, good and true in the cause of humanity.—[M. BIRD STORIES.

"My cousin had a gander," said the man, "that all of a sudden developed a desire to set. He was found setting on some round stones, then on an old tin kettle, then on an old shirt of my cousin's. So, to satisfy him they gave him six goose eggs, and, by Jove, he hatched them beautifully. But, alas, he miscalculated his goslings' strength, and walked them to death."

"I have a parrot," said an elderly woman, "that learned last year to light matches. She takes a match in her bill and strikes it—she doesn't rub it—against a hard surface. Sometimes the match breaks, but usually it lights. Then the bird drops it at once. Matches must be kept out of her way. Put a boxfull before her, and she won't stop till all have been set off."

"Sparrows are intelligent," said a bird photographer. "One day, beneath my window, a sparrow attempted to take a white feather from a swallow's nest. The swallow attacked the thief; there was a fight, and the sparrow flew away, beaten. But in an hour or so a great twittering arose. I looked up, and amid the soft, deep, drumming note of a hundred little wings beating the air, I saw a host of sparrows coming. They fell on the poor swallow, killed her, and tore her nest to pieces."—[Unidentified.

Profit-sharing in Vancouver.

The United States Consul at Victoria, B. C., reports a scheme of profit-sharing, conducted by the British company operating the street railways and lighting plants in that section, which is working well. After paying 4 per cent. on the stock, the balance of net earings is divided into three parts, two of which go to the stockholders and one to employés of more than a year's standing in equal amounts to each—a track greaser receiving as much as goes to the general manager of the company in London. In 1903, the first year of trial, a sum equaling $25 per employé was divided; the next year $35, and for this year the division, which has just been made, amounts to $40.

Styles for the Hair.

THE IMPORTED FASHION OF WEARING HAIR ORNAMENTS.

Americans have held out as long as possible against the imported fashion of hair ornaments of all kinds for evening wear. But now you see women going to the theater even in the street cars with long party coats and with some little fancy affair in the hair to take the place of a hat. Without adopting the extreme of elaborate effects which are worn on the other side there is now a "finish" to the hair worn almost generally in the evening while the black velvet bow is seen for every day wear.

Whenever there is a vogue of Olga Nethersole there is a vogue of wearing the hair on the forehead. It will be remembered that she introduced the coiffure that was first put in that position, and now fashionable hair again is being coiled at a point which is exaggeratedly far forward.

This has brought out a number of new combs and barettes which are really hairpins, as they are most of them mounted upon two prongs long enough to thrust well back into the firm part of the hair, but with the ornamental part tilted at an angle which will make it stand upright in the pompadour in spray fashion or curve across it in a narrow band of jewels or metal work. The empire comb, which reaches to five or six inches in height, is one of the revivals abroad which is not likely to take with the American who always has the good taste to avoid massive effect and to follow as nearly as possible the outlines of her head. Some women who possess these old combs have hit upon the idea of having them divided, thus making lovely jeweled side combs which fit perfectly with the hair.

The newest decoration for elaborate evening wear is a narrow feather which is pressed to an elongated shape and fastened almost crosswise over the pompadour, from where it starts at a little to one side in a jeweled button. Feather pompons and little bunches of tips, either with or without an upstanding aigrette, are brought well forward to help build the hair still further on the face.

An osprey fastened with a bunch of tulle also is set horizontally and diagonally in the same way as the prince of Wales tip. These are called comets on account of their sweeping lines. Sometimes they are made to rise out of a choux of flowers. A black comet looks lovely on blond or brown hair worn with a black evening gown, especially if there is a bit of gold trimming on the gown. Black violets are made up into wreaths for the use of those who wear half mourning or black and white. Flat wreaths and three cornered caps of beadwork with pendant beadwork fringe or crown effects are more becoming and better liked by many women, and where the hair is light or of too soft quality they can be adjusted far enough forward to help the high effect. The bows and flowers [illegible] single brilliant rose worn well front in the hair is a popular decoration. One woman was seen at the theater not long ago with leaves in her hair, and the effect was artistic in emphasizing the little touch of orange velvet in her cream and lace gown.

Orchids are particularly liked, and one of the prettiest is a pure gold orchid with a long graceful bud and some natural foliage. Roses of gold tissue are one of the favorite creations of the counter where these ornaments are made, and one pretty bunch of two or three gold roses was mounted in sprays of maiden hair fern. An odd looking imported ornament was made with two sweeping sword ferns starting from white tulle. It evidently was built on the comet lines of the osprey. Two peacock feathers with a ruche of coppery tulle shading to the hair of an auburn brown beauty were mounted with the same shade of copper and bronze shades which are around the outer edge of a peacock's feather.

The making of these ornaments always is delightful work, and the advantage in doing so is that they can carry out the idea of the gown and can be made to suit the hair. This idea is caried out both in shape and color, as the fancy of many brown haired women is to have tulle pompons in shade exactly matching the hair. These are mounted one above the other on two or three wires which are also wrapped in the tulle and which can be twisted to becomingness if needed.

Pale shades of colored velvet ribbon with either crystal or colored beads sewed all over them can be ornamented at home, and if one has not the knack of tying them themselves can be taken to the bowmaker to be tied and wired.—[Chicago Tribune.

State Forestry Prospects.

The California Water and Forest Society started out in a blaze of glory, the convention at which it was formed having been the result of extensive and expensive agitation continued over several weeks. It was largely attended by influential men from all parts of the State and much was expected from the society which then organized. It is fair to say that much has resulted, for, while the irrigation bill which it caused to be framed was done to death with very little discussion on its merits, the society did succeed in securing the appropriations which have enabled to coöperative work in irrigation experiments and forestry to be carried on for two years, and which will doubtless be continued until the data have been accumulated on which to base whatever new legislation may be required. The attention of the society during the past year has been largely devoted to the study of forestry conditions, which has been pursued by representatives of the United States Bureau of Forestry, at the joint expense of the State and Federal government. When this study is complete we shall be able to formulate plans for a permanent State forestry system, in regard to which it is to be hoped that there will be a general agreement.—[San Francisco Chronicle.

Suicide vs. Emigration.

The superior moral qualities of the Italian nation appear in the fact that there have been only about eight thousand suicides in Italy in the past four years, while in France more than three times as many have been recorded. When the peasant of Calabria or Apulia gets discouraged he doesn't shoot himself; he emigrates.—[Boston Transcript.

A Muezzin calling to the Faithful
St. S
Const

"THERE is but one Allah, and Mohammed is his prophet."

This call of the muezzin will soon ring out to the faithful Moslems of London from the stately minarets of one of the most beautiful structures in the world, located in the heart of that city.

Plans have been drawn for the erection in London of a Mohammedan mosque. It will cost $1,000,000, and be exceeded in magnificence of architecture and adornment only by the famous mosque of St. Sophia, in Constantinople.

Not only are there, at certain times of the year, about 2000 of the Islam faithful in the English metropolis, but Mohammedanism has recently been taken up as a kind of religious fad in Great Britain, and many converts to the faith of the Prophet have been announced. In Liverpool alone, not long since, over one hundred persons embraced Mohammedanism.

One of the warmest supporters of the plan to erect a splendid mosque in London is the Shah of Persia. An Egyptian pasha has promised $250,000 toward the building fund.

WHILE many hundred Moslems have their permanent home in London, and many others visit that city each year, it is not probable that a temple of such costliness would have been planned were it not for the tolerance, even admiration, for the Islam faith that has been manifested recently.

This is probably more or less of a fad, just as certain circles have taken up the mystic cults and religious teachings of the Far East during recent years.

While it lasts, however, the wily Mohammedan proposes to take advantage of the prominence of his religious belief. At any rate, his people hereafter will have an enduring and beautiful place of worship in the English capital.

Already there is one Moslem temple of prayer and praise in England—the Shan Jehan Mosque, at Woking, in Surrey.

This was built in 1877 and, except the rather poor provision made for Mohammedan services at St. Petersburg and Moscow, was the only one in Europe outside of Turkey.

Aristocratic and official circles have given Mohammedanism a position in England which seems to justify the ambitious plan of a million-dollar mosque.

This friendly feeling, it is said, is due to a better acquaintance with the higher-class followers of the Prophet.

Indian princes, with their retinues, and other distinguished subjects of King Edward have been visiting London with frequency of late.

Many of these have come in an official capacity, and have been received in official and social circles.

Including men of wealth and culture, these deputations have succeeded in changing the general opinion regarding Mohammedanism, which change has gone so far as to make an admiration of the faith somewhat fashionable.

Recent wholesale conversions in Liverpool, however, it is said, have not been due to any "society craze," but to the earnest missionary work of several local Moslems and their early converts.

Raising money for the new mosque was a task undertaken by the Pan-Islamic Society of London, whose founder and secretary, Abdullah al-Mamun Suhrawardy, has been particularly active on the work.

Not long since he visited the Shah of Persia at Vichy and laid before him the plans and designs. That monarch not only gave his approval, but promised substantial support, while the members of his suite at once subscribed over $5000 to aid the preliminary work.

These designs were prepared by Mr. Chambers, a well-known London architect, under commission of Mr. Suhrawardy. Another architect, whose business extends to Egypt and brings him in contact with many wealthy and prominent Mohammedans, has also prepared plans, and has promises of large subscriptions from several Pashas of the Land of the Nile.

Having been adopted by the Pan-Islamic Society, however, the Chambers plan is now official. It is also by far the more ambitious of the two. It is for the carrying out of this plan that the Egyptian Pasha has subscribed $250,000.

Mr. Chambers knows something about mosques, for he designed the charming little Islam building at Woking. During the visit of the Shahzada in 1895 he visited this structure during the great religious festival of Bairam, and was so delighted with it that he gave $2500 toward its maintenance.

This mosque at Woking was attended regularly by the Oriental servants of Queen Victoria; but owing to its distance from London, is not largely attended now.

If Mr. Chambers' design is carried out in its entirety—which is the present intention—the new mosque will be on a scale of magnificence only surpassed by that of St. Sophia.

There will be a grand entrance, called "The Gate of Islam." It will lead into an outer court yard, while on either side will be ablution and instruction rooms.

No unbeliever must ever enter the inner court, in the centre of which will be the mosque itself.

This inner court will have twelve sides, in the centre of each being a gate dedicated to one of the twelve Moslem countries of the world.

Each gate will be built in the style of the country represented, yet forming one continuous arcade.

Within this court will be the fountain and tank in which worshipers must bathe their feet before proceeding to the grand estrade leading into the interior of the mosque.

Striking ornamentation will be a feature of this Islam house of prayer. Green and white carrara marble will be used, and it will be given a semi-graze so that the London smoke will not affect it.

Green is the color of Islam, and the architects are making every effort to be guaranteed a supply of carrara having a peculiarly soft, blue-green tint.

From the roof corners will spring two gorgeous minarets, from which the muezzin will call the faithful to prayer. The cupola of each will be 250 feet from the ground, and will form strikingly prominent objects outlined against the prosaic London skyline of gables and chimneys.

It is estimated that the cost of the structure alone will be $500,000, while as much more will be expended upon the lavish scheme of decorations.

Gold mosaic will line the interior and costly Indian tiles will cover the floor, while the windows will be dreams of tinted loveliness.

All the drapings and hangings and the ornamentation of the holy places will be upon the most superb scale of Oriental extravagance.

While the designs have been accepted and a large part of the money subscribed, the site of the mosque has not been determined, although it will be one of two places upon which options have been secured.

WHO WILL GET BUSY FIRST?

JEROME AND RYAN ENTERED FOR A RACE TODAY.

District Attorney Will Get Ryan's Refusal to Answer Questions Before Grand Jury, Unless the Financier Purges Himself of Contempt. Hughes for Insurance President.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] District Attorney Jerome will tomorrow take up the matter of Thomas F. Ryan's refusal to answer the questions of the Insurance Investigation Committee relative to E. H. Harriman's efforts to participate in the purchase of the majority stock of the Equitable Life from James H. Hyde. It was said today that there probably will be a race between Mr. Ryan and Mr. Jerome to see which can take action first—Mr. Ryan to answer the questions or Jerome to get the matter before the grand jury.

There are only fourteen days left for the legislative committee to complete the taking of testimony, and it has been decided to eliminate from the inquiry all the insurance companies outside the State of New York, with the exception of the Prudential of Newark, N. J., which is so closely associated with the Equitable and which does a large industrial insurance business. Seven of the smaller companies doing business under the New York State laws will be ordered to have their principal officers ready for examination. Among these is the Provident Savings Life. Mr. Scott, its president, and several of its minor officers and employés have already been subpoenaed.

Regarding the rumor that Charles E. Hughes, chief counsel for the insurance companies, has been suggested as president of the Mutual, no member of the company's nominating committee would talk today. There will be a meeting of the nominating committee tomorrow, and it is not unlikely that after its adjournment a call will be issued for a meeting of the trustees to be held Tuesday or Wednesday to receive the committee report.

HIGH-PRICED VAG.

Brooklyn Cop Makes His First Arrest in Ten Years at a Cost of $14,000.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] It cost the city of New York $14,000 to arrest William Lindsey early yesterday morning, and when he was informed of the glory and distinction which had thus been so unexpectedly thrust upon him, he did not make the slightest protest when the magistrate sentenced him to six months in the King's county penitentiary on the charge of vagrancy. The novel position which Lindsey occupies is due to the sudden activity of Policeman Thomas J. Herbert, of the Liberty-avenue station, Brooklyn, who broke the record of ten years with no arrests. A commotion was caused at the stationhouse when Herbert brought in his prisoner, and it was realized that the policeman, after drawing $14,000 in ten years of his service, as salary, had finally done something to earn it.

After this the entire crew of twenty-one men were brought safely to shore in the breeches buoy.

NEW HAVEN (Ct.) Dec. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Yale men plan to drop gently Chauncey M. Depew from the university corporation or the board of trustees. Instead of compelling him to resign in the midst of his term of six years, he will be allowed to finish it next June. Although some of his friends say that he will insist on standing as a candidate for reëlection, it is now known that if he runs again he will be bitterly opposed. A definite movement has just been started to nominate Secretary William H. Taft for Depew's seat in the corporation. The movement came to life last night in Buffalo at the annual banquet of the Yale Alumni Association, which voted to indorse the candidacy of Secretary Taft. Other alumni associations will take similar action.

Make-up of New Government Officially Announced and Approved.

Liberals Enthusiastic Over the Selections Made by the New Premier.

John Burns Congratulated on Being in It—Charles Dilke Snubbed.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

LONDON, Dec. 10.—It is officially announced that the new British ministry is made up as follows:

Prime Minister and First Lord of the Treasury, Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman.

Chancellor of the Exchequer, Herbert Henry Asquith.

Secretary of State for Home Affairs, Herbert John Gladstone.

Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, Sir Edward Gray.

Secretary of State for the Colonies, the Earl of Elgin.

Secretary of State for War, Richard Burden Haldale.

Secretary of State for India, John Morley.

First Lord of the Admiralty, Baron Tweedmouth.

President of the Board of Trade, David Lloyd George.

President of the Local Government Board, John Burns.

Secretary of State for Scotland, John Sinclair.

President of the Board of Agriculture, Earl Carrington.

Postmaster-General, Sidney Charles Buxton.

Secretary for Ireland, James Bryce.

Lord President of the Council, the Earl of Crewe.

Lord of the Privy Seal, the Marquis of Ripon.

President of the Board of Education, Augustine Birrell.

Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, Sir Henry Bartley Fowler.

Lord High Chancellor, Sir Robert Threshie Reid.

The foregoing constitute the Cabinet. The following ministers are not in the Cabinet:

Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, Earl of Aberdeen.

Lord Chancellor of Ireland, Right Hon. Samuel Walker.

First Commissioner of Works and Public Buildings, Lewis Vernon Harcourt.

Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman drove to the palace at 6 o'clock this evening and had an audience with King Edward of about twenty minutes and at which His Majesty signified his approval of the new government.

COMMENTS OF THE PRESS.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

LONDON, Dec. 11.—The Conservative morning newspapers are compelled to admit that Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman has succeeded in forming a much stronger administration than had been thought possible. The Liberal papers are full of enthusiasm and of cordial congratulations to the Premier on having not only ably united all sections of his party in the ministry, but on having displayed great discrimination in giving its individual members congenial posts. They express the conviction that such a Cabinet will inspire confidence, both at home and abroad. The names of Herbert Henry Asquith, Sir Edward Grey and Richard Burdon Haldane alone, it is held, will give great weight to the ministry and insure that there will be no revival of Gladstonian home rule, despite the fact that the Cabinet contains a preponderance of those favorable to home rule.

The Conservative organs point out that the most enthusiastic home ruler, John Morley, has been sent to the India Office, where he will have little influence on internal politics.

The omission of Lord Rosebery is naturally the subject of much comment, and there is considerable curiosity as to what attitude he will adopt when he addresses the Liberal League today. It is noticeable that his son-in-law, the Earl of Crewe, is in the Cabinet. The composition of the Cabinet presents no surprising features. It is larger than was expected, the last Liberal Cabinet only numbering sixteen members. Six of the new secretaries, besides Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, have held Cabinet rank before, though most of them have held ministerial appointments, while three, David Lloyd George, Augustine Birrell and John Burns, have never before held office of any kind.

The rapid rise of John Burns from the workshop to the Cabinet, with a salary of $10,000 a year, is a unique feature, indicating the growing importance of the Radical party, and he is being congratulated on all sides on winning a well-deserved honor. He will be the first labor member of the House of Commons to have attained Cabinet rank.

Appointments to minor offices are expected to be announced within a few days.

The omission of Sir Charles Dilke from the ministry is much commented upon by the Daily Telegraph, which says in an editorial that it does not desire to reopen wounds that should have been healed years ago, but reminds the Liberals that they were glad to avail themselves of the services of Sir Charles, while they were out of office, inviting him to lead the debates on Foreign Office questions, etc.

"To have ostracized Sir Charles Dilke altogether," the Daily Telegraph adds, "would have been narrow-minded and bigoted, but to utilize his great services in the opposition, and shut the door of the Cabinet in his face, is at once cowardly and hypocritical."

There will not be a white man, woman or child in the drama, and the play now being completed by the young authors will deal exclusively with the lives of red men who roamed the West before explorers and discoverers set foot beyond the Rockies. Frohman is enthusiastic over the drama and will give it an elaborate production in one of the largest New York theaters. The play will be in three acts, with a prologue and epilogue. There will be twelve very strong roles and the company will number more than fifty. Frohman is now at work on his plans for its production.

Steel Trust to Remove its Headquarters from New York City to Pittsburgh.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PITTSBURGH, Dec. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] New York City contains too many temptations for bright young men, who attain the position of president of the United States Steel Corporation. This is the opinion of several high officials of the corporation. A movement is on foot to have the headquarters brought back to Pittsburgh. The reason given is that the general offices and the president could keep in closer touch with the affairs of the plants, the most important of which are in and around this city. The financial department of the corporation will remain in New York, to be near the financiers who control its destiny.

PITTSBURGH (Pa.) Dec. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] "It's a nest of hell," said Mrs. C. P. Wallace of Los Angeles today, speaking of the Zenana of India.

Mrs. Wallace is a small white-haired woman whose motherly aspect was strangely at variance with her words. She is president of the Indo-American Woman's Restoration League and has been giving parlor talks before Pittsburgh society women whom she has caused to stand aghast at the revelations she has brought to them.

"I want it thoroughly understood in the first place," said Mrs. Wallace today, "that neither I nor any person connected with this league is a missionary, or has any connection with missionary work, or is a converted Indian.

"It is a humanitarian work, appealing solely to the sentiment of mercy for the oppressed. It has for its object one thing, and one thing only—to secure a law in India to prohibit the marriage of any girl under sixteen years of age.

"To accomplish this purpose we must coöperate solely with orthodox Hindoos. No converted Hindoo can help us. The instant a Hindoo is converted he is outcasted, and you might as well be dead as outcasted in India. In 1901 Miss J. M. Holmes, of Los Angeles, and myself, started on a tour of the world, undertaken merely for pleasure. We visited various countries of Europe, China and Japan, and finally spent six months in India.

"Miss Holmes and I, although not church workers, were interested in humanitarian work, in prevention of cruelty to children, in philanthropy and education, so when we reached India we searched out this kind of work. We talked with the workers, we read their reports and government reports, and there was opened up before us an abyss of wretchedness of which the ghastliness cannot be told. There are certain progressive and enlightened men among the orthodox Hindoos who wish to introduce such a measure as we propose, and when we finally are ready to forward our bill with petitions for its passage, we will find orthodox natives of high standing to introduce and support it in the Indian Council."

THROUGH THE WILDERNESS.

[illegible] of God's dealing with Israel: "He led them through the wilderness." There was an [illegible] a shorter way to go from Egypt and es[illegible] to Canaan and be free, each man "dwelling [illegible] vine and fig tree," in a "land flowing with [illegible]." That was the end in view. The pur[illegible] incident or chain of incidents, was to [illegible] away from Egypt, a rich land, where [illegible] plenty, full and piping hot, but where [illegible] slavery and to bring them into that "Land [illegible] from which they had gone out 300 years be[illegible] number and beggared by a succession of bad [illegible] They were to return a mighty host, and laden [illegible] spoils of Egypt." They had prospered in the [illegible] by the Nile, although held as slaves. One [illegible] the earliest to go to Egypt, who had been sold [illegible] by his brethren, had been Prime Minister to [illegible] They had been repaid for their treachery in selling him into slavery by all being made [illegible] of the last of them had been adopted by an[illegible] daughter, when an infant, and had come [illegible] to all the "treasures of Egypt." That was [illegible] leader, who was taking them now, increased [illegible] back to the land "promised to their forefath[illegible]

[illegible] was a good land, and there people had [illegible] But they were slaves. That must not be any [illegible] They must be made free and they must dwell in [illegible] land. So "He led them through the wilder[illegible]

[illegible] through the wilderness?" What a strange [illegible] "The wilderness" was a broad, shadeless, [illegible] stretch of desert, without water, without fer[illegible] sustenance. It was full of venomous ser[illegible] the pitiless sun beat down on the burning sand [illegible] like Tophet itself. There was a short cut [illegible] and it lay along the sea, where winds were [illegible] the air was balmy, where trees shed their shadows, protected from the noonday sun. There [illegible] of sweet waters which went singing to the [illegible] he might quench his thirst when his lips were parched with the long march along the dusty road. Besides, "He led them through the wilderness," not in a straight line, but hither and thither, back and forth, in and out, by unknown and devious ways. Why, they were forty years making that terrible journey through that waste, lonely, trackless stretch of shadowless, arid, burning sand. The old men who left Egypt all lay down and died, and left their bones to bleach on the sand. The young men who left Egypt grew prematurely old and decrepit on this long march of years of hardship and privation. The little children who left Egypt grew to mature manhood among these desolate scenes, and after enduring great want and passing through innumerable dangers. Even Moses, their leader, died on the mountain top and was left there unburied so far as his followers knew. Forty years they wandered in the wilderness, and there lay that short cut, full of ease and many comforts, by which they might have made the journey in a few weeks, and arrived in Canaan almost without feeling fatigue on the way. Their forefathers had gone down into Egypt by that good short cut. It was so easy! Why these forty years of wandering in the wilderness?

To make an undisciplined and disorderly horde of ignorant slaves into a nation, into an organized, disciplined army, obedient to their commanders, strong to endure, courageous to fight, wise to restrain themselves and to do right. It was easy to go down to Egypt and its "flesh pots" and slavery. It was another thing to get to the "Promised Land;" to take it from those whose vices made them unworthy of it, to keep it against the "nations around," who would covet the "good land and large." Any man led by his appetite and the savory smell of the steaming "flesh pots" could make his way to Egypt if he could be satisfied to become a slave. But to be able to leave "flesh pots" and the bursting granaries by the Nile and go up to the "Land of Promise" and be free called for a heroic spirit. It required those long forty years in the wilderness to fit them for this. The heroic spirit is not born amid the luxuries of Egypt. It does not feed on "flesh pots." The long, weary, hard march over the shadeless, burning sands, the encounters with the many dangers of the way, these are the circumstances amid which heroes are born and grow. These hardships of the desert are the daily bread on which heroism feeds. The men who left Egypt were cringing cowardly slaves. The men before whose mighty shout the walls of Jericho fell were heroes whose strong thews and brave hearts had been developed in the wilderness of endurance and endeavor.

Then think of the rare experiences they had. True, the wilderness was barren. But the heavens rained down angels' food. True, there was no water in this trackless sand. But a river flowed out of the flinty rock. True, they had left behind them all the hoary learning of Egypt. But God wrote His law on the two imperishable tablets of their human minds and human hearts. True, there was no path in the desert. But, did not the "pillar of cloud" go before them day by day, and was it not a "pillar of fire," which shed light on their way by night? Mark, they wanted for nothing necessary to men in all that journey. It was the "flesh pots" of slaves they had left.

The path of every being who ever becomes anything better than the "beasts which perish" is always through a trackless, shadeless, barren wilderness. So is the path of any nation determined to achieve greatness among the nations. Slaves multiply by the side of "flesh pots." Heroes are nurtured in a long journey through a desert without sheltering shade, refreshing streams, easy paths to tread and well-filled "flesh pots," over glowing fires.

WHEN THE RAIN COMES.* (1898.)

The hills are all athirst, and brown they rise
Against the blue magnificence of skies;
Like giant vast each lifts his mighty head;
The grasses lying on their shoulders dead,
As if growth were forgotten and old Time
Had ceased to feed his children with the thyme
Of fruitfulness. No root is there astir,
Sweet Nature feels no pulse abeat for her
Upon these hills beyond us, where we see
Her in deep trance of stirless mystery;
There she will lie like a dead goddess till
The skies are clouded, and its great cisterns fill
With rush of waters, and the blessed Rain
Moistens her lips and sets athrob again
Her silent pulses; then, O then shall we
Her new life wakening into beauty see.
The miracle of growth will meet our eyes,
And earth be fairer than her shining skies.

Clothed in fresh garments of the richest green,
Jeweled with flowers will Nature then be seen,
Her face as fair as young life ever shows,
Lovely with lily and with blushing rose,
Her breath as fragrant as the Summer's own,
Which comes to us o'er beds of blossoms blown.
And O the glory of her rain-washed skies!
Illimitable in deepness to our eyes,
Looking as if through some wide, unseen door
We might find God and walk forevermore
Through the great Vast above us, shining clear,
A realm of light, a flowing atmosphere
Of untold glory. Then the Earth is fair,
The hills like gods rise glorious everywhere,
The plains smile like a child in beauty dressed,
And all our world is wed to loveliness.

PRACTICAL ETHICS.

THE LUXURY OF LEISURE.

IT might almost be said that in no phase of life is the law of compensation more strikingly illustrated than in the deep enjoyment of the luxury of well-deserved leisure. In fact, the very burdens under which we groan during times of unusually heavy pressure—the strain upon body and mind so it be not too prolonged—the imperative and incessant demands of duty upon our mental and physical resources, constitute the prerequisite for an exalted gratification to be derived from the luxury of leisure. Moreover, the thoroughness and completeness of the enjoyment of leisure depends almost entirely upon this, whether it be leisure that is really a luxury—limited to certain times and occasions—or a mere excess of time, or superfluous freedom from the duties and responsibilities of life. For in order to be a genuine "treat" or luxury, leisure, like all good things, must be rare—or of infrequent occurrence.

Thus considered, there is little need for envy of the idle rich or the idle poor. Here extremes meet, in that the malady of idleness is most prevalent at the apex, among the very rich, and at the base of the social structure, among the very poor.

"He who does not work," says the proverb, "neither shall he eat." And, "he who does not work," it may be further asserted, neither shall he taste the luxury of leisure nor brief periods of freedom from regular employment.

In this the law is absolute. There may be no substitute to do for us that which is essential to our keen relish of a short respite from crowding care or grinding toil, because without the toil and care, leisure, in our acceptance of the term, has no meaning, can have no existence.

Leisure is, because toil and care and business and the occupation of the world are. And those who do not know close confinement, strict application or compelling labor imposed by the duties and responsibilities of a vocation or avocation—neither shall they know the satisfying pleasure and intense appreciation of the hard-earned luxury of leisure.

Hence, how absurd to speak of persons enjoying a perpetual holiday, since the very essence of a holiday, holidays or times set apart for special freedom and enjoyment consists in the distinction of such day or days from all others, or from the days of our ordinary experience! Then, in the absence of the necessary ground of a holiday, namely, previous occupation as a matter of choice or the constrained performance of tasks fixed by one's lifework, perpetual idleness, or the whimsical use and misuse of time becomes impossible as a holiday.

The Sabbath, denoting a covenant between man, ever forgetful of his highest good, and God, or Supreme Wisdom, may be taken as an ideal holiday. It is the one day to be kept holy, to be set apart for recreation and aspiration; a day for innocent and wholesome enjoyment, to be kept joyfully serene, unmared by ordinary troubles and anxieties. This is to be a true holiday, a day of leisure that shall bring renewed strength, refreshment and rest to the world-weary soul, directing the spirit of man upward and away from the turmoil and grind of fierce competitive struggle, to worship of the true and the good, leading him on to contemplation of the beautiful in nature and in art, and above all to turn the mind of man gently upon the possibilities for greater love and uprightness that await development in all mankind.

Hence, their margin of leisure is to the workers of the world a veritable oasis in the desert. It serves as a spot of refreshing cool and quiet to the sunbeaten and footsore traveler. It is a luxury indeed on account of its rarity or difficulty of attainment. A luxury which none can appreciate like those who are devoted to the conscientious discharge of daily duty. To them is reserved the joy of anticipating the happy day of leisure. Theirs is the sense of freedom and dignity won from satisfying labor whether of hand or brain; and the splendid exhilaration and wise appreciation of the luxury of leisure which nothing can give except the experience of regular or systematic work demanding close application and rigid adherence to a given purpose for a definite end in life. MIRACLES OF CHINESE COOKING.

"I once attended a mandarin's banquet in Peking," said the ex-Consul, "and it was the most remarkable feast I ever sat down to.

"One course appeared to be plain hard-boiled eggs. The eggs came on unadorned. Their shells were intact. And yet, by Jove, when we broke into them, we found that they contained nuts and sweetmeats.

"Another course was whole oranges, with unbroken skins. Yet inside the oranges were five different kinds of jelly.

"The Chinese guests took these two courses as a matter of course, but I, in amazement, asked our host how on earth they had been concocted. He smiled and shook his head.

"'Ah, that,' he said, 'is my cook's secret.'"

A BIRD THAT SHAVES.

Man is not the only living creature that shaves. The bonmot, a South American bird, takes a dry shave regularly.

The bonmot has long blue tail feathers. Each quill is adorned from base to tip with soft blue down. This arrangement the bird dislikes. Therefore, with its sharp beak, it nips the quills bare from the base out to about an inch from the tip, where it maintains a neat oval of soft blue whisker.

Such action seems silly on the bonmot's part. To certain philosophers, though, it seems no sillier than man's action in regularly scraping bare his cheeks and chin, while he maintains, on his upper lip, an oval of soft hair not unlike the bonmot's tail oval.

Millions in Nickel. By Frank G. Carpenter.

VAST ORE DEPOSITS.

THE GREAT MINES NORTH OF LAKE HURON OWNED BY AMERICANS.

From Our Own Correspondent.

SUDBURY (Ontario).—Take a nickel out of your pocket. Now suppose you had a pile of nickels as big as the national Capitol building at Washington, and that they were all packed solid in a great hole in the ground. I saw today a nickel mine out of which a chunk of nickel ore bigger than the Capitol has already been taken. The miners are working away there today, and they still have millions of tons of nickel in sight. This was at the Creighton mine, about twelve miles from Sudbury, the biggest nickel mine of the world.

There are only two places so far discovered on our great, round earth where nickel exists in large quantities. One is here in Canada, a few miles north of the Georgian Bay, and the other is away down below the equator off the eastern shore of Australia, on the opposite side of the world. It is in the little island of New Caledonia, where France sends her criminals. The ore there consists of a green deposit. The mines are worked by convicts who use steam shovels; the ore being shipped to France for treatment.

The nickel of this Lake Superior region lies in the earth somewhat like iron ore. It looks like iron, or rather like the brass stuff you sometimes find in coal. It is a combination of nickel, copper, sulphur and iron, and it is found in mighty beds or pockets going down no one knows how deep. There are nickel mines at Copper Cliff, about four miles from here, which are now 1200 feet deep, and the ore is still rich and plentiful. The Creighton mine is apparently inexhaustible. The vast pit from which the ore has been quarried during the past two or three years is about 300 feet wide and 500 feet long. It looks like the mouth of a volcano and makes me think of the Boma volcano which I visited in the mountains of Eastern Java.

The ore here lies between great walls of rock. On one side of it is granite and on the other a black formation known as diorite. The excavation has already been made to a depth equal to the height of one of the New York skyscrapers, and all the way down between these rocks there has been nothing but ore. The company has sunk a shaft down through the granite, and the vast body of nickel I have mentioned has been taken out by running tunnels at different levels into the ore and bringing it down from above.

While I was at the mine, hundreds of workmen were drilling and blasting. They were loading the ore upon cars, raising it to the surface and shipping it off to the great smelters at Copper Cliff, where it is reduced to nickel matte, which is sent to the refineries at Constable Hook, New Jersey. Standing on the edge of the great hole, I could see the diamond drills working more than a thousand feet away testing the ore body in that direction. It seems to be equally large and rich, and it is, I am told, one of the most valuable bodies of ore in existence.

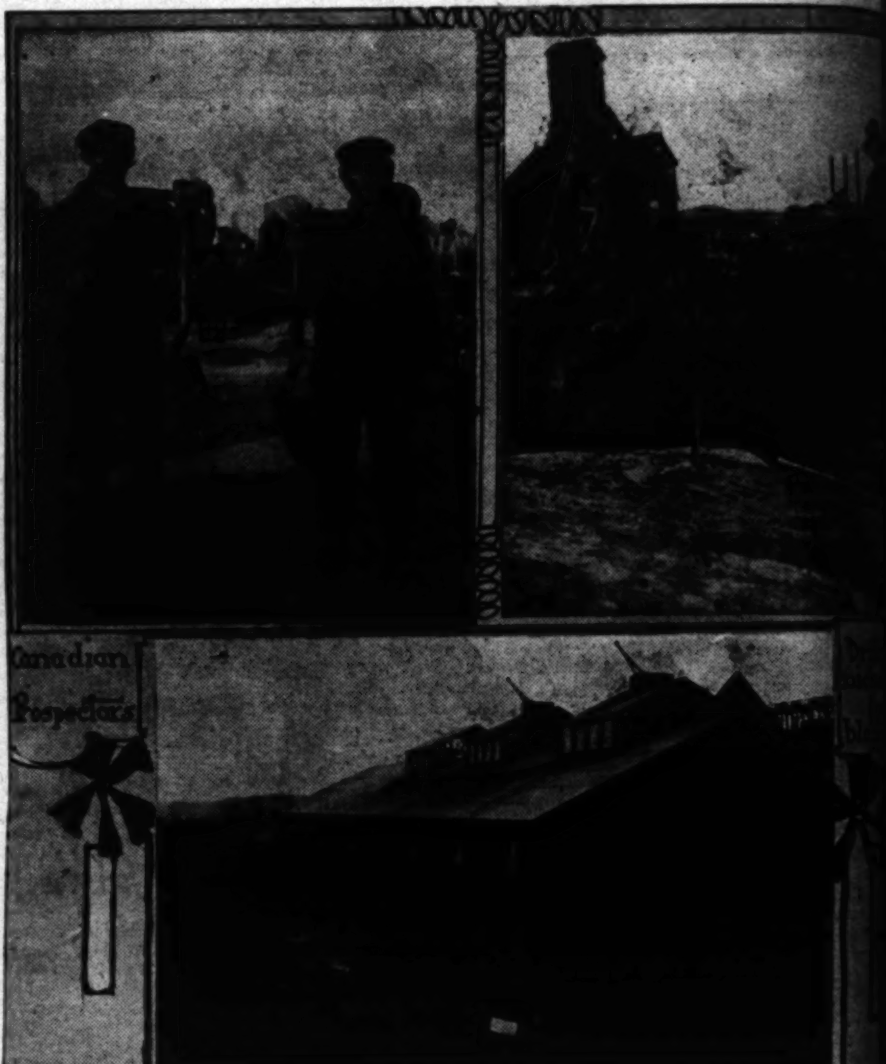
The World's Biggest Nickel Deposit.

But this Creighton mine is by no means the only nickel deposit here. The ore is found in every direction, and the supply seems to be almost inexhaustible. The Creighton mine and those at Copper Cliff belong to the Canadian Copper Company. This is a branch of the International Nickel Company, or nickel trust, which owns 20,000 acres of nickel lands here, and which has a monopoly of the nickel business of this continent. Indeed, I might say that it has almost a monopoly of the nickel of the world, the output of the French mines being much less than that of Canada. It ships between 14,000,000 and 15,000,000 pounds of nickel matte annually, and its product last year was worth more than $1,000,000. It has the biggest nickel smelter on earth, and it has about the only process that is successfully used for getting the nickel out of the matte after it comes from the smelter. It is this process which gives the International Nickel Company the monopoly of the business. Men with small capital cannot compete, although there are great areas of nickel lands outside those belonging to the trust. Such miners would have to build smelters and at the same time invent a process for getting the nickel out of the matte. Indeed, I am told that more than half the nickel ore now available is outside the mines of the Canadian Copper Company. Valuable deposits are owned by the Lake Superior corporation, originated by the Clergue Syndicate of Sault Sainte Marie. This company has smelters at its mines, and it has been turning out matte which it hopes to reduce by means of electricity generated by the water power of the St. Mary's River. The Vivians of Wales own the Murray mines, but they have, I am told, lost more than $200,000 in working them. There are other mines whose product is reduced by the Mond process, the matte being shipped to England, and there are vast deposits in the hands of private parties with no end of country yet to prospect. Indeed, if a cheaper method of getting the nickel out of the copper, sulphur and iron can be invented, the other mines here will be rapidly opened and nickel may become a comparatively cheap metal. At the time these mines were discovered it was worth $4 a pound. It is now worth 40 cents, and no one can tell what it will be worth in the future.

The Nickel Trust.

For all practical purposes there is only one nickel company operating here today. This is the International Nickel Company, which is a combination of the Canadian Copper Company, which operates here, and its associate companies of the United States which reduce the matte and handle the product. The company has a capitalization running high into the millions, and I understand that it pays good dividends.

The Canadian Copper Company was the first to mine nickel in large quantities. It was organized by Ohio parties in 1886, the chief incorporators being Cleveland men, among whom were Judge Stevenson Burk, Senator Henry B. Payne and others. The Canadian Pacific road had laid bare the nickel deposits several years before, but no one had looked upon the ore as nickel, and it was considered valuable only for the copper it contained. The Ohio company subscribed $2,500,000 to its enterprise and began to work mines at Copper Cliff for the copper in them. They sent part of their copper to New Jersey and another part to Wales. The reduction works at New Jersey looked upon the nickel as of no account and let it run off with the slag, while the Wales smelters paid only for the copper and kept the nickel as a private rake-off. After a short time, however, the Canadian Copper Company discovered that the nickel in their ore was far more valuable than the copper, and since then nickel has been the principal item of profit. The Sudbury region is a nickel country, and the copper in it is not considered. The ore now being taken from the Creighton mine carries about 6 per cent. nickel, 2 or 3 per cent. of copper, about 40 per cent. of iron and 25 or 30 per cent. of sulphur, with other stuff to make up the balance. This equals about six pounds of nickel to the hundred, or 120 pounds per ton. At the selling price of 40 cents a pound each ton of ore therefore contains about $48 worth of nickel. A ton of ore which has one ounce of gold in it pays well for mining, and such ore yields only $20 per ton.



The big nickel smelter

In the Copper Cliff Smelters.

The Copper Cliff smelters are of enormous size. Through the kindness of Mr. A. P. Turner, president of the Canadian company, I have been able to go through them during my stay. The ore is brought in on cars from Creighton mine, which is eight miles away. It is first crushed and screened, and then spread out in great heaps on beds of cordwood to be roasted. Hundreds of tons of the coarse ore are piled upon the wood, and the finer ore dust spread over them. The fire is started and the ore gradually burns away day after day for a period of two months or more. This roasts out 15 or 20 per cent. of the sulphur.

The smoke which comes up from of roasting metal is of a light yellow like burnt matches, and it is alm Added to the sulphur fumes from the the air about Copper Cliff to such an etation will grow. Before the mines the country was a green forest, and you there see the charred stumps standing ren landscape. In the town itself, which over 3000 people, there is not a green grass, a bush nor a flower to be year. The country around the smelters is desert of Sahara. It makes me think of about Iquiqui, in Northern Chile, where water for hundreds of miles and all is Indeed, nature here has been blasted damnation coming out of the ore.

There are in the neighborhood of a employed here by the Canadian Copper might suppose that they would be injured phur fumes. They are, on the contrary, any people in the world. The children and the miners are more healthy in those about Pittsburgh or Butte City,

Use Rubber Nose Caps.

Even after this roasting there is 10 phur left in the ore. The most of this the smelting. The air about the furnace brimstone to such an extent that the nose caps, for all the world like the nursing bottles, save that they are as big each has a sponge inside it soaked with ammonia. This counteracts the effects in the air breathed through it and makes the men to work. I had one of these when I went through the works to keep Notwithstanding this, my lungs became phur. I coughed and coughed until the down my cheeks; and as I did so I thought of our preachers could really taste the their word pictures of the lower regions persuasive.

I shall not attempt to describe the the ore in the furnace. The smelter and its machinery is all of the most erything is arranged to save manual are reduced at the minimum cost. At pany is constructing new works in addition in use, and a waterfall twenty-eight miles equipped with machinery which will 10,000 horse power. The output at this [illegible] tons of nickel matte per day, which make something [illegible] tons of matte annually. All this matte is [illegible] to Constable Hook, N. J., where its various elements are separated by the Orford process, and the nickel of commerce is made.

[illegible] Talk About Nickel.

During my stay at Copper Cliff today I had a chat with David H. Browne, the metallurgist of the International Nickel Company, about nickel and the new uses [illegible]. Mr. Browne has been connected with the Canadian Copper Company for the past fifteen years. He has been working successfully in nickel all the time, and he knows as much, perhaps, about it as any man in the country. In speaking of the similarity of nickel steel to [illegible], Mr. Browne remarked that it had practically the same composition as the latter. "A meteorite," said he, "might be called a part of a bursted world which has [illegible] off through space and fallen to earth. The discovery of the process of making nickel-steel was by an Englishman named Riley, who got the suggestion from a meteor found in Greenland. This meteor was an immense mass which had fallen from the skies ages ago and was venerated by the Greenlanders as a god. The [illegible] were wont to hammer splinters from it, and made them into spear heads and hammer heads. They accompanied their work by prayers to the god, and found that their spear heads were finer than any that they could get elsewhere. A few years ago Peary, the explorer, brought one of these meteorites to New York, and it is now in the center of the arch of the Museum of Natural History, on Seventy-seventh street. That meteorite is pure nickel-steel, and the splinters and the hammer heads of the Greenlanders were nickel-steel. Riley [illegible] of these discoveries, and this gave him the idea [illegible] in the new metal. I think it was Tyndal who first made it publicly known that the meteorites [illegible] nickel-steel."

Nickel-Steel for Gunboats.

"I suppose the chief use of nickel is for making such [illegible], is it not?"

"Yes, although there are many other manufactures [illegible] nickel enters. The beauty about nickel-steel is that it combines exceeding toughness with great strength. Copper wire has great toughness. A needle [illegible] has great strength. But it is only nickel-steel that has toughness and strength combined. This makes it especially valuable for armor plate. A war vessel with a hull covered with steel or iron would be [illegible] to pieces if one of our modern shells should strike it. If the armor plate is made of nickel-steel it does not break. The great projectile makes only a hole in it, as you would in a pat of butter if you stuck your finger. This property of toughness is added to steel by putting in three and one-half per cent. of nickel while it is making. All the war vessels of today are made with that composition. They have an armor of nickel-steel about eighteen inches thick. Such [illegible] plates on the hulls of the battleships of both [illegible] in the Russian-Japanese war, and the shot [illegible] employed in the several engagements was altogether nickel-steel."

"[illegible] the metal generally used for other purposes?"

"It is too costly for many uses," replied Mr. Browne, "but it is employed where toughness and strength are a necessity. It is largely used on the railroads where there are curves at the bottom of steep grades. If a [illegible] freight train strikes such a curve there [illegible] the things which hold it on the track, and these are the flanges of the wheels and the heads of the rails. In cold weather the rails are apt to become brittle, and when the train, rushing down hill, strikes them they [illegible] break, and there is a wreck. For this reason [illegible] is used at such curves. The Horse Shoe [illegible] of the Pennsylvania Railroad, for instance, is laid with that kind of rails. The metal is also now employed in bridge building. The new Manhattan bridge [illegible] of it. It is going into many of our large [illegible] or other tall steel buildings. In this [illegible] stronger than ordinary steel; the [illegible] less metal can be used or with an equal [illegible] the building can have double the strength. [illegible] does not expand or contract like common [illegible], and for this reason it is made into clock pendulums, which must be of the same length the year round in order to have the right time. Indeed, it is valuable [illegible] things, and it will be widely used as it grows [illegible]."

[illegible]'s Profit from 5-Cent Nickels.

"[illegible] about our nickel coins, Mr. Browne?" I asked. "[illegible] made of the nickel that comes from here?"

"[illegible] so," was the reply. "All the nickel they contain [illegible] from our mines. They are only one-quarter [illegible], however, the remainder being pure copper. In [illegible] there is only about one-fifth of a cent's worth of [illegible] in a 5-cent piece. Nickel is worth about 40 cents [illegible], while copper is worth only about 15 cents, so [illegible] there is a nice little profit in money of such [illegible].

"[illegible] are a few countries which use pure nickel for [illegible]," continued the metallurgist, "and among [illegible] Belgium and Switzerland. The smaller of the [illegible] are of nickel with a hole through the center [illegible] that they may not be taken for silver coins [illegible] denomination. Nickel looks like silver, [illegible] not tarnish and does not get black. The [illegible] government is now considering the use of [illegible] its coinage, and a few blanks with holes in [illegible] like the Belgian coins have been made. These, however, have not been put into circulation, because [illegible] Edward's head is to go on the coin, and his [illegible] naturally objects to having a hole punched through his face. For this reason the new Indian coins will probably be solid."

Nickel for Plating.

"How about nickel-plating, Mr. Browne?"

"That was one of the first uses of nickel. The metal does not rust, and a thin coating is often put over metals on that account. This is done by hanging the things to be plated in a solution of nickel, in which a slab of pure nickel metal is hung. A current of electricity is sent through the solution in such a way that a small amount of the nicked coats the other metal hanging in the solution, making it rustless."

Cafe Life in Berlin.

The Conditorei, the Coffee and Beer Hall Habits.

By a Special Contributor.

MEDITATING an excursion to the environs of Berlin, I one day asked my Hausfrau if there was a café at the resort mentioned.

"Just find a square in or around our city where there isn't a café, and show it to me; it would be a curiosity," she answered. The number of Berlin restaurants is indeed enormous, but the supply does not exceed the demand.

It might be said that regularly, twice a day, every resident in the German capital is seized with a desire to patronize some eating or drinking establishment. This is at 4 in the afternoon, and again after 10 at night.

A noted English author has said that the German woman will never be a power in her nation until she gives up her afternoon sweet cakes and coffee. This 4 o'clock eating habit is certainly greatly responsible for the universal puffiness which is noticed among the weaker sex. Few German women after girlhood retain their slender figures and sharply defined features, and with this corpulency of body goes torpidity of mind. It is difficult, however, to live in Berlin and not acquire the sweet-cake and coffee habit; for such an array of dainties is seen as would have tempted St. Anthony himself, had that saint been a woman.

It is the so-called "conditorei," a combination of café, bakery and candy shop, that the women most patronize. Here, on entering, the customer takes a plate and, going to the counter, helps herself to as many little cakes as desired. She pays for what she eats, and the amount she says she has eaten is never questioned.

The Germans are not such candy gourmets as are we, and their candy is always expensive and generally poor. Children usually prefer the sweet known as marzipan, which is a mixture of almond paste and sugar. Around Christmas time marzipan is sold in enormous quantities, and what makes it especially attractive are the various and fascinating shapes into which it is moulded; men, animals, babies, vegetables, soap, pies; in fact, every form that may enchant the young deutcher.

The conditorei is not so much patronized by men as the regular café and beer hall. Most of the cafés in the city are perfectly respectable, and it is an attractive side of the German's character that he desires his entire family to participate in his afternoon collations. So one generally sees him surrounded by mamma and babies, and though this family feeling is admirable, one cannot enthuse when he allows his youngest to mix beer and ice cream. But then, dyspepsia has been defined as an American disease of which the continentals know naught.

At night Berlin is gayest. Then, only, the city wakes up, and no one thinks of going to bed until early morn. The cafés are filled to overflowing, and the early bird German, after securing his favorite seat, orders his first beer and prepares to spend the night. The café is his club. Here he converses with his friends, smokes innumerable cigars, writes illustrated post cards, and reads the tageblatt. Many of the cafés have good bands of music, and the music must be good, for the German is too fine a critic to tolerate anything else. The rage, at present, is for coon songs and Sousa's marches, and never an evening passes without several American pieces appearing on the programme.

Many of the cafés are decorated in a style highly elaborate and grotesque. One may visit the "Kaiser Keller," a huge restaurant of many rooms most uniquely arranged. The entrance hall is long, and painted to represent a monastery cellar. Cobwebbed casks stand against the wall, and dim lights shine through high, grated windows. Another room is decorated like the interior of an old seaman's cabin. Many ancient models of ships and strange sea animals hang from the ceilings.

"Zum Weissen Rossel" (to the White Horse) is the name of one quaint café. The decorations here are all calculated to startle the beholder by their extreme style and variety. It might be called the "Fin de Siecle" café. In one part individual tables are set in horses' stalls, the musicians play behind a bower of vines, and daring French posters peep at one from unexpected corners.

The German delights to give his café old-fashioned names, recalling the inns of long ago—as—"The Golden Grape" and again "The White Stag," "Paradise," and "Old Nuremberg." At "The Peasants' Resort" the waiters are dressed in Tyrolian costume, the crockery is of the kind known as peasant ware, the beer is peasant brew, and the music the sharp-toned rustic zither. One tiny underground hall is called after its French owner, Niquish, and is famous in two ways; the sausages are here the best in Berlin and, too, this was the favorite resort of Emperor Friedrich when still Crown Prince.

The beer halls are the meeting places of students, and in some special tables are set apart for the use of different corps. They have their own steins, the colors of the band hang on the neighboring wall, and around the table are always a number of members of the corps their faces freshly slashed from dueling. All wear the regulation cap of their corps, which is usually of a shape and color not calculated to increase their red-faced beauty. From the quantity of beer these students drink, one would judge their mind to be in a state of perpetual fogginess.

It is not always beer that the German imbibes. He has his mixed drinks, though mixed drinks are not so popular as in our ice-cream-soda, cocktail land. In Berlin there is the so-called "white beer," which is not beer at all, but a non-intoxicating, highly gaseous beverage. It is served in immense goblets, four times the size of an ordinary glass, and is usually flavored with fruit syrups. The most delicious German mixed drink is the "bowle." This is a punch of Rhine wine and champagne flavored with crushed fruits. In spring, bowle is considered very healthful when flavored with a green, slightly bitter herb, known as "waldmeister."

It is with the advent of the May bowle that all Berlin starts to eat out of doors. The open-air cafés are then simply jammed, and underneath the freshly-budding trees the German youth can eat and drink away his spring dreams. Then, too, one begins to take those charming excursions to the environs of the city; down the River Spree, or out to palaced Potsdam, or to the great forest of pines. And everywhere the traveler wanders, he is sure to find that the conquering beer keg has preceded him. A turn in the river of a vista in the forest shows the inevitable café, with the placid German sitting at a tiny iron table, drinking in the pure air and the foaming Pilsener, and no doubt whispering to his plump companion: "I love thee, because love thee I must."

THE SUTTEE IN INDIA.

The Custom of Burning Widows on the Funeral Pyre not Extinct.

[Springfield Republican:] The impression has gained ground of late years that the East Indian custom of burning widows on the funeral pile had come to an end, but this impression is a mistaken one. The London Times contains in the following article the results of some inquiries which the English officials in India have recently made on the immolation of widows within the past year:

"At the close of 1904, several persons were convicted in Behar of the offense of abetting the self-immolation of a Hindu widow on the funeral pyre of her husband. Since then similar cases have been reported from the neighborhood of Ajmere, and from Oudh. Looking back over the last few years, it is possible to recall at least two other instances of 'sati'—one in Orissa, the other in the wilds of Central India. All these cases resemble one another in their general features. The unhappy widow, decked as for her marriage, took her place upon the pyre in the presence of large crowds of her co-religionists, who, by their words and gestures, encouraged her to the completion of her self-sacrifice. In two cases her fortitude sustained her to the end. In others her screams may have been drowned by the accompaniment of triumphant shouts and wild music emanating from the surrounding crowds, when the flames, kindled by relatives of the deceased, rose to consume the living with the dead. In one case at least, when the woman sought escape from the burning torment, she was driven back to her death by frenzied bystanders.

"In the fact that, even three-quarters of a century after Lord William Bentinck's denouncement of 'sati' as an intolerable crime, a wretched woman should occasionally seek in death an escape from present affliction and a miserable widowhood, there is nothing necessarily disturbing. Even that a few selfish relatives should, for their own ends, encourage her rash resolve, is of no general importance. What really is matter of concern is the evidence of all these cases that the western conception of suicide, as a wicked and cowardly means of escape from misery, has made little progress in India. In each case of 'sati,' the whole neighboring Hindu population openly sympathized with the principal actors in the tragedy, regarding its accomplishment as a triumph. In two cases evidence was with the utmost difficulty procured from reluctant witnesses who sought to screen the offenders. In another, justice could, in the absence of evidence against individuals, only be very inadequately satisfied by a fine levied on the whole guilty population. The Orissa case gave rise to an animated discussion among educated Hindus as to the validity of ancient texts quoted in support of the practice of 'sati.' Though the weight of opinion was then against it, a fresh movement in support of it was observed not long ago, among classes not altogether uneducated. That such discussions and movements should be possible at this late date is highly significant. Whatever be the correct interpretation of the text, there can be no doubt that 'sati' has for many centuries enjoyed the approval of popular religious belief. It was well known so far back as the Macedonian invasion; twenty centuries later it was universal. Fifty years of stern repression reduced its occurrence to a few sporadic cases; but there can be do hesitation in saying that the spirit which prompted and applauded it is almost as strong now as it was a century ago. The doctrine is probably a corrupt one, engrafted on a purer ancient religion by priests for their own ends, but it is one which is deeply rooted in the belief of the people. The suppression of the custom owes its success largely to the essential publicity of the crime.

METHODS OF COLONIZATION.

OUR ENGLISH COUSINS WON'T TELL THE TRUTH ABOUT US.

From Our Own Correspondent.

HONGKONG.—Considering that the English have been such severe critics of the American government in the Philippines, I have been looking forward with pleasurable anticipation to my visit to the possessions of John Bull. Seeing that our neighbors are so dissatisfied with our method of doing things, I wanted to see wherein we were wrong—if wrong at all. At the outset it will be well to quote from one of the London reviewers in order to give my readers a sample of the criticism our humble efforts in the Far East are meeting with.

"The American is new to the East, but with characteristic audacity announces his intention of proving to the European nations that he alone knows how to handle a dependency. From the first, the American persisted in regarding the Filipinos as a civilized race, and they are now being given the higher education; they are being taught to appreciate the beauties of the square on the hypothenuse, to read Emerson, and to understand the Dingley tariff. The native was forthwith put on a level with the white man, both socially and politically, and Filipino policemen, armed with revolvers, soon ran riot in Manila. The islands are in a state of chaos, trade is decreasing at an alarming rate, and the presence of a strong military force is all that prevents the outbreak of another general insurrection.

"A National Passion for Hustling."

"At the present time the two richest provinces in Luzon, the principal island, are in revolt; while the whole of Samar, the gem of the archipelago, has been laid waste by the insurgents. In Manila the tram cars race along the streets impeding the traffic. The white population hurries to and fro, restlessly, uselessly, perspiring and breathless, as though determined to prove that although there is no business to be done, heat and discomfort cannot tame the national passion for hustling. The improvements made by the Americans are blatant and aggressive, but superficial. If the flag were hauled down they would disappear at once and the unchanging East would revert into its usual apathy. A month of this régime would have shown any other nation its mistake, but the American authorities still decline to acknowledge their error. The blame lies entirely with their policy."

This is a gross misrepresentation of the case in every count. It would be unworthy of notice but for the fact that it is the usual vein in which the average English writer treats the subject. In the first instance the American did not announce his intention of proving to the world that he alone knew how to handle a dependency. Our government has gone about its own way of solving its problem, which is certainly its privilege. The statement that our officials have challenged the world in colonial usage is nonsense. That we intend to try to benefit a helpless and benighted race seems to be nothing short of an affront to our English cousins. They will see no good at all in our effort.

A Deliberate Misrepresentation.

We are not giving the Filipinos higher education. No authority connected with our educational system in the islands has ever said any such thing, and no report has ever contained anything which might possibly be construed into such a statement. We are giving them only rudimentary courses, including enough English that they may have a common language, and enough arithmetic so they can count money and conduct their affairs. They are being taught to use tools and to know the value of medicines. No native policemen ever ran riot through the streets of Manila, in fact, the majority of the policemen there are white men. There is no strong military force in the islands. The number of soldiers has been reduced from 70,000 to 10,000.

There are no insurgents anywhere in the Philippines, and have not been since the war. Although there are disturbances in several provinces, they are not in the nature of resistance to the American government. They are merely the quarrels of religious fanatics among themselves. Outlaws have infested the mountain regions for hundreds of years, but are really less active now than they have ever been in the history of the Philippines. The American policy is in no way responsible for this trouble, and will overcome it in time. The idea of "tram cars racing along the streets impeding the traffic" is ridiculous on the face of it. The street-car system in Manila is the best and most prosperous in all Asia. It is hauling a million passengers a month.

English Criticisms Unfounded.

If the English wish to console themselves by the delusion that the white population of Manila is "restlessly and uselessly hurrying to and fro," they are welcome to do so. However, the sneer at our "national passion for hustling" does not jibe well with the admitted fact that Yankee competition is being felt throughout the entire British empire. If it affords them any satisfaction to pronounce our improvements "blatant and aggressive" I suppose no one will deny them that comfort, although it is universally conceded that Yankee engineers and builders have no peers in the world.

Despite the fact that the English persist in misrepresenting us, I wish to assure my readers that I will not retaliate in kind. I am going to tell a straight story about them. There is nothing to be gained by looking at the cause of a competitor with prejudice, blinding one's eyes to the truth. The English have been in Hongkong about seventy years, and they have built a modern and substantial city here. The mountains back of the harbor are studded with hundreds of beautiful and commodious residences, which show that the Englishman has the faculty of extracting comfort from almost any surroundings in which he may be placed. Hongkong is the natural door to China, and a great business has been built up here. The annual tonnage of ships calling at Hongkong is greater than any other port in the world, not barring London nor New York. The English were trading in Canton more than 150 years ago, and it would be useless to deny the credit that is due them for opening up this great market.

Although [illegible] acknowledged kicking the laborer, the overseer [illegible] that he did not use enough force to kill him, [illegible] that he must have died from some other cause. The [illegible] acquitted him, dismissing the case with this [illegible] piece of legal wisdom: "I find you not [illegible], but hereafter be careful how you strike people." [illegible] editor of one of the leading papers in Hongkong [illegible] me that the rights of the Chinaman were re[illegible] in every way, yet the instance I refer to, quoting [illegible] exact words of the judge, was taken from the files [illegible] his paper.

[illegible] night that Mr. Taft and his party were in Hong[illegible] a torchlight parade of the troops was given for [illegible] amusement. Just before I entered the parade [illegible], a tall Indian sauntered slowly down the street, [illegible] walking in the middle of the thoroughfare, look[illegible] to the right nor the left, yet because he tem[illegible] obstructed the path of a man and woman in [illegible] down, a soldier rushed up and dealt him a sting[illegible] blow from behind. The Indian dropped in his [illegible] and was hauled away mortally wounded. He did [illegible] the couple who tried to cross his path, nor the [illegible] who struck him. He was entirely innocent of [illegible], and was clearly within his rights be[illegible] was in the middle of the street. The brutal as[illegible] his person was unwarranted, and should have [illegible] punished.

[illegible] is Humane.

[illegible] half-dozen different occasions in Hongkong (I [illegible] my readers that I am not exaggerating) I saw [illegible] violently kick 'ricksha coolies in the back [illegible] they did not properly understand their orders. [illegible] the ignorance of the coolies was exasperating, it [illegible] true that the Englishmen were as much [illegible] for not understanding Chinese as the Chinks [illegible] not understanding English. The greatest [illegible] the English take to the American policy is [illegible] of education. They claim that learning will [illegible] Asiatic and destroy his usefulness. It has cer[illegible] the Japanese, and time will soon prove [illegible] will do for the Filipinos. In any event Uncle [illegible] going to give his wards a chance, and that is [illegible] John Bull has done in Hongkong. The [illegible] this great center of trade is treated so harshly [illegible] that he could hardly be worse off if he were [illegible]. The English idea of colonization here plainly [illegible], with little or no consideration for the [illegible] the land which yields the profit. If Uncle Sam [illegible] much concern for the native, John Bull has not [illegible] and it is better to err on the side of humanity [illegible] commit the opposite fault.

[illegible] to the manner of doing business, it seems [illegible] American has little to learn from his neighbor. [illegible] is out of date. I met the manager of a [illegible] house that had an English firm in Hongkong [illegible] agents. It was necessary to send several cable [illegible] each day, the cost of which was something like [illegible]. The code the English house used had been [illegible] forty years, and was both inaccurate and ex[illegible]. The New York firm had repeatedly insisted on [illegible] a simpler code, both for safety and economy. [illegible] English house had replied to all requests that [illegible] had served them for years, and they did [illegible] the necessity for changing. Although the Amer[illegible] the trouble to figure out his messages, show[illegible] the new method would save thousands of dollars [illegible], the English agents were obdurate, and as a [illegible] New York house will soon establish a branch [illegible].

[illegible] is Out of Date.

[illegible] Englishman was on the ground first, and in the [illegible] he had his own way. He took life easy. He [illegible] at 3 or 4 o'clock in the afternoon and de[illegible] rest of the day to some sort of congenial sport. [illegible] is competition in the Orient. The Ger[illegible] at his desk until a late hour, and the [illegible] of simplifying processes and saving [illegible]. The Englishman scorns any greater effort [illegible] made to get business. He has almost [illegible] to any commercial innovation. He [illegible] clumsy, old-fashioned methods, and [illegible] because it is English and because he [illegible]. Unless he mends his way, the plod[illegible] the ingenious Yankee will take his [illegible] from him. This is not said in spite nor [illegible] misrepresentation. Everybody in the Ori[illegible] the Englishman, but he seems to be [illegible] and self-centered to take the hint.

[illegible] social customs of the English are of course radi[illegible] to the democratic ideas of the American. [illegible] Governor of Hongkong is a Jew who was [illegible] to look after the Rothschilds' interests. When [illegible] to Hongkong he gave it out that inasmuch as [illegible] personal representative of the King of Eng[illegible] he approached a group of ladies they must [illegible] give him the choice of seats. If some social [illegible] giving a dinner and His Excellency decides that [illegible] his convenience to entertain on that same [illegible] lady is commanded in the name of the King to [illegible] her invitations. At first the people of Hong[illegible] inclined to squirm a little at such high[illegible] proceedings, but the new Governor was obdu[illegible] now the smart set is ready to dance when he [illegible].

[illegible]n't Kowtow.

[illegible] royal prerogative which the present Governor [illegible] exercises is to keep his audiences waiting [illegible] or so beyond the appointed time at which he [illegible] to appear. When Miss Alice Roosevelt was [illegible] she was entertained by His Excellency, [illegible] the whole English East by refusing to [illegible] the exacting representative of the house of [illegible] in the name of the King. Instead of [illegible] "His Excellency" she took her leave by say[illegible]," and went her way with a merry laugh [illegible] shrug of her democratic shoulders. While the young lady from the White House might have been a little more considerate of her host, there is no doubt but that the average American when he reads this will say, with all his heart, "Bully for Alice." The English thought she was "horrid." It is merely the difference in the viewpoint the two peoples hold in regard to the equality of man.

Birds of the Swamp.

HERONS, IBISES AND RAILS AND THEIR LONELY HOMES.

By a Special Contributor.

I THINK the prettiest sight, in the way of wild life, that has ever fallen under my eye came my way one afternoon in May. I was poling a boat slowly about among the tules in an old reservoir down in Orange county when I came suddenly upon a female pied-billed grebe (the "hell-diver" of boyhood days) sitting on her nest. So silently and so suddenly did the boat appear that she did not have time to slip from her floating home into the protecting water. There she lay, stretched at full length, her body flattened out as much as possible and her bright eyes peering up at me from where her head was laid along the rim of the nest. For a moment, only, the picture remained undisturbed, and then, half rising from her place the slender bird slipped down into and under the water noiselessly as a falling leaf. Two seconds later she was a hundred yards away, floating serenely about in the middle of the pool.

Of itself the nest was a work of art. First there had been built a perfect raft, thick and strong, yet light enough to float and so well woven together that its top was dry even though its bottom "drew" at least an inch and a half of water. On top of all this a cosy nest of fine grass blades, rotten tule leaves and other marsh vegetation had been laid. In the hollowed-out center of this lay five pale greenish blue eggs, encrusted with a light chalky deposit and very much stained by the juices from the dead leaves on which they rested. This nest was not anchored to any of the tules or to the shore, about ten feet distant through a miniature forest of "cat-tails." Further on there was a coot's nest, larger and less carefully built, but tied down firmly to five strong tule stalks. In this there were seven eggs, creamy brown in color, thickly peppered with fine black specks. Indeed, they looked like nothing so much as a fresh nestful of guinea hen's eggs. And the coot, or mudhen, does resemble a guinea hen not a little; even her cry, that short cluck-cluck, so familiar to every duck hunter, is like that of the barn-yard fowl. Coots are on the increase all over the country, and, while they are an undoubted nuisance to the duck clubs, they add much in picturesqueness to many an otherwise uninteresting inland pond.

But the real birds of the swamps are the herons and the ibises and the rails, those winged creatures that never wander far from the grass-covered marsh spaces by day and return to the depths of the willow groves by night. Of course, the land for swamp birds lies ever to the south of us. Florida and Texas and Old Mexico—these are the places where swarm the beautiful flamingoes and the snowy egrets, but here in our own bit of semitropic world we have not a few beautiful birds to see which requires the use of a boat and waders.

Time was when the American egret came to the marshes of this county almost every winter. Probably none nested here, but in the days when antelope and deer fed on the mesa 'roundabout Los Angeles, and when mountain sheep thronged Old Baldy's great shoulders, these white-plumaged birds wandered at will through the willow groves of what is now Alamitos Bay and even the old dried-out Nigger Slough. Snowy in every feather, from top of head to tip of tail, crowned with a trailing diadem of long, filmy plumes, this was a most beautiful bird, but the hand of the plume hunter, and back of him the woman of fashion, has been ever against its life. Of late, the Audubon societies and a general arousing of public opinion have changed this somewhat, and I am told that in Texas and Florida, at least, the egrets are on the increase. I myself have never seen one in California, but have every reason to believe the word of men who were studying the birds of this section before my time and who have seen them.

Another bird which I am told was once reasonably common here, and which will be recognized by easterners who may come upon this, is the snowy heron. This is also a beautiful bird, one that rivals the egret. With its life it, too, is paying for the plumes on women's bonnets, and since the wave of protection has swept over the country does not seem to have recovered in numbers as have some of the other plume bearers.

The pictures of memory are a great pleasure. "I remember" is the open sesame to many a treasure house wherefrom the everyday life of the workaday world debars the imaginative mind. And so I say, I remember a fall day on the Alamitos "bay." This sheet of water was then a slough, a glassy, treacherous stretch of marsh, filled with bird life of all kinds. Further back, where the tidewater ceased and the river ran fresh, there were many a bed of tules, many an overhanging willow grove. Here the big "greenheads"—mallards of many a season's wisdom—came to feed. Not for them the open waters where the teal and the redheads and an occasional canvasback floated lazily about. Rather would they rustle along the edges of the river, going by night to the pools that dotted the mesa on all sides a few rods back from the stream. Here, therefore, came "two men in a boat" after them. We had done fairly well. I think we had twelve or fifteen birds between us, when, rounding a large willow clump which leaned well out over the water I saw a sight seldom duplicated in this end of the State. Balanced on the swaying branches of a leafless willow tree were fully two dozen ibises. Shining brown-black they were with the exception of their faces—these were of a snowy whiteness. For a full minute they did not see us, though they were sitting silently upon their perches, apparently composed for the night, and we watched them closely. Of somber-colored birds there are few more beautiful, few whose plumage is so nicely laid and always so immaculate. No taxidermist, however skillful, can bring to the mounted bird that gloss of feather which is its especial possession in life. Great colonies of these birds breed in Texas and other Gulf States and the chances are that at one time they nested hereabouts. The eggs are deep greenish blue, in some cases a deep pea green, by far the most beautiful eggs of the herons, though not nearly so prettily marked as those of the wood ibis.

The two common bitterns, the American and the least, are said to be found here, though I have not seen the latter up to date. If they are here they are very secretive, or I have confused them with some other bird. The two birds are widely different—the larger (the American) can be at once distinguished by its general heavy contour, an outline possessed by no other bird of the marsh, its general dark brown-gray colors, its heavy bill, and its habit of frequenting only the depths of the worst quagmires and swamps. The other is a smaller and lighter bird, which, while found in more open country—along the tule-grown banks of sloughs, and rivers—is very quick to dodge into the rushes and can lay hidden almost as quietly as a rail.

And the rails themselves are here, though not in such numbers as on the South Atlantic Coast where they are shot by hundreds for the Baltimore and New York markets. There are probably three species of these birds here: the large California clapper rail, whose bell-like "cackle" can be heard at any high tide on the marshes around Wilmington or Playa del Rey. In body the clapper rail is somewhat larger than a quail, set up on long legs, its plumage the mottled brown and gray and white of all marsh birds that live much among the dead grasses. It is impossible to come on these birds by stealth, unless it be in poling a boat slowly along the edge of some tule-bordered stream, where, in rounding some little point of rushes, one sees the rail first. Wonderfully secretive as they are, their nests are well hidden and few are seen by the closest searchers.

Of practically the same habits, but smaller in size are the Virginia and sora rails, the former a rare migrant, the latter a regular resident wherever found. All the rails make saucer-shaped nests of fine grasses, usually placing them on solid ground in a clump of grass, and the eggs of the different species are alike—creamy in ground color with dark-brown blotches—except in size. The eggs of the yellow and the black rail are the smallest of all and are very rarely found, though both species are known to breed in southeastern marshes.

The great blue heron, the largest of the family on this Coast, once nested in small numbers near Santa Monica, but I doubt if there be any nesting in the county now, especially since all the willow groves have been cut away. These willow jungles were famous bird haunts. To them went the rare red-bellied hawks to sieze upon some crow's nest and lay therein their two or three pretty eggs. Down in the tangle of blackberry vines, around the old willow stumps pileolated warblers and flute-throated song sparrows wove their cups of nests. At all altitudes between, in the trees and in the wild vines, were the homes of many a winged wanderer, while in the tops of the willows themselves in some selected places, the herons made huge ungainly platforms of sticks. But few and far between were the homes of the heons, and nowadays they are nearly all gone.

In the midle of our misnamed "winter" there come to many inland pools bands of from three to twenty-five long-legged birds, white on all their underparts, slaty blue on the wings and uppers, shading into a very deep rich blue-black on the crown of their heads. From the center of this dark headpiece trails a single long white filament, too narrow, almost, to be called a plume. These are black-crowned night herons, and they are the birds that make such unearthly noises in the reeds round about many an inland reservoir these nights. People usually lay these noises on the bitterns, but as a rule the bittern is too shy to come about such open places, and makes a deeper, more resonant note than the heron.

Every one knows the mudhen, whose real name is coot, and probably most duck hunters have seen the Florida gallinule, a bird which somewhat resembles the mudhen and frequents much the same places. It is a better hider than the coot, however, and so is seen less often even when equally abundant. Both nest in about the same manner but the gallinule's eggs resemble those of the clapper rail more closely than they do those of its relative, the coot. There are, of course, many other birds which frequent the low places along the coast, notably the marsh hawk and several varieties of sparrows, but those which I have enumerated are the ones which seem most abundant to any one spending a day or two on the marsh.

ORIGINATORS OF UPRIGHT WRITING.

Before a school teacher lay a number of compositions, all written in a neat, upright hand.

"Few people," she said, "know to whom we are indebted for the straight up and down penmanship now taught in our schools, and few grasp the superiority of this style.

"Upright writing was originated by Drs. Von Reuss and Lorenz of Austria. They recommended it to the Austrian Supreme Council of Hygiene. They pointed out that it was the better style of writing to teach children for the reason that a child using it would face his book and would thus be spared the twist of the body and neck which is always observed in those who write the slanting hand. This twist, they showed, had a tendency to bring on spinal curvature.

"The recommendation of Dr. Von Reuss and Dr. Lorenz was adopted in Austria, and upright writing was finally adopted there. May it live forever."

Three British Industries.

IRON, COTTON AND LINEN PRODUCTS OF THE ISLES.

By a Special Contributor.

IRON products, cotton products and linen products may easily be classed as three leading British industries. Shipbuilding is the most distinctly typical of the British products of iron, as the United Kingdom leads the world in this branch of industry, even more notably than in cottons. The busy little islanders are the shipbuilders of the world.

But let us reverse the order and look into the linen industry first. This is proper, for it is the oldest of the three, almost the oldest of all. Nor is this true of the British Isles only, it is true of all Western Europe, if not of the whole world. But that is too far a call and not quite germane to the present inquiry.

Now the real seat of the linen industry is Ireland, and has been from time out of mind. There is scarcely a prettier sight in the world than a field of Irish flax in August. The stalk grows to from twenty to as much as forty inches high. In the same field under the careful tilth prevailing here the whole field will be almost of the same height, the different lengths being from different fields and depending largely on the nature of the soil. It requires a very generous soil to produce a fine growth of flax, and the crop is exceedingly exhausting. The soil must be kept up by constant and very liberal fertilizing. The seed is put in the ground in April. In May the blade is well above the ground, and in August the bloom appears, as level as if artificially produced from end to end of a field, a bright, deep-blue bell on the top of a vividly green stalk, the whole top of the field being a sea of bloom, as the breeze sweeps over the blue heads all swaying on the tough, flexible, raceful stalks, not waving like fields of grain, but all ing in rhythmic time together, forward, then back, the blue and green mingling in the most beautiful interchange of color. The sight is one never to be forgotten. About this time a band of sturdy, Irish women invade the field and each grasping a double handful of the flax, they pull the stalks out from the roots, clean and whole. These handfuls are laid out in swaths to dry. Then the flax is steeped for days in ponds of fresh water until the fiber becomes as tough as spun cord. It is dried once more, then hacked to get the outer casing off the fiber, which lies within as in a pipe.

Not nearly all the flax used in Ireland is home grown. The greater part comes from Russia. Here again is the germ of a future crisis in British industries. Russia is a great country. The Russians have in them the making of a great nation, full of intelligence, energy and industry. The misrule of corrupt grand dukes cannot last much longer. When Russia has awakened where will Irish linen makers get their raw flax? It will be the present story of raw cotton over again. But that is not a question of tomorrow, nor of next week, nor of next year.

The Home of the Linen Trade.

The North of Ireland is where flax is spun, and linen woven, and Belfast is the center of this great industry. Belfast is a great city of 350,000 population, modern, well built, prosperous and progressive. It numbers 100,000 souls more than Dublin. Its streets are wide, well paved and kept clean. As we passed through the south of Scotland and the North of Ireland, and notice the clean-cut, keen, bustling, well-dressed, wide-awake men and women at every turn, we remarked to each other: "These are the Yankees of Europe." There are linen-dealing establishments here that cover an entire block, bounded by four streets. The buildings run six stories high. The factories owned by these firms are in the country, and here in the city the linen fabrics coming from the factories are converted into all sorts of forms ready for use. Henry of Navarre, when he became King of France had only seven shirts in his wardrobe, and four of these were badly torn. Some of these Belfast firms make more than seven shirts a minute. Fifty thicknesses of linen are laid out on a long table, and a man with a knife, as long as Henry's sword was, cuts fifty shirts out in a moment. Smaller parts, like collars and cuffs, are cut out with a jig-saw, 100 at a clip. Hundreds of sewing machines, whizzing with lightning speed, worked by power and controlled by bright Irish girls, do the sewing. The machines all bear an American name.

Strange to know, a great deal of this linen is hand-spun and hand-woven. The best table napery is made by hand. These big companies have 1500 to 2000 hand looms let out to the cottagers in the country where tablecloths, napkins and other fabrics are woven. The pay rolls of these factories will carry 2500 names and upward. The work done by the hand weavers is marvelous. The shuttle is thrown from side to side with the right hand by jerking a string right and left. The beam of the loom is pushed back and forth with the left hand, and the many webs are managed by the skillful feet of the operator on treadles, like those of an organ. Thus the patterns are woven into the fabric. The men are very "handy" with their feet, and the strangest part of it is that one of them will produce a fine table cloth of two to three yards in length and seventy to ninety inches in width in a day. Other fabrics are of a fineness, unimaginable to the inexperienced. One of these hand weavers recently produced a web sixteen yards long and one yard wide, so fine, that when carefully folded it was easily put in a man's vest pocket. How is this possible? A matter of skill and that from experience, and much of it inherited. For 300 years these people have done little else than weave linen. Many of their ancestors who fled from France 300 years ago, came from flax weavers who had come from weavers dating 400 years before that time. In 1835 Belfast exported 44,000,000 yards of linen. Two generations later, in 1894, the linen thread spun in Belfast was estimated to measure 644,000,000 miles, or 25,000 times the circumference of our globe. The linen exported year by year comes to 160,000,000 yards. This would make a girdle for the earth at the equator, three yards wide. There are 900,000 spindles at work, and 32,500 power looms. There are 70,000 persons in Belfast employed in the various branches of the industry. The value of the products amounts to $40,000,000.

THE DOCKS AT BELFAST.

Beautiful Fabrics.

These linen fabrics are remarkable for their beauty as well as for their fineness. They all come brown and dingy from the looms, but when spread upon a beautiful, fresh, green Irish grass plot for days and bleached, they become like snow. Some of these are as beautiful as an oil painting and as elaborately wrought as to figures and designs. The handkerchiefs are embroidered in most exquisite fashion, with drawn-work patterns wrought in them and flowers worked with the needle.

But this hand-work art is dying out in this practical age. This is more true of Ireland than some other countries, for these Irish handkerchiefs are now sent to Switzerland where hand embroidery is done cheaper than in the Emerald Isle, low though wages are there. Moreover, machine work of a stiff, pretentious, inartistic type, but cheap, is taking the place of the really beautiful hand work as fine as a picture. The Irish women are letting the art die out because the wages paid will not furnish a decent living. Perhaps it is better, after all. These hand embroiderers go blind early in life bending over the fine work necessary to be produced to compete at all with the machine work which can be sold so cheap. The difference is apparent only to the artistic eye, that is the cultivated eye. Let us all be content with a less artistic handkerchief "to show" and a good, plain one "to blow," both machine made, and let the pretty Irish girl keep bright her beautiful gray Irish eyes.

The Cotton Industry.

We shall have to recross the "narrow seas" to visit the cotton factories in all the pride of their greatness. Lancashire, England, is where this industry flourishes and has done so for centuries on a large scale. In 1727 Daniel Defoe, so dear to the hearts of childhood, who did not spend all his talent in romance writing, says of Manchester: "The grand manufacture which has so much raised this town is that of cotton in all its varieties." In 1774 no less than 30,000 persons in Manchester were engaged in the business. The industry was at that time all individual. Each man had his own card, spinning wheel and loom. It was a hand industry, pure and simple, and the person engaged in it made all his own implements. They could not be called machines. It was when the power loom came into being that the factory sprang up. In 1787 Edmund Cartwright, Baptist minister, made the first power loom. For years their use was small. But by 1813 there were about 2400 of them in use. By 1835 there were in England 97,564, in Scotland 17,720, and in Ireland 1516, a total for the Kingdom of 116,801. In 100 years after Cartwright invented his machine, the cotton industry grew so that in 1870 there were employed in it 440,676 persons in Great Britain and Ireland. Twenty years later the number had grown to 615,714. Today there are

"Auld Brig of Ayr."

LORD ROSEBERY INTERVENES TO SAVE IT FROM DESTRUCTION.

By a Special Contributor.

EVERY lover of Bobby Burns has just been put under a debt of gratitude to Lord Rosebery. The former Premier of England has succeeded in saving from demolition the venerable "Brig of Ayr," which Scotland's greatest poet made forever notable.

The old bridge had fallen into lamentable decay. It had reached a point where its time-worn stones barely held together. The passing of centuries had cracked away the cement, the stones were crumbling, and the danger of collapse made the bridge of "Tam O'Shanter's" time a constant menace to the safety of all who used it.

In this predicament the practical citizens who compose the Town Council of Ayr decided that sentiment must give way to utility, the old bridge be demolished, and a new one erected.

AULD BRIG OF AYR.

The decision brought a pang to the thousands who regard Burns as second only to Shakespeare; indeed among Scots he probably lies closer to the affections than even the Bard of Avon himself.

Tear down the old bridge! It seemed a crime, a sacrilege! Every consideration of reverence demanded that the poetic structure, whose every stone is rich in memories of the gentle singer, should be saved. Its age alone should have protected it from the hands of the destroyer, for even in England where the landmarks of the past have been carefully guarded, there are few structures to match it in antiquity.

Its history is not dependent on tradition. In legal documents, in the fast fading figures of an old charter, is recorded that the Brig of Ayr came into existence in 1236, being erected by two maiden ladies, whose souls had been harried by the frequent loss of life that followed the necessity of fording the treacherous stream.

And if age were not motive enough to make for the preservation of Ayr, the birthplace of Burns, standing less than a mile and a half away from the bridge, that for centuries has connected the town of Ayr proper with Newton and Wallacetown, should have been an argument nothing could withstand.

These considerations did not weigh with the town authorities against the need of a bridge that should be safe.

They were set in their plan, and had gone so far as to ask bids for a new structure when public-spirited Englishmen and Scotchmen in every section of the globe called on Lord Rosebery to head a movement to save the old bridge.

Lord Rosebery acted with customary zeal. He needed no urging, for he is a deep admirer of Burns, and the idea of wiping out such a landmark aroused in him all the energy that in the past he was wont to use in his political battles.

His first act was to address a letter to the Town Council in which he appealed for delay. This he followed with an open letter to all lovers of Burns, in which he asked the assistance of all who had means to contribute.

Letters of protest began pouring in on the Town Council by the hundreds, and all were so warmly worded that even that lethargic body became aroused to the fact that Britain did not intend to sit idly by, and let one of its most picturesque landmarks be sacrificed.

Following the request of Lord Rosebery, the Town Council agreed on a delay of four months to canvass the matter, and called on engineers and architects to make an examination of the bridge with the idea of seeing what suggestions they could advance.

Some of the foremost experts of England volunteered their services and hastened to the spot. Every inch of the seven-century-old structure was gone over with critical eye, and when the time for a hearing came, there descended on the Town Council of Ayr such a delegation of experts as have seldom been drawn together in any one place.

By common consent the Society for the Preservation of Ancient Buildings put forth as their spokesman Francis Fox, of the firm of Sir Douglas Fox and partners, Westminster.

Mr. Fox paid high compliment to the local engineer for the careful repairs he had from time to time, with small money and small facilities, made on the old structure. But for these, Mr. Fox said, there would be no Auld Brig to talk about. It would long since have collapsed. Then he added that a time had come when the bridge was doomed unless something were done and quickly. It could hardly hold together more than a few months.

Then to the great delight of the distinguished audience that listened, Mr. Fox asserted that the bridge could be saved, and without any loss of its identity.

The plan of taking it down stone by stone, and re-erecting, using the old stones, Mr. Fox pronounced to be out of question. So many of the stones have cracked and crumbled that once lifted from the structure, they would fall to pieces. Such a plan would mean a new bridge, for the structure would naturally lose all the features that gave it sentimental interest, its wrinkles and furrows, the distorted arch and the weather-worn arrises.

Instead of that, Mr. Fox pointed out that the use of the grouting machine would make it possible to fill up all the cracks with cement, and make the bridge as firm as ever. He told of other old-time structures that had been repaired in this way. By means of the grouting machine, liquid cement is blown by compressed air into the very heart of the wall, no matter of what thickness, whether the fissure be wide or as narrow as a sheet of cardboard.

This plan was accepted as the ideal one to meet the needs of the bridge. Assuming the structure to be grouted up, and thus secured from falling, it was a comparatively easy matter to strengthen the foundations by building a box of vertical timber around each pier.

An open discussion drew opinion from other noted architects that the old bridge could be saved, and at a cost small in relation to its historical and romantic value.

Under these conditions, the Town Council withdrew its scheme for a new bridge, and agreed to the plan of saving the old one.

The work has already started. It will cost some $60,000, which has been subscribed by British admirers of Burns.

SHE CAME AND WENT.

She came and went, as comes and goes
The dewdrop on the morning rose,
Or as the tender lights that die
At shut of day along the sky.
Her coming made the dawn more bright,
Her going brought the somber night;
Her coming made the blossoms shine,
Her going made them droop and pine.
Where'er her twinkling feet did pass,
Beneath them greener grew the grass;
The song birds ruffled their small throats
To swell for her their blithest notes.
But when she went, the blushing day
Sank into silence chill and gray,
The dark its sable vans unfurled,
And sudden night possessed the world.
O fond desires that wake in vain!
She ne'er will come to us again;
And now, like vanished perfume sweet,
Her memory grows more vague and fleet.
Yet we rejoice that morn by morn
The sad old world seems less forlorn,
Since once so bright a vision came
To touch our lives with heavenly flame,
And show to our bewildered eyes
What beauty dwells in paradise.

A VISIT TO THE TOMBS AND TEMPLES OF THE UPPER NILE.

By a Special Contributor.

THE Nile voyage is one of those supreme experiences of a lifetime by which all subsequent experiences are destined to be measured. The days dawn in splendor and go down to the sunset hour with every minute full of wonderful happenings. Then the swift darkness of the tropics enshrouds us with its mantle and the silent nights under the Egyptian skies are filled with unutterable delights.

Ever southward toward the Southern Cross and the magic Isle of Isis our staunch little Nile boat, "El Kahira," breasts the current of the historic stream; passing, day after day, an ever-changing panorama of strange oriental life, set amid such a luxuriant tropical vegetation, and such stupendous ruins of a bygone age that we are lost in wonder and delight. This voyage of 580 miles from Cairo to the First Cataract has perhaps no equal in all the world. The river is like a ribbon of burnished silver set in a valley of loveliest green and encompassed by boundless deserts of golden sands. Above us a sky of infinite beauty glows with the glorious blue of this rainless region. Far in the distance the silver tide of the mysterious river is dotted with sails which flash in the sunlight, while groves of stately palms nod their feathery plumes over the mud huts of the fellahin, and the distant mountain ranges glow with wondrous hues of red and purple. It is a picture of radiant loveliness, growing upon us day by day as we gradually succumb to the full witchery of this wondrous valley.

The great Necroplis of Memphis, the sculptured tombs of Benihasan, and the gray old temples of Abydos and Denderele, have each in turn amazed us by their ponderous immensity and marvelous workmanship; and at last we come to Thebes, the ancient "city of a hundred gates," where the Kahireh anchors almost beneath the shadows of that colossal colonnade which is the chief glory of the Temple of Luxor; and here we spend one supremely delightful week, living in utmost comfort upon the dahabeyah and rambling with our dragoman day after day among the most stupendous ruins in the world's richest treasure-land of ancient history. Day by day we revel in the inexhaustible glories of Karnak and Luxor and penetrate to the farthest confines of the great Necropolis of Thebes.

Donkeying across the plains of Western Thebes and through the dusty and suffocating defiles of the Valley of Bab-el-Molook we explore the great royal burying place of ancient Khem—the tombs of the Egyptian kings. After the pyramids, these are probably the most remarkable sepulchural structures in the world, being immense chambers from three to four hundred feet long, cut into the solid rock of the mountains and decorated with a lavishness of sculpture and painted ornament hard to conceive. These are the royal tombs of the three great dynasties of the new empire, dating from 1600 to 950 B.C. The tombs so far excavated number about forty, besides the twenty tombs of the queens, located in another valley. From one to another of these mighty sepulchers we pass, groping, by the dim light of candles carried in our hands, down steep stone stairways, smoothly worn by the feet of thirty centuries, slippery and intensely dark; bewildered by the beauty and intricacy of the carvings and paintings which cover every inch of available space upon the walls and ceilings; crushed, almost by the overwhelming sense of the might of that ancient nation which could build such sepulchers for its dead kings. We can only wonder at the multitudes of artists, sculptors and stone workers whose lives must have been spent within these gloomy mountain depths.

A dozen of the great tombs have revealed their beauties to the light of our torches and candles, and we emerge into the dazzling light of the Egyptian midday; tired, dusty, surfeited with the wonders of ancient Egypt, and well-nigh famished, with a good five miles of desert sand between us and the Kahireh's dining table. But Mohammed to the rescue! Our dragoman's thoughtfulness has provided a welcome feast, which has come to us across the plains on a camel's back. The hamper is quickly emptied and the festive cloth is spread upon a huge monolith in one of the splendid tombs of Egypt ancient kings. Think of it! A picnic in the tomb of a Pharaoh who ruled over this mighty land more than three thousand years ago! But the hungry "howadji" lose sight, for the moment, of the great past of the land of Khem, and confine themselves to the gastronomic joys of the present, while sculptured Isis and Osiris look down from the ancient walls in shocked surprise at such unwonted merriment.

Regretfully leaving behind us the splendors of Edfu and passing on either shore a constantly changing panorama of lovely vistas among the palms, and sandstone mountain ranges glowing with colors which no artist would have the audacity to transfer to canvas, we come to Kom Ombos, whose beautiful ruined temple deserves more than a passing notice; and then on to Assuan and the First Cataract of the Nile. At Assuan it has never rained within the memory of man, and the fellah of Upper Egypt regards with absolute incredulity all tales of the, to him, seemingly impossible phenomenon of water falling from the sky. Leaving the Kahireh at anchor below the town we sail around the historic island of Elephantine in a felucca, the wild Nubian boatmen singing their weird songs as they row. On camel back we journey across the Nubian desert southward in the direction of Philae, passing on our way through a camp of the Bisharines, Ethiopian Arabs as black as night, who distinguish themselves from all other Arab tribes by their disgusting habit of soaking their long, woolly hair in mutton tallow and castor oil. Near by are the far-famed quarries of Assouan or ancient Syene, from which all the obelisks and colossal statues of ancient Egypt were taken. One mighty monolith still lies in the quarry, half cut from its rocky bed, just as the workmen left it thirty centuries ago. From the quarries we travel on for miles through wastes of burning sand, passing through a lonely Arab graveyard in the desert, and at last, at the Nubian village of Shellal, we come again to the living shores of the Nile. A felucca ferries us across its gently flowing waters to that green spot of loveliness which was in the ancient times, and still is, the crowning glory of the Land of Khem, the sacred Island of Philae, where the great god Osiris was reputed to have found sepulchre.

"By the ghost of Him who sleeps in Philae" was the ancient Egyptians' most sacred oath, and serves to show the intensely devout character of that eminently religious nation. And truly, Philae is a fit place for a god to sleep! An enchanted island it is, set like a gem among the sparkling waters of the Upper Nile, with the roar of the First Cataract chanting its requiem; wreathed in the grateful shade of the palms, and with the awful solitude of the Nubian desert creeping hungrily to the very water's edge; Philae, with her peerless Kiosk and her ruined, but glorious Temple of Isis, where last in all this [illegible] the altar fires wafted their incense to the sculptured deities of the ancient Land of [illegible]

The parting view of Philae is a picture of surpassing beauty; a fit memory of that scene of ancient splendor with which to bid the land of the Pharaohs a last farewell. The sun has set, like a great ball of fire, behind the red Libyan Mountains, and the Egyptian shadows have quickly enwrapped us like a shroud. Then the Queen of Night lifts her glorious orb behind the palm groves of Nubian Sheilal, casting long bars of silvery light across the towering pylons of Isis; the voices of the night mingle gently with the distant anthem of the cataract; the "bul-bul" bird sings to his mate among the palms, and over all, the moon's soft radiance is shed, lending to the splendid ruins of this [illegible] a sublime and ineffable charm, enthralling our senses with the matchless picture of Egypt's bygone grandeur enwrapped in the unutterable glory of an Egyptian night; truly—

"A thing of beauty and a joy forever,
Its loveliness increases, it will never Pass into nothingness."

SWORD-MAKING—A RARE BUSINESS.

"Last year," said a sword maker, "over 40,00 swords [illegible] to turn out 70,000. But the sword crop [illegible] rises.

"The steel comes from Western Pennsylvania in four-foot strips, each length an inch and a half wide. A sword takes nine days to make, and goes through [illegible] processes.

"The proving room is our most interesting one. There each blade is proved—first, as to surface; second, as to temper and edge; third, as to bending.

"In the surface test, the blade is screwed into a vise, and brought down flat with great force onto a steel table, a heavy cap covering all to prevent accident, if the sword breaks, from flying splinters. In the second test, the back and edge are struck by a skilled swordsman against an iron block. In the third test the sword must bend into a curve of a certain number of degrees, according to its length. The best swords must bend into a perfect circle.

"The best swords, further, are put through the famous Toledo test. They are thrust against plates of iron.

"Our swords cost from $15 up, and of course presentation swords run into a lot of money. The last we made cost [illegible]. The pattern of the blade was specially designed and inscribed, and the scabbard was of fishskin, mounted with 22-carat gold. The handle was of gold [illegible]

"The Czar of Russia, the Sultan of Turkey, and the [illegible] all have swords ranging in value from [illegible] to $20,000, but even these are outdone by the [illegible] worn by many native Indian princes, who utilize the golden hilts of their swords as [illegible] whole fortunes in precious stones. The Gaekwar of Baroda has a carved sword whose scabbard and hilt are encrusted with diamonds, rubies and emeralds of the first water, the whole being valued [illegible]

"Actors are good patrons of the swordmaker. Sir [illegible] had a fine collection of swords, while [illegible]'s and Richard Mansfield's collections are [illegible] England."

A Summer Idyl.

TOLD IN A SERIES OF LETTERS AND A CLIPPING.

[From the German of Edwin Bormann.]

HAMPELSDORF, July 10.

Dear Husband: I have been since yesterday evening in the renowned watering place of Hampelsdorf, to quiet my polka-dancing nerves. But goodness only knows if I shall succeed, and how. Below me is the room where the piano stands. According to section 8 of the house rules, each one of the guests at the baths has the right to set this nerve-tickler in motion for an hour every day. As not less than five music-needing women and three scale-climbing youths live in our lodging-house, the "Aurora," you can imagine that, especially on rainy days, there are not many pauses. Above me rooms a lyric poet, who, as I hear, is working very diligently on a volume of modern ballads. It seems, however, that he can poetize only when he is walking up and down in his room, booted and spurred. Since he is very industrious, as I have said, he measures his poetry-workshop at least 200 times in an hour. Next to me on the left dwells a pyrographer. You know what a horrible smell this newest form of art work gives forth. As the woman has a cold and works with closed windows, the odor comes through the keyhole and the cracks in the door, and my room smells like a mixture of joiner's shop and chemical laboratory. . . . I must stop here, for the so-called band, consisting of six valiant pikemen of the place, provided with wind instruments, is beginning to peal forth to greet me, the new arrival. Later I will pay five marks for it. "Oh, wide valleys! Oh, heights!" Inasmuch as the trumpet blows one note too high every three beats, it will probably reach the highest of the surrounding summits. But that that contributes greatly toward quieting the nerves I cannot say.

YOUR LOVING AMALIA.

HAMPELSDORF, July 11.

My Dear Husband: I have now become acquainted with all my fellow-lodgers in turn. As the charming, wild-grape-covered veranda in front of the door must be passed over by all who enter or leave the house, and with its benches, tables and chairs affords place for at least twenty persons, I thought this would be the best place to find company, and had my coffee brought out to me near the door. Until 9 o'clock not a soul appeared. Then one after another left the house.

The architect's wife from Charlottenburg, after I had been introduced to her by the landlady, immediately launched an ancient joke about our Saxon dialect, which, though not distinguished by tragic power, is nevertheless simple-hearted and good-natured. Then she rustled away, to enjoy, as she said, the charms of the place.

The college president's wife from Dresden, who followed her, after a few words of greeting made an attack on our city schools, which, according to her, are far inferior to those of Dresden. Therewith her four youngsters chased each other unrestrained over tables and benches; and when they had gone, and I sat down to my third cup of coffee, the sugar had disappeared.

The others are similar. As quickly as they came they disappeared again, until finally a fifty-year-old doctor's widow joined me and only too thoroughly supplied what the others had omitted. For three long hours she related her ailments to me—there must have been at least a dozen and a half of them—recited all the Latin names for them, and gave me such a lecture on the anatomy and physiology (or was it philology?) of the human body, that I became quite weak. I thought I could attribute this weakness partly to hunger, and was glad of the dinner in the café. But there was a practical continuation of the recent lecture, only combined with more dismal accessories. First course: Game—large pieces of meat of unfathomable origin in a sauce of enigmatical composition. Second course: Brisolettes with green peas—that is, finely chopped anatomy in the form of little sausages, accompanied by a kind of hard-shelled bullets. Third course: Fricasseed chicken. I am convinced that each of the chickens that were used had forelegs instead of the customary wings. Sauce problematical, but familiar, inasmuch as it was the same as that with the first course. It is possible that the similarity of the dishes has a quieting effect upon the nervous system. As I discovered a fly (they are probably considered huntable birds here) in the game, and a plum-stone in the brisolette, you can imagine that I did not exactly overload my stomach. By a good nap after dinner (sleep is nourishing, says Shakespeare, or was it Henrietta Davidis?) I supplied the omission, and now, after I have put this letter into the mail box, I shall repair to bed. I shall take the precaution today to lay my raincoat across the head of the bed, so that when I stretch out or strike against the headboard, my head won't roar so much as it did last night. With a hearty kiss,

YOUR AMALIA.

HAMPELSDORF, July 13.

Dearest Hubby: Although it is raining unceasingly today, a sun has risen in our house, which makes complete amends for the one that is missing in the sky. Last evening the room next to mine was taken by a Mr. von Schrader from Berlin. He succeeded immediately in gathering all the occupants of the house around him like friendly planets on the veranda. His continually cheerful mood, and the abundance of gay stories with which he regaled us, delighted great and small. Just now, for about two hours, he did card and juggling tricks, which created universal cheerfulness. Among others, he asked for my brooch, put it before all our eyes into the hand of the architect's wife, and requested her to hold it fast. Then he counted "one, two, three; please open your hand." The brooch had disappeared, and the clever man took it out of little Willie's right nostril and handed it to me with a gracious smile. Willie maintained afterward that he felt it quite distinctly as it slid slowly down.

Before going to bed Mr. von Schrader gave me a volume of the detective stories of Conan Doyle. I read until 2 o'clock in the morning. Whether that calms the nerves I do not know; but it was heavenly! So frightfully exciting, you know. That is how it happened that I did not write to you yesterday, but am just finding time for it this morning. I hear them laughing and tittering now. I must go to the veranda.

YOUR A.

HAMPELSDORF, July 18.

Dearest Hubby: Mr. von Schrader is a splendid man, a man whom every one of you could take as a model. Just think: he doesn't smoke, he doesn't take snuff, he doesn't go to the public house, and he takes off his boots, noon and night, as soon as he enters his room. And besides, so clever! Yesterday the architect's wife had a severe toothache. He hypnotized her, and in half an hour the toothache was as if blown away. This afternoon—four of us had rented a carriage and driven to the summit—one of the carriage wheels came off. Softly we slid into the ditch. Mr. von Schrader, with the coachman's help, repaired the damage in a few minutes. If any one tore his flesh with a thorn, Mr. von Schrader was at hand immediately with courtplaster. In short, he has become indispensable to us all.

With best greetings,

YOUR A.

P. S. Just now the water pipe wouldn't work. Mr. von Schrader immediately procured a metal stick and poked around in the pipe until, with a big spurt—an abominable toad made its appearance! It had stopped up the pipe. The fright went clear through my body, and I tremble even yet. Just think: it is the water that we wash in every day, with which we rinse our mouths, which we drink in coffee, cocoa and tea! Brrr!

HAMPELSDORF, July 21.

My Dear Husband: What! You begin to be jealous of Mr. von Schrader? Ha, ha! Just stand before your mirror, please, and stroke your faultless black mustache, that I like so well to pull, and then present Mr. von Schrader to yourself—a man with a snow-white full beard and dazzingly white hair, who has at least sixty years to his credit. Of course you don't need to imagine any old bogey; rather he is very active and nimble for his age. This afternoon on the promenade I wrenched my foot, and he supported me on his arm a full hour's walk home. In the evening we had some more fun. The kitchen maid had gone out and had taken the pantry key with her. Outside it was raining and blowing fearfully. Either we had to wade through a deluge to the café or go hungry to bed. But as soon as Mr. von Schrader heard of the trouble, he was downstairs, took out his pocket knife, and one, two, three, the door sprang open amid a general shout!

Unfortunately, I have to record a little misfortune. I miss my gold watch with the charming diamonds. I must have lost it on the promenade. Tomorrow it shall be inserted in the little newspaper.

With a thousand kisses,

YOUR AMALIA.

HAMPELSDORF, July 22.

My Dear Husband: Our sun has suddenly been extinguished. This morning two young men from Berlin arrived, and were taken to Mr. von Schrader's room. After a few minutes we learned from the landlady that the poor man had received bad tidings. His nephews had come to take him away. Immediately after, we all (like a herd of sheep frightened by a thunderstorm, I had almost said) were gathered on the veranda, when Mr. von Schrader came out of the house, saluted on both sides with his hand, and went slowly away through the garden. The two nephews followed him closely. It was very sad, and some of us shed tears, among them

YOUR LOVING AMALIA.

P. S. Just now the architect's wife rushed downstairs. From her locked trunk a 1000-mark bill has disappeared.

LEIPZIG, July 25.

Dearest Amalia: The fate of your "indispensable splendid man" I pity sincerely. But as soon as you have read the enclosed newspaper clipping, pack your duds immediately and hurry back, in order to recover in the quiet and safety of the city from all frights and losses of your vacation. You are awaited lovingly by

YOUR FAITHUL HUSBAND.

N. B. This clipping is from this evening's paper.

BERLIN, July 22.—Today, in Hampelsdorf, where he was recovering from the fatigue of his strenuous activities under the name of a Mr. von Schroeder or Schrader, the notorious burglar, Protzke, was arrested. Upon his short-sheared Swedish head he wore a gray wig. Two police officers in citizens' clothes escorted him safely to Berlin in the evening train.

After Christmas Trees.

A DELIGHTFUL TRIP INTO THE WOODS OF CANADA.

By a Special Contributor.

SAINT PETER stopped writing in his Book of Fate. Then he said: "Oui, oui." Then he laughed.

To have heard Saint Peter's laugh is to have gained a year of life. It gurgles from his throat like wine from a long-necked bottle—now on and on as if a tall glass were being filled, and again stopping short as if the bottle had suddenly been set upright while Saint Peter looks surprised as if he did not know it happened.

Saint Peter had said "Oui, oui" because he was French and had been asked if he had room for six people to stop with him for a month. He had laughed because it was a big thing for six people to come at once to his little hotel in this Canada town which the Christmas tree men had chosen for their headquarters. Another might have wondered how he could manage it, but this St. Pierre—for such was his name on the hotel stationery—only laughed.

Oui, oui. Yes, yes. Saint Peter could do it, even if there were two women in the party, and he laughed again as he led the way up the narrow wooden stair, through a garrret-like room that he called the ballroom, and showed us where we were to live for a month. We laughed too, for we had promised to be game if the men let us go for Christmas trees. What was good enough for them must be good enough for us.

We did not dare even to scream when the mice ran across the carpet as we entered. Instead, we began to admire the carpet, a truly wonderful carpet made of burlap sacking painted with water color in fanciful designs (large purple cats and yellow fleurs de lis predominating) by little Madame Saint Peter on days when the barroom had all the patronage there was at the hotel and she had to cook and wash and iron for the family. Nor did we say a word when, the first night of our stay, the rain came through the cheese-cloth ceiling upon the bed. We merely spread our cravenette coats over the covers and snuggled under to keep dry.

The first morning repaid us for the cost of discomfort. We started out early with the "Boss" to prospect for balsam and spruce, the two evergreens most used for Christmas trees. It was late October, and the landscape lay all green and gold in the mellow morning light—green where the long grasses grew rank in the marshy pasture lands, gold where the sugar bush covers every knoll and hillet. And fringing every patch of sugar maple stood the somber, sentinel-like balsam and spruce, dark shadows bringing out the high lights of the picture.

Always it was toward the dark fringes that the "Boss" led the way on these prospecting tours; and to reach them we waded boot-top deep in the crackling gold showered and showering from the maples, with all the good smells of autumn in the air about us. He seemed scarcely to look at the evergreens after he reached them, yet he knew at once whether they were the size and shape for Christmas trees; and if they were he set off at once to find the owner of the land.

To the Canada farmer it was a puzzle what "them York-Staters" wanted with the balsams, as indeed it was to his Yankee brother "daown country" for many years until men came every season at the same time and asked to be allowed to cut them down. Then the Yankee farmer began to ask money for what at first he had been pleased to grant for nothing, for the balsam and spruce are pests to the farmer, spreading over his pastures, pulling the strength from the soil, turning his acres into waste land.

This being the first year the Christmas-tree men had gone into Canada, the trees cost practically nothing on the stump, and the Canadian dairymen had visions of having their land cleared without paying for it—visions that vanished into thin air when they discovered that the cutting of a carload or two of trees from a single lot made almost no impression. They did not know, though the Christmas-tree men did, that on every stump left standing the top branches would turn up and grow into perfect trees, perhaps as many as three or four on a single stump. The balsam and spruce hold fast to life, and those who fear that the cutting of Christmas trees is a menace to the northern woods know not whereof they fear.

man knows that after October no into the sky can be trusted, and if before his trees are cut he will and create even more doubts of the Claus than he loses dollars.

The "Boss" cut all his own trees, none but the best, and it takes a glance that the branches grow in the tree full and fine in shape, down, while we were yet walking fectly sure it was a good one to ute he had trimmed the straggling the lower end, up to the first perfect

Opening the blisters for Canadian balsam

Following the trail of the cutter

Sawing off the butt ends

Drawing trees out of the woods

We followed close to the cutter's heels, and "Murphy" and the "Giant" an open of the balsam patch to wind big balls of tying the trees.

When the rope was ready it was

Sometimes when the cutter got too far
"Murphy" would sing out: "Here, girls,
Come and play horse awhile."

And it was fun, because we did not gather up a tree or two in each hand and to the "Giant's" tying place. And when too far behind, or too lonesome, with against him, he would call for help; and take his knife and sit down on the rope for him. Though there was the "Boss's" mind whether this was hindrance.

Best of all in these first warm, lazy

it seemed to turn suddenly and go only a few acres away from where it monotone.

The sober, dark-robed balsams had selves in garlands and puff balls of [illegible] they might be made to look when dressed in bright Christmas trappings. Over the fallen logs the ivy had wound itself like a fluffy feather boa, and on the grasses and shrubs it hung in glittering crystals. Here and there a fern lifted its head above the white [illegible], and the red partridge berries peeped through. The sturdy little "mountain boys" stood out boldly, and the creeping pine wove in and out, looking a fresher green in contrast with the white.

Only the cutter failed to see the beauty there was in the change. Whenever he swung his ax into a tree, it shook its soft puff balls in a mist about his head, and after a day of this he went home drenched to the skin. In the early morning, too, the trees were frozen through and through, and it took two strokes of the ax instead of one to fell them. The branches were brittle and apt to snap off and ruin the tree as it fell. So the work was slow until the sun came high enough to thaw the [illegible]

The snow made the work of dragging out a little [illegible], but always the trees left such a beautiful trail [illegible] snow that we could not see how the men could [illegible] the extra pull.

And there was a new joy in following the tracks of the little creatures of which we had seen no sign before. There were the deep little rows of holes made by the [illegible], and the broad marks of the rabbit's moccasins, and the far-apart prints of the red fox who [illegible] let himself be seen, taking warning by the [illegible] that came within gun range and were carried [illegible] at night to vary the monotony of Saint Peter's "roas' beef—roas' pork."

[illegible] many days we no longer carried our luncheon [illegible] the woods, but left it at the farmhouse. And on going in at noon we would find the allowance [illegible] Saint Peter supplemented by a cup of hot [illegible] plate of newly-baked biscuit, or a steaming dish [illegible] in blankets," as they call baked and boiled [illegible] in the Canada backwoods; and always a pitcher [illegible] best maple syrup in the world. For the farmer's wife is a hospitable soul and "right glad to see a stranger now and then." And as [illegible] half-dozen strangers all at once, such a treat [illegible] leaving the family wash in the tub or the irons [illegible] fire, or the bread dough to take care of itself. [illegible] we ate, the farmer's wife and daughters [illegible] by and tell us all the family history, and all [illegible] of all the families in all the country round. In this way we learned that we were stopping in [illegible] town in Canada, and heard dire tales of [illegible] men drank much whisky and high wine, and [illegible] the men, but some of the men's wives! And [illegible] the weeks at Saint Peter's hostelry, which [illegible] rendezvous for all the joyous spirits thereabouts, [illegible] saw anything worse than the night two or [illegible]-Canadians, well seasoned with high wine, [illegible] sitting on the hot stove thinking it was a [illegible] of course only the men saw that.

[illegible] those farmers' wives we learned again that [illegible] not always what they seem. We learned [illegible] its seeming, the people of this part of [illegible] do not live by their butter and cheese, their [illegible] and syrup and their saints alone; but that [illegible] do not smuggle themselves or do not make [illegible] they do smuggle, can always turn an honest, [illegible] very honorable, penny, by informing on their [illegible]. And there were good stories of how the officers swooped down upon the very house [illegible] in search of contraband tobacco, and how [illegible] in his fright forgot that the caddies were in the [illegible] and was about to allow the officers to enter when [illegible] turned them aside long enough to sink one [illegible] a milk can and drop the other out of the [illegible] before the search was made.

[illegible] came on and brought the thought of [illegible] we remembered that balsam pillows [illegible] nice gifts for friends in town who seldom [illegible] woods. The balsam odor is good to quiet [illegible] bring sleep when it does not come of its [illegible] and it is said to have other healing qualities. So for many days we kept ourselves busy [illegible] tender little green tips that are the new [illegible] the resinous buds on the end. We put [illegible] cheesecloth bags, and at night sewed up the [illegible] them all ready for a soft silk cover.

[illegible] "Boss" took cold from his snow baths, [illegible] that the Canada balsam has its virtue [illegible] affections, and has a market value as well for [illegible] microscopic work. Even in winter the balsam [illegible] from the blisters formed under the bark, [illegible] caused the Indians to call the balsam fir [illegible] meaning blisters. By breaking the blister [illegible] be gathered in a spoon and drained into [illegible] and it is a good thing to take home and keep [illegible] medicine closet.

[illegible] pillow-making, and balsam-gathering, and [illegible] rabbits and foxes, with helping the men a [illegible] loafing on the piles of balsam much, the days [illegible] and the first of December came, luckily, before the heavy snow.

[illegible] lots of a dozen farmers the piles of bundles [illegible] high, five or six hundred trees being a good [illegible] for the one cutter. For several weeks now [illegible] been busy hauling the trees out to the railroad, [illegible] they lay piled like a great barricade along [illegible]. The last load brought a dozen giants, none [illegible] thirty feet in length, each bound separately. [illegible] for the New York market and were meant [illegible] the eyes of hundreds of little ones lying in [illegible] other hundreds who have gone very regularly [illegible] Sunday-school in the weeks before Christmas, [illegible] right to be remembered as a good little boy [illegible] Santa Claus.

[illegible] that remained to be done was to saw the [illegible] of all smooth and even so they would look [illegible] cut when they reached the market; [illegible] all, the loading on the cars. Even with [illegible] thousand trees this was quickly done, [illegible] now worked together, and inside a week [illegible] their way to join the string of 400 carloads it takes to supply New York alone with its million trees.

And then one day we said good-by to Saint Peter, who could not divide his time between tending bar and the baby, and to Madame Saint Peter, who had cooked so faithfully our "roas' beef—roas' pork" and our "fillins in blankets" and had made all the beds and swept, and found time to do our laundry besides; and Saint Peter drove us with his one-horse "team" to the little box-like station, where the agent took down his flag and swung its cobwebby folds to the breeze. The town of Stukely has no place on the map, and so rarely is the train flagged that the engineer has to aim very carefully to make the small platform. But for a half-dozen pasengers he dared not fail, and with a loud whistle and much puffing of steam he did it, and with a ringing of the bell we were off—homeward bound.

Our holiday in the woods was over. Our partnership with Santa Claus was ended, though for the men there was still the work of unloading the cars in the city and the sale of trees at the "farm" as the market place in New York is called and all the anxiety as to the weather, for at the last minute a heavy fall of snow may make the value of a carload of trees dwindle to the cost of getting or less. And it is dollars, not pleasure alone, that takes the Christmas tree gang into the north woods.

BERTHA H. SMITH.

The New Father.

HOW HE WON AND KEPT THE HEART OF THE BOY.

From the Westminster Gazette.

"SHAN'T take the leastest notice of him," replied the boy doggedly. "Decided on that long ago."

"Wonder your mother—oh, we're not going to say anything against her, my dear. Not a word. Especially in front of you. All that I personally was about to remark, being never a one to create mischief, was that I wondered you, as your mother's only child, hadn't been took to the wedding, that's all!"

"I was asked," said the boy, swinging round. The lady neighbors, in an agony of inquisitiveness, begged him not to go, urging that their time was their own, that no occasion existed for hurry, that his mother and her new husband would not be back from church for a good twenty minutes yet. He disregarded these appeals, and as he went out of the street their shrill voices followed him in diminishing volume.

"Don't you be put upon, my lad."

"You be true to your own father, who hasn't gone much more'n the twelvemonth."

"Tell him what you think about him. Don't mince matters."

"If my old man was to go off sudden, only some of us never 'ave no luck——"

A last sentence, curling round the corner, was not apparently intended to reach him; it described someone as a conceited child, who, did he belong to another family, would receive a thoroughly good shaking. He went on toward the gates of the park, giving his features another screw to indicate moodiness, and endeavoring to conceal pride at finding himself, an object of interest. Folk, standing at doorways, recognized him and nodded to each other significantly. They had seen the carriage drive by on its way to church; postponing domestic duties, they were now awaiting its return. They would have preferred a funeral, but in this world one had to take what one could get and be thankful. A few beckoned to the boy; he went on grimly, his head down, hands deep in knickerbocker pockets. He would have passed by the semicircular crowd near the church only that his name was called—called by a voice which he generally obeyed.

"Kep' your word, then, Teddy Johnson?"

"I have so. When I say a thing I mean it."

"Quite expected to see you hop out of the carriage," said the girl vivaciously. "I was prepared to holler something to you."

"Very kind attention on your part, I'm sure. Disappointed for once in your life. It'll jest learn you another time not to make too——"

"'Ere they come!"

The boy, too short to be able to see over people's heads, caught a glimpse of his young mother stepping into the carriage; the colleagues of his new stepfather reserved all their felicitations for the bridegroom, covering him with confetti; willing hands held him by the sleeves until the last bag had been emptied carefully over him. As the carriage drove away, everybody gave signals of amusement, excepting only the boy.

"Come on!" he said to the girl. "Makes me feel abs'lutely suffocated. Let's go and get some fresh air."

"I like your new suit."

"It just does," he remarked disparagingly. "I could have managed very well without it. I could have done without the occasion for it. They think they're going to find me at 'ome when they get there, but they won't!"

"You'll get a jolly good welting."

"He don't dare touch me," declared the boy. "I've took advice on the subject. My own father—of course he was different. But this man's a interloper. He's got no more right to touch me than any stranger in the street has."

"He may not have the right," said the girl, "but he's got the walking stick."

They went up the path to the Observatory—a path so steep that even youth economizes breath in making the ascent. Arrived there, they walked at the side of the broad avenue toward Blackheath. The joyousness of other folk increased the boy's depression; he scowled at the world with so much desperation that a lordly baby with two nurses in attendance, on catching sight of him, burst into tears.

"You'll do some damage presently," warned the girl.

"I mean to."

"But you needn't wreak your vengeance on everybody. You've got a grievance, I admit, but it isn't everyone's fault."

"I'm not going back back 'ome and chance it."

"Not till mealtime, I s'pose."

"If I was older I'd go a bit lower down the river and get taken on a boat, and go right away somewhere and disappear. Then perhaps someone would feel sorry."

"Or not," suggested the girl.

"I sh'd leave a line saying why I'd done it. Telling her it was all her fault, and so forth and so on. Then in years to come, back I sh'd return with a brown beard——"

"Oh, my gracious goodness!"

"It's been done before," he said gruffly, "and it could be done again. She wouldn'a know me, and I could lead up to it gently by asking whether she'd ever had a son."

"Whereupon you'd unhook your brown beard, I s'pose, and——"

"Excuse me," said the boy. "It would be a real one."

"You know what happens when anyone makes me laugh," urged the girl warningly; "I get hiccoughs, and then I can't talk for at least ten minutes."

They became more friendly when on the heath, the girl, producing a ball from the pocket of her frock, started a game of catch. He so far dismissed his worries presently as to offer to show the deadly accuracy of his bowling. She consented to stand for wickets, and whenever the ball failed to hit her he declared she had moved; whenever the ball did strike her she declared she had stepped out to meet it. She admitted he had improved, declining, however, to say what the results would be were he playing on good ground and against notable batsmen. The boy told her that but for the intervention of urgent personal matters he had always favored the life of a cricketer; the more so that Kent was a county which required increase of bowling strength.

"Isn't it time you saw about getting 'ome, Teddy Johnson?"

"I may not be going to do all I planned out," replied the boy, "but I'm going to give 'em a fright, and chance it."

"You mean you're going 'ome now?"

"I mean I'm going to stay out all night."

"You ought to be ashamed," said the girl, "to worry your mother like that. You don't know what we poor women have to put up with."

"She's brought it on herself," he retorted.

"How about money?"

"He give me a bob this morning."

"Wish I had a new father," remarked the girl.

"Don't you breathe a word to a soul," he urged; "mind that! I haven't told anyone else. I want 'em to be scared out of their lives. I want 'em to be going to and fro from the Police Station, telegraphing here, there and everywhere. It's only right, mind you! S'posing I married you, and s'posing I was took away, you wouldn't think of marrying again in less than eighteen months' time, would you, now?"

"Depends whether anyone asted me."

She consented to walk part of the way with him to Woolwich—this in answer to his eloquent appeal. Being now on the very edge of adventure, it seemed that his courage required the aid of companionship. A shout from behind stopped him, and finding it had been caused by some triumph in bowling, he ran back. Two teams of about six a side were snatching a game from the autumn; his stepfather, notable by reason of the whiteness of his shirt sleeves, was receiving congratulations, not on the event of the day.

"Never told me he could do anything at cricket," remarked the boy in tones of injury.

"Play!" shouted the fielding side.

"Middle stump!" cried the boy excitedly.

"Try to manage one more this over," called out the fielding side, "and you'll have done the hat trick."

The girl came up and gave a tug at the jacket of the absorbed, interested boy. He took no notice until the last ball of the over had sent the bails flying.

"Don't you wait about for me," he said to her. "You run along. "I'm going to walk 'ome with my new father!"

W. PETT RIDGE.

A PARROT STORY.

"I just bought this parrot of a butcher," said the sailor. "It's a rare sort—a gold beak. I got it at a bargain, too. A dollar. The butcher had paid six for it.

"But it seems the man what sold it to him was a practical joker. He had knowed the parrot was to ornament a butcher shop, and he had taught it to say the wust thing possible for such a locality."

The sailor took out a red handkerchief and dusted the bars of the big cage carefully.

"This here parrot," said the sailor, "didn't last long, for from his perch above the butcher's scales he kep' a-singin' out in a sarcastic voice:

"'Lovely meat. Don't tell the lady what it weighs. Just tell her what it comes to.'"

WORN-OUT BILLIARD BALLS.

In the billiard-room a dozen tables were in full blast, and through the hum of conversation the click of ivory balls came sharp and clear.

"What becomes of your worn-out balls?" said an idler.

"Well," the man at the desk replied, "when a ball is only a little off, it is sent to the factory to trued up. We get our balls trued up until they become too small for use. Then we sell them at so much per ounce.

"After their sale they are carved into various small trinkets, but in the main they are made into dice. Of the forty or fifty balls rolling and clicking busily here this evening, it is safe to say that 90 per cent. of them a few years hence will be working just as hard in the form of dice."

The Monastery at Beuron

On the Monastery

The Old Monastery at Tegernsee

AT Beuron, the most picturesque spot in the romantic Danube Valley, between Sigmaringen and Tuttlingen, stands the one monastery that has been permitted in the German empire since the enforcement of the law against monastic institutions. It is, too, in the Kaiser's own Hohenzollern, and to a woman, a princess of the royal house, it owes its existence.

"Uphill and downhill, wherever you find a large building," wrote J. von Scheffel in "Ekkehard," "which like a fortress, commands a whole tract of land or blocks up the entrance to a valley, or forms a central point of crossing highways, or that lies buried among vineyards, famous for exquisite wines—there the passing tourist, until the contrary has been proved to him—may boldly advance the assertion that the house in question belongs, or, rather, belonged, to the order of St. Benedict."

But today in Germany the monasteries of St. Benedict "belonged;" for the houses of this order, as well as of all other orders, stand merely as reminders of past church wealth and glory. In every locality they are to be found, great buildings about which cluster the most sacred traditions, falling into ruins, some of them, or converted into factories as that at St. Blasien, business houses as those at Munich, breweries as those at St. Ettal and Tegernsee in Bavaria, or hotels as the old monastery at Constance. This was one of the results of that bitter kulturkampf which Bismarck waged so relentlessly during his chancellorship. While he was in power, Beuron was uninhabiated. And it was no mean victory for friends of the monastic system in Germany, when, after its fiery opponent's death, this monastery was quickened into life.

On account of its culture of art and music Beuron was one of the most famous of German monasteries, and for this reason its abrogation was considered a blow to the artistic life of the empire. It was established in 1007, and for 800 years it thrived. Monarchs, soldiers and great church dignitaries were entertained within its walls. It grew rich through the cultivation of its valuable properties and was distinguished throughout South Germany for the decoration of its cloisters and chapels and for its wonderful choir of men's voices.

When it was secularized, in the early part of the nineteenth century, the monks found an asylum in the mother convent of the order at Monte Cassino, Italy. It was reopened in 1865, only to be closed after ten years by order of Prince Bismarck. Then every effort at reestablishment was unsuccessful until the Abbot, Dr. Marius Walter, interested Princess Katherine of Hohenzollern, and she, after the retirement of Prince Bismarck, obtained the consent of her relative, the Kaiser, for the return of the monks.

They returned so quietly and unostentatiously that Germany scarcely knew of their presence until they settled down in their old ways. Beuron is no longer on the great thoroughfare from the north to the south and the knights and pilgrims that once traveled the Danube have passed away and the great trunk lines of continental traffic have other courses. Visitors are few, and they are mostly travelers who come to admire the beauties of the valley. This isolation has been helpful and Beuron has modestly thrived.

The brothers dropped back into their art work where their predecessors had left it. They obliterated from the buildings the marks that time and weather had stamped upon them while unoccupied; they restored the beautiful frescoes and paintings in the chapel and the cloisters, they laid out paths and roads through their grand domain and began the cultivation of the fields.

With their brushes and pallettes they have even gone forth from within its walls. A beautiful little chapel built after the model of a Roman roadside chapel has been decorated in modern impressionist style. Upon the side of the inn appears a well-executed copy of Murillo's "Immaculate Conception;" a copy of Rubens's "Crucifixion" covers the entire end of the café, and a varied collection of copies of old masters decorates the interior of the bravery. So far has this spirit of decoration extended that the big old barn has been given a coat of red paint and liberally strewn over with German proverbs in yellow, admonishing thrift and integrity.

To maintain the ancient traditions of the monastery, a school for the study of church and religious art has been established. The work of the brothers appears in the cards for shrines and places of pilgrimages and in illuminated editions of the scriptures and prayer and other religious books. In their illuminated editions they strive for the same effects that marked the work of the monks of old convents, and they keep alive an art that flourished in the Middle Ages.

When the monastery reopened there were less than 100 monks; now there are about 125. After we had walked through the quiet cloisters, past the little cell-like rooms of the brotherhood, and had seen the faithful workmen bending devoutly at their tasks, my guide and I came out upon the green meadow that sloped down to the Danube. My guide pointed to the well-cared-for fields and told me that with their own labor the monks produced from the soil more than enough for their own maintenance and that of the poor of the neighborhood. When I asked him if they felt secure in their possession, as an answer he called my attention to the improvements that they had made in the property, to the development of the natural resources and the establishment of their art school.

Europe has few more picturesque valleys than the one in which Beuron lies. The narrow strip of land through which the Danube lazily flows from the monastery grounds to Sigmaringen is lined by great gray crags that rise from dark foliage on steep slopes. Quaint villages with dark tile roofs and time-stained walls seem to have gone to sleep at the foot of a precipice or at some widening point of the valley, and to be still sleeping on. On every prominent summit crumbles a castle that was the medieval home of a German baron who laid tribute on the unfortunate traveler that ventured along this then thoroughfare from North to South Europe. There are legends and romances that have been the foundation for many a German story book. The country people tell them of each of the old castles, of the crags and of the caves; and in their imagination the former dwellers of the valley, caparisoned knights, robber barons, sighing maidens and Druids, come again in the night time and act over again their respective parts.

You are scarcely out of Sigmaringen and across the broad level meadow in front of the castle before you are in the town of Laiz. High above the roofs of the little houses rises a great gray church tower, upon which is a painting of St. Christopher, the patron saint, his feet in the grass at the foundation, and his head high up on the belfry. It is a striking piece of ornamentation that can be seen for miles. Rain and sunshine have now and then faded the good man's garments, and the have been repaired with such paint as the town affords, and this may account for the fact that one generation of Laiz children believe that St. Christopher wore blue trousers, and another that he wore red.

Further on is the summer home of the Crown Prince of Hohenzollern. From its windows the young man can look up the valley to the fine old castle on the rocks at Sigmaringen that he hopes some time to occupy. In the rear of the palace are the miserable hovels occupied by the Prince's retainers. In front a great lawn sweeps down to the Danube and groves of firs and pines roll over the hills toward the east. A small foot bridge crosses one of the streams on the grounds. On it is one of those ever-present "Verboten" signs. It forbids you to ride or drive over the bridge. You could not if you wished, for there is scarce space for a foot passenger.

The valley becomes so narrow that the great crags on the opposite sides of the river almost meet overhead. One of the points that jut out from the wall of rocks formed a part of the auter defence of an old robber's lair. The baron that lived and robbed there had a particularly advantageous position as regards travelers southward bound, but there must have been poor picking for him in the pilgrims that his neighbors below let past.

Of somewhat more recent date is the next ruin, a great round tower, the donjon of massive Dietfurt, that clung to the rocks on the hillside and gave its lord and master, one Dietrich Nusplungen, a good lookout both up and down the valley. But he must have gone to sleep one day or night, for the Gutensteins, his neighbors to the south, stole upon him. The Dietrichs had a sad but glorious day, and there is no record that any of them were ever afterward seen in that section of the country.

The Gutensteins, however, flourished. The castle, which is still in possession of a branch of the family, rises, a five-story, white stone building, from the bank of the Danube. The village that bears their name clusters around the old structure, the twenty or thirty little flat houses appearing still squattier the Gutensteins in the latter part of tury endeavored to make amends of his ancestors by his rigid prosecu infested the valley. He made such highwaymen and thieves that he the "Criminal's Terror."

Goodness that Grates.

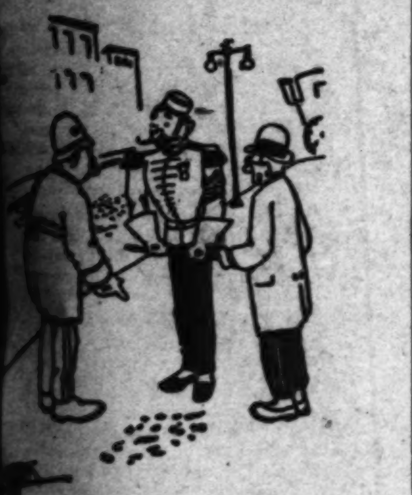
AN ENGLISHMAN'S COMMENTS ON CONTINENTAL CUSTOMS.

By Jerome K. Jerome.

The chief advantage that the foreigner possesses over the Englishman is that he is born good. He does not have to try to be good, as we do. He does not start the new year with the resolution to be good, and succeed, barring accidents, in being so till the middle of January. He just is good all the year round. When a foreigner is told to mount or descend from a tram on the right side, it does not occur to him that it would be humanly possible to secure egress from or ingress to that tram from the offside. In Brussels once I witnessed a daring attempt by a lawless foreigner to enter a tram from the wrong side. The gate was open; he was standing close behind it. A line of traffic was in his way; to have got round to the right side of that tram would have meant missing it. He entered when the conductor was not looking and took his seat. The astonishment of the conductor on finding him there was immense. How did he get there? The conductor had been watching the proper entrance and the man had not passed him. Later the true explanation suggested itself to the conductor, but for a while he hesitated to accuse a fellow human being of such crime. He appealed to the passenger himself. Was his presence there to be accounted for by miracle or by crime? The passenger confessed. It was more in sorrow than in anger that the conductor requested him at once to leave. This tram was going to be kept respectable.

The passenger proving refractory, a halt was called and the gendarmerie appealed to. After the manner of policemen, they sprang, as it were, from the ground, and came up behind an imposing officer whom I took to be a sergeant. At first the sergeant could hardly believe the conductor's statement. Even then, had the passenger asserted that he had entered by the proper entrance, his word would have been taken. Much easier to the foreign official mind would it have been to believe that the conductor had been struck by the Lord with temporary blindness than that man born of woman would deliberately have done anything expressly forbidden by a printed notice. Myself, in his case, I should have lied and saved the trouble over. But he was a proud man, or had not much sense—one of the two—and so held fast to the truth. It was pointed out to him that he must descend immediately and wait for the next tram. Other gendarmes were arriving from every quarter; resistance under the circumstances seemed hopeless. He said he would get down. He made to descend this time by the proper gate, but that was not justice. He had mounted the wrong side, he must alight the wrong side. Accordingly he was put out among the traffic, after which the conductor preached a sermon from the center of the tram on the danger of ascents and descents conducted from the wrong quarter.

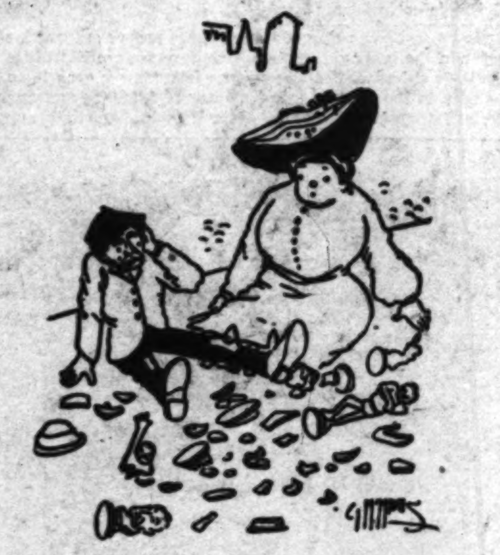
There is a law throughout Germany—an excellent law I would we had it in England—that nobody may scatter paper about the street. An English military friend told me that one day in Dresden, unacquainted with this rule, he tore a long letter he had been reading into some fifty fragments and threw them behind him. A policeman stopped him and explained to him quite politely the law upon the subject. My military friend agreed that it was a very good law, thanked the man for his information, and said that for the future he would bear it in mind. That, as the policeman pointed out, would make things right enough for the future, but meanwhile it was necessary to deal with the past—with the fifty or so pieces of paper, lying scattered about the road and pavement. My military friend, with a pleasant laugh, confessed he did not see what was to be done. The policeman, more imaginative, saw a way out. It was that my military friend should set to work and pick up those fifty scraps of paper. He is an English general on the retired list and of imposing appearance; his manner on occasion is haughty. He did not see himself on his hands and knees in the chief street of Dresden, in the middle of the afternoon, picking up paper.



AS THE POLICEMAN POINTED OUT, WOULD MAKE THINGS RIGHT FOR THE FUTURE.

The policeman himself admitted that the situation was awkward. If the English general could not accept it, there happened to be an alternative. It was that the general should accompany the policeman through the streets, followed by the usual crowd to the nearest prison, some three miles off. It being now 4 o'clock in the afternoon, they would probably find the judge departed. But the most comfortable thing possible in prison cells should be allotted to him, and the policeman had little doubt that the general, having paid his fine of forty marks, would find himself a free man again in time for lunch the following day. The general suggested hiring a boy to pick up the paper. The policeman referred to the wording of the law, and found that this would not be permitted. "I thought the matter out," my friend told me, "imagining all the possible alternatives including that of knocking the fellow down and making a bolt; and came to the conclusion that his first suggestion would, on the whole, result in the least discomfort. But I had no idea that picking up small scraps of thin paper off greasy stones was the business that I found it. It took me nearly ten minutes, and afforded amusement, I calculate, to over a thousand people. But it is a good law, mind you; all I wish is that I had known it beforehand."

On one occasion I accompanied an American lady to a German operahouse. The taking off of hats in the German Schausspielhaus is obligatory, and again I would it were so in England. But the American lady is accustomed to disregard rules made by mere man. She explained to the door-keeper that she was going to wear her hat. He, on his side, explained to her that she was not; they were both a bit short with one another. I took the opportunity to turn aside and buy a programme; the fewer people there are mixed up in an argument, I always think, the better. My companion exclaimed quite frankly to the door porter that it did not matter what he said, she was not going to take any notice of him. He did not look a talkative man at any time, and maybe this announcement further discouraged him. In any case he made no attempt to answer. All he did was to stand in the center of the doorway with a faraway look in his eyes. The doorway was some four feet wide; he was about three feet six across and weighed about twenty stone. As I explained I was busy buying a programme, and when I returned my friend had her hat in her hand and was digging pins into it; I think she was trying to make believe it was the heart of the door-keeper. She did not want to listen to the opera, she wanted to talk about that door-keeper, but they would not even let her do that. She has spent three winters in Germany since then. Now when she feels like passing through a door that is standing wide open just in front of her and which leads to just the place she wants to get to, and an official shakes his head at her and explains that she must not, but must go up two flights of stairs and along a corridor and down another flight of stairs and so get to her place that way, she apologizes for her error and trots off looking ashamed of herself.



"THE LARGE LADY HAS BEEN THROWN HALF A DOZEN YARDS AGAINST AN ITALIAN BOY."

Continental governments have trained their citizens to perfection. Obedience is the Continent's first law. The story that is told of a Spanish king who was nearly drowned because the particular official whose duty it is to dive in after Spanish kings when they tumble out of boats happened to be dead and his successor had not yet been appointed, I can quite believe.

On the continental railways if you ride second-class with a first-class ticket you render yourself liable to imprisonment. What the penalty is for riding first with a second-class ticket I cannot say—probably death, though a friend of mine came very near on one occasion to finding out. All would have gone well with him if he had not been so darned honest. He was one of those men who pride themselves upon being honest. I believe he takes a positive pleasure in being honest. He had purchased a second-class ticket for a station up a mountain, but meeting by chance on the platform a lady acquaintance, had gone with her into a first-class compartment.

On arriving at the journey's end he explained to the collector what he had done, and, with his purse in his hand, demanded to know the difference. They took him into a room and locked the door. They wrote out his confession and read it over to him, and made him sign it, and then they sent for a policeman. The policeman cross-examined him for about a quarter of an hour. They did not believe the story about the lady. Where was the lady? He did not know. They searched the neighborhood for her, but could not find her. He suggested—what turned out to be the truth—that, tired of loitering about the station, she had gone up the mountain. An anarchist outrage had occurred in a neighboring town some months before. The policeman suggested searching him for bombs. Fortunately a Cook's agent, returning with a party of tourists, arrived upon the scene and took it upon himself to explain in delicate language that my friend was a bit of an ass and could not tell first-class from second-class. It was the red cushions that had deceived my friend; he thought it was first-class, as a matter of fact it was second-class.

Everybody breathed again. The confession was torn up amid universal joy; and then the fool of a ticket collector wanted to know what about the lady—who must have traveled in a second-class compartment with a first-class ticket. It looked as if a bad time were in store for her on her return to the station. But the admirable representative of Cook was again equal to the occasion. He explained that my friend was also a bit of a liar. When he said he had traveled with this lady he was merely boasting. He would have liked to have traveled with her, that was all he meant, only his German was shaky. Joy once more entered upon the scene. My friend's character appeared to be reëstablished. He was not the abandoned wretch for whom they had taken him—only, apparently, a wandering idiot. Such a one the German official could respect. At the expense of such a one the German official even consented to drink beer.

Not only the foreign man, woman and child, but the foreign dog is born good. In England, if you happen to be the possessor of a dog much of your time is taken up dragging him out of fights, quarreling with the possessor of the other dog as to which began it, explaining to irate elderly ladies that he did not kill the cat, that the cat must have died of heart disease while running across the road, assuring disbelieving gamekeepers that he is not your dog, that you have not the faintest notion whose dog he is. With the foreign dog life is a peaceful proceeding. When the foreign dog sees a row, tears spring to his eyes, he hastens on and tries to find a policeman. When the foreign dog sees a cat in a hurry he stands aside to allow her to pass. They dress the foreign dog—some of them, in a little coat, with a pocket for his handkerchief, and put shoes on his feet. They have not given him a hat—not yet. When they do he will contrive by some means or another to raise it politely when he meets a cat he thinks he knows.

One morning in a continental city I came across a disturbance—it might be more correct to say the disturbance came across me; it swept down upon me, enveloped me before I knew that I was in it. A fox terrier it was, belonging to a very young lady—it was when the disturbance was to a certain extent over that we discovered he belonged to this young lady. She arrived toward the end of the disturbance, very much out of breath; she had been running for a mile, poor girl, and shouting most of the way. When she looked round and saw all the things that had happened, and had had other things that she had missed explained to her, she burst into tears. The English owner of a fox terrier would have given one look round and then have jumped upon the nearest tram—going anywhere. But, as I have said, the foreigner is born good. I left her giving her name and address to seven different people. But it was about the dog I wished to speak more particularly. He had commenced innocently enough, trying to catch a sparrow. Now nothing delights a sparrow more than being chased by a dog. A dozen times he thought he had the sparrow. Then another dog had got in his way. I don't know what they call this breed of dog, but abroad it is popular; it has no tail and looks like a pig—when things are going well with it. This particular specimen, when I saw him, looked more like part of a doormat. The fox terrier had seized it by the scruff of the neck and had rolled it over into the gutter just in front of a motorcycle. Its owner, a large lady, had darted out to save it, and had collided with the motorcyclist. The large lady had been thrown some half a dozen yards against an Italian boy carrying a trayload of plaster images. I have seen a good deal of trouble in my life, but never one yet that did not have an Italian image vender somehow or other mixed up in it. Where these boys hide in times of peace is a mystery. The chance of being upset brings them out as sunshine brings out flies. The motorcycle had dashed into a little milk cart and had spread it out neatly in the middle of the tram lines. The tram traffic looked like being stopped for a quarter of an hour; but the idea of every approaching tram driver appeared to be that by ringing his bell with sufficient vigor this seeming obstruction would fade away and disappear.

In an English town all this would not have attracted much attention. Somebody would have explained that a dog was the original cause, and the whole series of events would have appeared ordinary and natural. To these foreigners the fear entered that the Almighty, for some reason, was angry with them. A policeman ran to catch the dog. The delighted dog rushed backward, barking furiously, and tried to throw up paving stones with his hind legs. That frightened a nurse maid who was wheeling a perambulator; and then it was that I entered into the proceedings. Seated on the edge of the pavement with a perambulator on one side of me and a howling baby on the other, I told that dog what I thought of him. Forgetful that I was in a foreign land—that he might not understand me, I told it him in English. I told it him at length, I told it very loud and clear. He stood a yard in front of me, listening to me with an expression of ecstatic joy I have never before or since seen equaled on any face, human or canine. He drank it in as though it had been music from Paradise. "Where have I heard that song before?" he seemed to be saying to himself, "the old familiar language they used to talk to me when I was young." He approached nearer to me; there were almost tears in his eyes when I had finished. "Say it again!" he seemed to be asking of me, "Oh! say it all over again, the dear old English oaths and curses that in this godforsaken land I never hoped to hear again." I learned from the young lady that he was an English-born fox terrier. That explained everything. The foreign dog does not do this sort of thing. The foreigner is born good; that is why we hate him.

The House Beautiful—Its Flower Garden and Grounds

THE SUBURBAN LOT.

ITS GREATER POSSIBILITIES COMPARED WITH THE CITY LOT.

By Ernest Braunton.

THE suburban lot, ranging from one hundred feet front, to an acre or more in area, offers unusual possibilities in gardening, as compared with the city lot of average size. Such lots should be bordered with trees, shrubs, and plants, in almost reckless abandon. Such a border will vary, of course, in size, shape and formation, with the requirements of individual places and must be designed to suit them. The house is placed midway in the lot and only far enough away from one boundary to permit of a screen of planting and small planting space. It is common to place the house as nearly in the center of the lot as possible, but it is a mistake, for such a location reduces the size of the lawn and the gardening possibilities greatly. We would occupy two entire side boundaries of the lot, and perhaps a third, with the ornamental border, which should vary in width from five or six feet up to twenty feet, with a curved outline on the lawn. This border should be planted principally with shrubs arranged in groups, but a few flowering trees should be used, and a few evergreen shrubs. Where a great variety of plants is desired the entire margin of this border might be filled with them, but a more effective arrangement is to plant them in bold groups, one variety in a group, alternating them with groups of shrubs.

After such a border is completely planted with shrubs and plants there will be many opportunities for introducing colonies of flowering bulbs, and the advantage of using bulbs in this way is their permanency, and they are really more effective than in formal shaped beds cut out of the lawn. It is the intention to keep this border in a cultivated condition, free from weeds and grass, and to give occasional mulching of manure. A lot of this size, planted so densely on its boundary, should have its lawn kept quite free and open and have only a few choice specimens on it and few or none of large trees.

In large grounds there are often opportunities for using plants and shrubs in a free and picturesque way; that is, the planting of them in groups and masses to produce the same effect as if they were growing wild. Indeed, after the first careful planting, they should be allowed to grow wild without culture uncontrolled. The naturalizing of plants does not mean that we should attempt to imitate the thickets, woods of wild fields on our lawns. It does mean the taking advantage of suitable spots for groups and colonies of irises, narcissuses, ferns lilies, and the scores of beautiful things that will thrive in the border. It means the planting of irregular groups of foxgloves, Canterbury bells, etc., on the edge of a tree and shrub border, or covering a rough bank with a mass of native shrubs. It means increasing the beauty and interest of the wild and rough parts of a place a hundredfold; but considerable taste and knowledge of materials are needed to produce good results.

We must not overlook the claims of climbing shrubs and plants. No gardening scheme, large or small, should ignore them. We can imagine a most delightful garden where they, in connection with trees and shrubbery, alone are used; and, if we consider their decorative effect, foliage, gracefulness of growth, and the great beauty of flowers that many of them have, we must admit they are entitled to a more important place in our gardens. The free use of the Clematis family alone would give a thousandfold more beauty than is obtainable with the most lavish use of bedding plants, and here we not only consider the large flowered type, but the smaller flower sorts as well, with their luxuriance of growth and their charming effect, when used as tree, shrub, hedge or fence drapery. We have two native species in this State which should not be overlooked when planting vines. Climbers will not exhibit their best charms if trained in a stiff and formal manner; they must, in whatever position used, be allowed to grow untrammeled.

Why the Leaves Turn.

PROBABLY few persons know why leaves change their color in the fall. The common and old-fashioned idea is that all this red and golden glory we see is caused by frosts, but in parts of our State where no frosts are known we get beautiful autumnal tints in leaves, though not quite so bright as in many other parts of the country. A true and scientific explanation of the cause of coloring of leaves would necessitate a long and intricate discussion. Stated briefly and in popular language, those causes are these: The green matter in the tissue of a leaf is composed of two colors, red and blue. When the sap ceases to flow in the autumn, and natural growth of the tree ceases, oxidation of the tissue takes place. Under certain conditions the green leaf changes to red; under different conditions it takes on a yellow or brown tint. This difference in color is due to the difference in combinations of the original constituents of the green tissue, and to the varying conditions of climate, exposure and soil.

A dry, cold climate produces more brilliant foliage than one that is damp and warm. This is the reason that our American autumns east of the Rockies are so much more gorgeous than those of England. In Southern California we see so few deciduous trees that we have few opportunities to observe this change of color. There are several things about leaves that even science cannot explain. For instance, why one of the two trees growing side by side, of the same age and having the same exposure, should take on a brilliant red in the fall and the other should turn yellow; or why one branch of a tree should be highly colored and the rest of the tree have a yellow tint, are questions that are as impossible to answer as why one member of a family should be perfectly healthy and another sickly.

New Zealand Flax.

New Zealand hemp (Phormium tenax,) not uncommon in cultivation here, sends up a scape much like the century plant. Instead of maturing seed, it grows on the flower branches hundreds of young plants bearing crowded tufts of leaves. At the proper time, these young plants fall to the ground, and, being round top-shaped, they retain an upright position and have only to take root and continue the growth already begun.

Color Value in Plants

How very few owners of gardens have proper regard for color in the garden, and we are glad to observe that little by little a keener realization of what color means is to be seen in the work of a few planters. Almost every one feels the effect of color when it is laid on in heavy masses, indeed it may be allowed that color is the fundamental feeling upon which all the so-called "gorgeous" bedding work rests. But the feeling for that style of gardening is already passing, as a result of the work of the more enlightened landscape architects who have demonstrated the possibility of delicate color effects in large plantings of shrubbery. In their advocacy of the free use of native trees and shrubs, and in their most creditable effort to overcome the jarring incongruities, they have been led to a perception of a more subtle and more dignified beauty in delicate gradations and blending of suggestive color, rather than the startling effect of heavy masses, without relation to the surroundings as a whole.

Ant Hills as Fertilizers.

Analyses of ant heaps and of surrounding soil indicate much greater fertility in the ant-heap material than in the soil on which it occurs. The organic matter and nitrogen are particularly noticeable, the latter being more than four times as abundant in the ant heap, while the "available" potash and phosphoric acid are also much higher. These analyses as well as the experience of a number of practical experimenters indicate that pulverized ant heaps might with advantage be used as a manure on poor soils, and should be of great value in gardens, for seed beds, etc., provided that their physical properties—fine texture, etc.—do not render them too close and impervious.

The 17th Century Tulip Craze.

A ludicrous story is told of an English traveler, an amateur botanist, who happened to see a tulip root lying in the conservatory of a wealthy Dutchman. Being ignorant of its quality, he took out his penknife, and peeled off its coat, with the view of making experiments upon it. When it was, by this means, reduced to half its original size, he cut it into two equal sections, making all the time many learned remarks on the singular appearances of the unknown bulb. Suddenly the owner pounced upon him, and with fury in his eyes, asked him if he knew what he had been doing? "Peeling a most extraordinary onion," replied the philosopher. "It's an Admiral van der Eyck," said the Dutchman. "Thank you," replied the traveler, taking out his notebook to make a memorandum of the same, "Are these admirals common in your country?" "Death and the devil," said the Dutchman, seizing the astonished man of science by the collar, "come before the syndic, and you shall see." In spite of his remonstrances, the traveler was led through the street, followed by a mob. When brought into the presence of the magistrate, he learned, to his consternation, that the root upon which he had been experimenting was worth 4000 florins; and, notwithstanding all he could urge in extenuation, he was lodged in prison until he found securities for the payment of this sum.

STREET TREE ORDINANCE.

THE MEASURE UNDER WHICH POMONA HAS BEEN BEAUTIFIED.

So many queries have come to this department regarding the compulsory planting of street trees that we have secured a copy of the now famous "Pomona Street Tree Ordinance," which we give below. Since the passage of this ordinance many miles of street trees have been planted in that progressive city, and several other municipalities have adopted a like ordinance. So far as [illegible], no trouble has been engendered, and many who were at first somewhat averse to the proposition have [illegible] out trees already planted in order to conform to the official list prescribed by the City Council. Wherever a broad spirit of citizenship is in evidence, wherever the individual has placed public interests before his own, working for "the greatest good to the greatest number," highly satisfactory results have been obtained.

"Section 1. No shade trees shall hereafter be set out by any property holders in the city of Pomona, except in accordance with the regulations hereinafter expressed by this ordinance, and then only upon the written consent of the Street Superintendent.

"Sec. 2. It shall be lawful for the property holders upon any given street, or a majority of them, to select by petition any approved variety of shade tree, which, if [illegible] the Board of Trustees of the city of Pomona, [illegible] designated by a resolution of said Board [illegible], and shall thereafter be the only kind of [illegible] to be planted on such street.

Sec. 3. If the property holders along any given street [illegible] for the six months next after the adoption of [illegible] ordinance to make the selection provided for by Section 2 hereof, then it shall be the duty of the Board of [illegible] of the city of Pomona to select, by resolution, a [illegible] of shade tree for said street, which shall thereafter be the only variety which shall be planted on such [illegible].

Sec. 4. No shade trees shall hereafter be planted [illegible] than eight feet to the outside line of any alley, [illegible] than four feet to the line which would be [illegible] by continuing the property line of any street.

Sec. 5. It shall be the duty of the Board of Trustees [illegible] city of Pomona at the time of adopting the resolution provided for in Section 2 or Section 3 of this ordinance, to define the limits of the street to which this [illegible] shall apply, and also to specify the distance at [illegible] said shade trees shall be set from each other, [illegible] shall not be construed to require the removal of [illegible] heretofore planted and growing.

Sec. 6. The term of two years from and after the [illegible] this ordinance shall be allowed to the property [illegible] on the streets of the city of Pomona in which to [illegible] shade trees in accordance with the provisions of [illegible], and thereafter it shall be the duty of the [illegible] of Trustees to cause such trees to be planted and [illegible] therefor to be assessed upon the property in [illegible] which trees are so planted."

[illegible] penalty for violation of this ordinance is a fine [illegible] than $5 or imprisonment for not more than [illegible] days, or by both fine and imprisonment; the [illegible] being made a misdemeanor.

Planting Schoolhouse Grounds.

It is pleasing to note that an interest is developing in the planting of schoolhouse grounds. In the town of Brookline, Mass., beautiful effects have been produced by the planting of masses of shrubbery against the boundary fences of the school yards, and at the fronts of the buildings, the open spaces being turfed. Trees have also been planted to shade the sidewalks and creepers planted against the walls of the school buildings. Due regard has been paid, also to space for playground requirements. The city of Boston has also during the past season, planted trees and shrubbery in the grounds of several of its new schools. This is a step in the right direction, and is a striking contrast to the uninviting exteriors of the generality of old school buildings. Pupils of the schools so adorned cannot but be benefited by the influence of nature so attractively and constantly set before their eyes. Now that nature studies have become part of the curriculum of almost every school, the planting of trees, shrubs and flowers in the school grounds gives material close at hand for practical demonstrations, and for identification and botanical study; but, preëminently, calling in the aid of horticulture makes the schoolhouse and grounds homelike and attractive, awakening in the children an interest in nature at a time when the mind is receptive of artistic influences.

Highway Tree Planting.

Consul Kehl, in his report from Berlin, eGrmany, tells how the highways have been beautified by the planting of fruit trees along the roadsides. The trees planted are cherry, apple, pear and walnut. The trees are planted thirty-two feet apart along each side of the road, and the fruit is sold at auction on the trees, the purchaser harvesting it at his own expense. The amount realized is applied toward the maintenance of the system, propagation of young trees, their planting and cultivation. There are two large nurseries where the trees are grown. The total amount realized from the sale of fruit in 1902 was $9055; in 1903 it was $5731.

Playgrounds for Children.

The beautiful idea of sweetening the life of children by providing them with grounds in which they can play to their hearts' content, and thus develop that life, energy, and quickening of the spirit which dissipate the germs of the dullness, stupidity, and melancholy born of vicious surroundings, is growing apace. In 1895, the Board of Education of Philadelphia opened four school yards, "as an experiment." These playgrounds were equipped with sand piles, supplied with buckets and shovels, with swings, shade tents, jumping ropes, soft balls, and various other little toys. Two caretakers were also employed—a man and a woman for each ground; the former being found useful in keeping the vicious boys in order. Volunteers, often from the most fashionable circles of the city, frequently visited the playgrounds, and joined the children in their various games, singing and reading, and telling them stories. The civilizing and healthful effect upon the children, the comfort thus afforded working parents, the increased peacefulness in the neighborhoods and the gratitude of the children were so evident to those interested in the experiment that in 1896 twelve new school yards, and in 1897 twenty-three more, were opened, the City Council willingly raising the appropriation for maintenance. This active movement has now extended to other cities, and the amount of happiness it will bring to the children of crowded city colonies during the summer months is pleasant to think of. In New York a kindergarten teacher is attached to each playground, and between whiles some short, simple exercise is given the children, to train them without tiring them. All kinds of games will be taught them, and it is hoped by this means hundreds of children will be kept out of the hot sun, and away from the influences of the streets. The schools which have roofs suitable for the purpose will be utilized as roof gardens, where the tired mothers of the neighborhood may come with their babies and their little ones when the day's work is done.

A WOMAN'S EXPERIENCE WITH THREE VICIOUS DESPERADOES.

By a Special Contributor.

ALL day it had rained so fiercely, it seemed that an ocean had been tossed into the sky, only to return to earth in angry deluge. Gnarled cypresses that lined the empty, silent streets were bending double as with weights of woe, while field flowers, affrighted at the storm tumult, crouched low, hiding gay heads beneath the grasses. The glad song of the meadow lark was hushed. Mocking birds forgot their notes and gurgled feebly and apologetically from dripping orchards. The very day seemed to shiver and huddle closer into the folds of its black coat. Previously empty stream beds brimmed with roaring torrents. Trains were delayed, and traffic by wagon over the country roads was necessarily suspended.

Scarce a dozen souls lived in this quiet village. Not overburdened with industry or ambition, most of them hung about the corner grocery during the day, like barnacles on a rock. It was refuge from complete solitude, and while winds and waves howled outside, yarns and chewing tobacco were swapped inside. Meanwhile, all waited expectantly for the coming of the tardy morning train, for in this remoteness, the coming and going of trains constituted the chief excitement and entertainment of the villagers.

At sunset the clouds parted, leaving a rift in the western horizon through which gleamed a wondrous bit of golden splendor, which in its dark storm setting was as invigorating as a smile at a funeral. It beamed through the windows of the combination grocery-postoffice-railroad station, where the townspeople were assembled. Finding the glow most welcome after the murkiness of the day, they trooped outside where they could derive full benefit.

"oGodness gracious!" said the postmaster's wife, "just look at them tramps!" She pointed across the track to a rickety old building which in its day had been a highly respected operahouse, where, sheltered from the chill wind, waited three wicked-looking specimens of humanity. They were smirched and bedraggled with mud from top to bottom, as ragged and unkempt as oaks in autumn, their faces heavily bearded with crime and cruelty.

"They're waitin' to board the train when it comes along," said the station master. "I guess they don't think much of travelin' afoot in such slush. Hate to have them hang round here overnight. Py golly! They look like they'd murder their grandmothers. They'll have to be mighty sly if they sneak onto a brakebeam, for the trainmen on this line have eyes all over 'em and around 'em. Hooray, there she is," as a husky asthmatic whistle came creeping through the damp air.

The postmaster's daughter hurried after the mail bags which she must toss at the mail clerk as the train passed. Crates of eggs and many milk cans were piled on the platform ready for shipping. The postmaster-groceryman-freight agent rolled up his sleeves and spat on his hands and examined his forearm sinews. The black muscular column of smoke shoved a path through the restless atmosphere, and floated above the sands and the foam-flecked sea until it dissolved and lost its identity in the horizon brilliancy.

As the train drew near, the tramps became all sneaking eagerness, and when it slowed up, they made silent, creeping dashes, each for a brakebeam, hoping in the now dim light to escape observation. Just as they had crawled into position, securely as they thought, and with every prospect good for a cheap and swift journey, the brakeman, always on the alert, spied a pair of muddy boots protruding from steerage, and unceremoniously yanked the owner and his accompanying volley of oaths onto the platform. The train was puffing out of the station when this occurred, but stopped at a signal bell from the conductor, who instituted a thorough search of the rest of the coaches, which resulted in the finding of the two other hobos, who were pulled out with no very gentle hands. Such profanity as issued from the mouths of the desperadoes, the little town had never heard, and it stood looking on, quite shocked. It was as profound and dense, but less pleasing and with even greater foreboding than had been the wrath of the storm a few hours before. Standing knee-deep in curses, the tramps waited until the train started, until the last car was abreast of them, then jumped aboard the rear platform. Again they were discovered and thrown off, this time effectually. They were soaked to the skin, hungry and chilled and furious, and as they watched the departing train they stamped and swore and threatened vengeance. If they had succeeded in remaining on the train they would have soon been in the city enjoying the warmth and comfort of some saloon, but now they were stranded in an unpromising, forlorn and timid little town, too insignificant to be an inspiration for theft, or even an inspiration for murder.

"Certainly looks 's'f strangers was goin' to put in town tonight. Sort o' a tourist resort this is gettin' to be," remarked the postmaster to the little crowd on the platform, aiming a comical wink at the hobos, who were evidently holding a consultation on how they should spend the night. The prospects for congeniality or comfort between tramps or townspeople indicated rigid economy of good nature. If the visitors had anticipated a benefit and a reception from the citizens, their expectations were chilled as well as their bodies, when the little crowd, accompanied by the emaciated mail bag, turned their backs on the impromptu guests and strode through the wet grasses to the corner store. After the mail was distributed, the crowd—for to this little town with its meager population, a very few constituted a crowd, as to a man with microscopic capital, a small coin constitutes wealth—left, going to their various homes, and now, after a long day of "doin' society," the postmaster and his family were alone. They had just begun to demolish a wholesome, steaming supper in the kitchen, which, rural-like, along with parlor, bedrooms and storeroom, were all in one small cottage, when a man came stamping in, making the rickety structure creak dolefluly with the force of his tread.

Peering through a peek hole in the partition, the postmaster discovered one of the tramps, who, evidently impatient of inattention, raised his fist, bringing it to the counter with a resonuding knock, and swearing lustily: "Curse it all, I'll smash the whole damn house to smithereens if ye don't get here lively."

From a near-by shelf the postmaster grabbed a loaded revolver, hurriedly thrust it into his hip pocket, then with manner as defiant and threatening as his customer's voice, he strode to a position behind the counter.

"Well, what's wanted?" he demanded.

"You'll be wantin' your neck if you don't get a hustle on you. Give me some bacon and matches and bread," ordered the irate patron, toscsing some change on the counter. And so the fellow had money—was not quite reduced to beggary. Tramps often passed through town, but invariably they went from house to house asking for, or stealing, food. The postmaster, though mightily angered at the manner of his customer, determined not to allow his indignation to hypnotize his common sense and lead him into a fight, so without remark, he tied up the bundles, pushed them across the counter, then put the money in the till. Without a word, but with a sinister circular glance that took in the entire establishment, the tramp took the packages and strode out into the night.

Quickly succeeding this visit, sounds of splitting timbers, intermingled with profanity, came from down the street. The postmaster, taking involuntarily upon himself the duties of a constable, a dignitary the town did not possess, went out to see, as he expressed it, "what the dog fight was about."

Black clouds were crowding closer and closer about the moon, and lightning darted here and there as if making an inventory of aërial furnishings. The tramps had found a number of packing cases and were vigorously smashing them into kindling, preparatory to building a camp fire over which they could cook their supper and dry their wet clothing. Going up to them, the postmaster remonstrated at this destruction, but was greeted with such a volley of curses and murderous threats, besides being treated to the sight of three loaded revolvers, that he made up his mind that any further meddling with the domestic arrangements of the riotous trio would be risky, and as they gave him a most urgent and enthusiestic invitation to take his departure, he went, not where they had suggested, but to the bosom of his family, where he related his misadventure.

"They're goin' to do jest as they dern please, else there'll be thunder and lightning and brimstone and corpses flyin' 'round lively," he declared with emphasis. "They're the wildest, wooliest critters we've ever had in town. They're after makin' the fur fly."

"There's Miss Wallace all alone down in that old Bronson house," said his wife in tones of considerable anxiety. "It'll never do in the world. She'll have to come up here and sleep tonight. There's no tellin' what them rascals will be up to. The waves roar so loud, and the winds howl so down there by the beach, she could holler the top of her head off and we couldn't hear a sound. Put on your shawl, Sally; let's go down after her. We can slip softly down the dark street without bein' seen."

When the two women went out, instead of going directly to Miss Wallace, their woman's curiosity suggested that they creep cautiously toward the tramps. This they did, stopping in the shadow of an old cypress that stood on the rim of the fire-illumined circle, perhaps a hundred feet from the masculine Nomads who were huddling about a roaring camp fire. One was frying bacon; another, having removed his shoes and hung them on sticks to dry, was holding his steaming socks above the blaze. The remaining member of this picturesque group was pulling off his shirt, possibly in anticipation of drying it more swiftly off his back than on it. With a setting of damp crouching fields and lowering clouds, the firelit figures made a picturte of wondrous color and expression.

"Oh, my!" gasped Sally, pulling her shawl more closely about her head and holding it tight under her chin.

"Goodness gracious!" ejaculated the older woman under her breath.

The two women turned, and with footsteps muffled in the tall damp grass that carpeted the street, they scurried off toward the bluff where stood the weather-beaten heretofore long-deserted cottage, where Miss Wallace was "camping" for a few days while collecting botanical specimens in the locality. Glancing apprehensively over their shoulders into the face of the crowding night, they stumbled up the creaking steps.

"Miss Wallace! Miss Wallace!" they panted in unison, "let us in, quick!" The door opened and they darted inside as gophers dodge into a hole to escape the hungry jaws of the enemy.

"What in the world is the matter?" asked Miss Wallace in amazement. "You look like you had seen all the ghosts of the deep. Did they try to lasso you with seaweed, and——"

"Oh, pshaw!" scolded Mrs. Stelzing, "you don't know nothin' but posies and allegory. Get on your duds quick and come to the house. There's three powerful wicked critters up the track a ways, and if it sets to rainin' again, as it's sure to do with them black clouds hangin' round and roarin' and belchin' lightnin', why they'll get sick of campin' in the open, and most likely come down here for shelter. The house looks so lonesome and forlorn-like with the splinters danglin', the paint only memorized, the windows rattlin' and the chimney bent with rheumatism, that they wouldn't have no idea anybody was keepin' it company, and unless I'm most awful mistaken they'd bust right in without waitin' for an invite, and no tellin' what would sleepin' at our house."

"You are certainly just as kind

"You're a miracle of courage. I'd Good-nights were exchanged, sadly on one side, laughingly on the other, and went out into the night, discussing, through the dripping street, the

With trailing robes awkwardly managed, he disappeared into the storeroom. What if the storm should have torn down or injured the wires? thought the waiting woman. But no, everything was all right, and in less than an hour an engine drawing a single car containing several well-armed officers, came rushing and puffing over the slippery rails.

Miss Wallace's guests had by this time become thoroughly warm and dry, and were peacefully dozing when the posse slipped silently up the walk and crept in at the unlocked door. They were taken quite unawares. Their capture was an easy one. At first they were too dazed with sleep to offer resistance, and by the time they had rubbed the cobwebs from their eyelashes and were ready to fight in earnest, they found themselves looking into the muzzles of several revolvers, and felt the cold clink of steel on their wrists.

"Scared? Humph!" grunted Mrs. Stilzer in response to Miss Wallace's remark that she did feel just a trifle nervous. "You don't want to go back to your house tonight? Humph!" Then in her own kind, motherly way she continued: "Well, you don't have to. Just go right into the spare room. You can stay there so long as you stay in town. Tomorrow we'll get all your duds from the tramp boardin'-house down on the bluff. No, never mind sayin' thank you," as Miss Wallace attempted to express her gratitude. "That's all right. Good night."

By this time the tramps had been hoisted aboard the train and were well on their southbound journey. Though the storm raged unabated outside, sleep soon drew dense curtains over the scenes and excitements of the night, and peace of spirit succeeded turmoil.

With the following afternoon came a newspaper containing an account of the arrest, also the statement that a reward had long been offered for the capture and conviction of these men, who were escaped convicts of the most dangerous type. As Miss Wallace had been entirely instrumental in bringing about the capture, she was entitled to the reward. When this fact dawned upon the understanding, Mrs. Stilzer dropped her best china dish, which broke into a thousand fragments, while Mr. Stilzer, rendered quite helpless, leaned weakly against the door casing and gasped:

"By golly!"

MY SOUL AND I.

Last night the soft, sweet necromancer, sleep,
Did lightly touch mine eyes with mystic key,
And to my soul such wondrous vision gave,
[illegible] I awoke, life's pain did seem less real.
In Death's white arms I saw myself, close-clasped,
A tangled web just slipping from my hands.
I knew 'twas meant for symbol of my life,
And, ah! 'twas so imperfect, and ill-spun!
The Maker did the pattern plan for me
And I had blurred, and marred it so with tears!
I had been foolish—yes, and wilful, too,
[illegible] to have marred its fair, fine finish
With my vexéd, and unskillful weaving.

How peaceful, rested, looked the folded hands;
[illegible] though so poorly they had wrought their task,
For their too slender strength it yet was hard.
[illegible] palms lay lilies white as they—
[illegible] them now, and wet them with their tears,
[illegible] caressing soft, the touch of hands
[illegible] smooth the folds of cere-cloth 'bout my form,
[illegible] speak my name in cadences so sweet?
[illegible] cold clay hath now no need of love—
[illegible] the broken shell the pearl hath slipped;
[illegible] flesh was quick it hungered sore for this,
[illegible] words nor tears can warm the dead!
[illegible] my list'ning spirit poised anear.

[illegible] been the period of my soul's
[illegible] its tabernacle of clay,
[illegible] heaven, the angel Azrael,
[illegible] wish to linger near the shard
[illegible] late my spirit's prison been,
[illegible] know the wealth they brought me now,
[illegible] enriched and strengthened me in life,
[illegible] hands had not the shuttle dropped,
[illegible] the web was beautiful, complete.

[illegible] communed the painéd watching soul,
[illegible] it been, I could not so willing [illegible] through that mysterious door
[illegible] of God has closed between two worlds!
[illegible] 'tis well, sweet angel Azrael,
[illegible] another web to me shalt give;
[illegible] the strength and knowledge I have gained,
[illegible] wrought with such rare skill and care,
[illegible] eyes of God and angels all
[illegible] find it, without flaw or stain;
[illegible] me quickly hence, fair Azrael,
[illegible] happy speed me to my task."

[illegible] the air was filled with waves of song,
[illegible] bright shapes sped upward into space.
[illegible] leaning downward from the stars
[illegible] kissed and waken me from my dreams.

The Pierce Family.

NAME INTERWOVEN WITH EARLY MINSTRELSY.

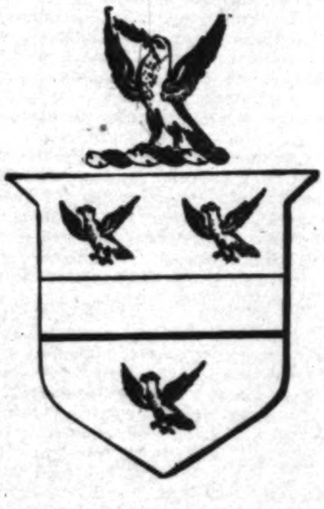
By a Special Contributor.

PIERCE is a name derived from Percy, which is said to have its root in pierre, the French for stone. Peter is naturally the direct derivative.

In Normandy, genealogists seek the cradle of the Pierce family; possibly Percy Forest was their home, giving the name to the first of the family.

If this theory does not suit the critical reader, there is a Teutonic word, pirsen, to hunt or a hunting place. Pierce may claim this as its root name. In other words, if the family is not of Norman, it is of Teutonic origin.

The variations of the name are almost endless, for example: Pierce, Pearce, Perce, Peerce, Pearse, Peirse, Pierse, Peires, Pieres, Piers, Peers, Perss, Pirse. Pierce and Pearse are perhaps the most common forms in England and our own country. Whatever the orthography, in New England, the usual pronunciation is Perce or Purse.



Pierce

There is a line which tells us that,

"Brave Galfred who to Normandy with Rollo came, Assumed the Percy name."

Percy is a name often tragic, but always honorable, and more interwoven than any other with the early minstrelsy and romance of England and Scotland. The Douglas name ranks next in romantic and chivalrous legends. "The Douglas it was glorious to overcome; by the Douglas it was not disgraceful to be vanquished."

The standard-bearer to Richard III at Bosworth Field was Peter Piers.

Since the time of the Norman conquest, the family of Pierce, Peirce or Perce—the latter being the usual ancient form—have been large land owners in Kent, Devon, Norfolk, Somerset and Suffolk.

It was from Suffolk that a Pilgrim father, Daniel Peirce, came in 1634, in the "Elizabeth." He lived at Watertown, Mass., and afterward at Portsmouth, N. H. His son, Col. Daniel, was prominent in civil, ecclesiastical and military affairs of Newbury, Mass.

An earlier ancestor was Abraham Pierce, who, with his wife, Rebecca, settled in Plymouth Colony. He was a taxpayer in 1623. January 20, 1627, he exchanged with Capt. Miles Standish, two shares in a red cow for two ewe lambs. He was a soldier under Standish.

John Peirce's coming perhaps antedated Abraham's, for the first patent of Plymouth Colony was granted in 1621, to John, a large ship owner, and from London.

Capt. William Pearce, born in Bristol, England, "a goodly man and most expert mariner," master of the ship Paragon, tried to cross the Atlantic in 1622, but was obliged to put back. Master of the Ann, he crossed in 1623. Later, he commanded the Charity, and in 1629, the Mayflower. In 1630 he was commander of the Lyon or Lion, and brought with him his brother, Richard. They both settled in Boston, and Capt. William was the author of the first almanac published in this country—this was in 1639. He wrote his name indifferently Pearce, or Peirse or Piers.

It was Richard Pearce—probably a grandson of Richard, the settler—who, September 25, 1699, published the first newspaper in the United States.

Among those who fought—some nobly fell—were Michael Pierce, ensign in a company commanded by Standish. He was at the Narragansett fight.

James Peirce of Massachusetts, minute man, responded to the first call at the Lexington alarm. Shadrack of Massachusetts was a soldier in the Revolution, and also Ebenezer, who was killed in battle.

We remember, of course, that the family has given a President to the United States. He was also a soldier and a statesman of unusually brilliant ability. His father, Benjamin, served through the Revolutionary War, attaining the rank of major-general, and he became Governor of New Hampshire.

The Pierce homestead at Hillsborough, N. H., is still the "Manor," and was, in the days of Franklin Pierce's boyhood, the scene of unbounded hospitality. Great men, statesmen, writers, divines and soldiers have been domiciled under this roof.

One historian of Franklin Pierce has said that the crowning glory of his life was his unselfishness and his true and enduring friendship, and that the mention of his name should incite the others to loftier and nobler deeds.

Characteristics of the Pierce family are shrewd good nature, common sense, vigorous understanding, strong memory, attractive physique and a chivalrous bearing.

The arms reproduced, those of President Franklin Pierce, is three ravens rising sable, a fesse-hummette. Crest, a dove with an olive branch in its beak.

This is also the arms borne by a branch of the Pierce family. One family motto is "Dixit ex Fecit"—he said and he did.

The representative of the Percy family in England is the Duke of Northumberland, and his banner exhibits an assemblage of nearly 900 armorial designs, among the number those of Henry VII, of the ancient royal houses of France and Castille, and the ducal houses of Normandy. They form a galaxy of heraldic honors unparalleled.

The Percy descent is traced to Agnes de Perci, who married de Louvaine, brother of the second Queen of Henry I of England, and son of the Duke of Brabant. The proud condition imposed upon the Flemish prince, on account of the Norman alliance, was that he should relinquish his name, or his coat-of-arms, in favor of that of him bride. He assumed the name of Percy and the ancient arms of Brabant are still borne, the first of the 892 quarterings of the Percy shield.

ELEANOR LEXINGTON.

MARK TWAIN'S TRANSLATION OF EVE'S DIARY.

In Harper's Magazine for December appears "Eve's Diary," by Mark Twain, a companion piece to his famous "Adam's Diary." Here is Eve's account of her first day:

"Saturday.—I am almost a whole day old, now. I arrived yesterday. That is as it seems to me. And it must be so, for if there was a day-before-yesterday I was not there when it happened, or I should remember it. It could be, of course, that it did happen, and that I was not noticing. Very well; I will be very watchful, now, and if any day-before-yesterdays happen I will make a note of it. It will be best to start right and not let the record get confused, for some instinct tells me that these details are going to be important to the historian some day. For I feel like an experiment, I feel exactly like an experiment, it would be impossible for a person to feel more like an experiment than I do, and so I am coming to feel convinced that that is what I am—an experiment; just an experiment, and nothing more.

"Then if I am an experiment, am I the whole of it? No, I think not; I think the rest of it is part of it. I am the main part of it, but I think the rest of it has its share in the matter. Is my position assured, or do I have to watch it and take care of it? The latter, perhaps. Some instinct tells me that eternal vigilance is the price of supremacy. [That is a good phrase, I think, for one so young.]

"Everything looks better today than it did yesterday. In the rush of finishing up yesterday, the mountains were left in a ragged condition, and some of the plains were so cluttered with rubbish and remnants that the aspects were quite distressing. Noble and beautiful works of art should not be subjected to haste; and this majestic new world is indeed a most noble and beautiful work. And certainly marvelously near to being perfect, notwithstanding the shortness of the time. There are too many stars in some places and not enough in others but that can be remedied presently, no doubt. The moon got loose last night, and slid down and fell out of the scheme—a very great loss; it breaks my heart to think of it. There isn't another thing among the ornaments and decorations that is comparable to it for beauty and finish. It should have been fastened better. If we can only get it back again——

"But of course there is no telling where it went to. And besides, whoever gets it will hide it; I know it because I would do it myself. I believe I can be honest in all other matters, but I already begin to realize that the core and center of my nature is love of the beautiful a passion for the beautiful, and it would not be safe to trust me with a moon that belonged to another person and that person didn't know I had it. I could give up a moon that I found in the daytime, because I should be afraid someone was looking; but if I found it in the dark. I am sure I should find some kind of an excuse for not saying anything about it. For I do love moons, they are so pretty and romantic. I wish we had five or six; I would never go to bed; I should never get tired lying on the moss bank and looking up at them.

"Stars are good, too. I wish I could get some to put in my hair. But I suppose I never can."

RIGHT PLACE FOR BACHELORS.

"Korea's the place for bachelors, nit," said the sailor. "Bachelors in Korea is considered as children, and has only children's privileges.

"Just ponder over what that there means.

"You, a Korean bachelor, get thirsty. You enter a rest house and call for palm wine. The pretty little amber-colored waitress says:

" 'Married?'

" 'No,' says you.

" 'Hefaus, then,' says she; and out you go, unslaked.

"You want to vote, but they won't let you vote if you ain't married.

"You apply for a job somewheres.

" 'How many children have you?' is the first question you're asked.

"And as soon as you say you're unmarried, they laugh in your face to think that you should presume to apply for work anywheres.

"Bachelors in civilized lands has all the best of it. But in Korea they lead a dog's life."

MUSICAL ADVENTURES OF PRINCE SPAGHETTINI AND OTHERS.

By a Special Contributor.

JIM MORAN told us the story, in a sketchy, laughable way, as we sat around the steins at midnight in a pleasant Frisco retreat, during Jim's first concert tour of the continent as a violin "star." Just at this time his gaunt figure held resplendent lithographic sway on all the billboards up and down the coast, accompanied by the press agent inscriptions, "The King of the Violin," and "The Master Musician," both of which he was—in our opinion, at least, and the critics seemed really to think as much, although their professional dyspepsia forbade their declaring themselves quite so pleasantly.

At any rate, Jim—apparently much to his own astonishment, simple, lovable fellow that he was—made an unmitigated hit with the less self-conscious public from the moment that he was "brought out" by a reckless but nervy manager who had found him playing "in between" solos in a canvas-walled variety theater (the variety was there, all right) of a Nevada mining camp—playing them with that vital touch of his that charmed even the dirty Piute Indians who lounged outside and peeped through the flaps.

James Moran, at this time little more than 30 years old, was an out-and-out American—indeed, a thorough Westerner, without a drop of foreign blood in his veins; nevertheless, he was as truly a born musician as any erratic and dark-hued son of the Mediterranean coasts ever was. Music was the fundamental part of his being. The rhythm of it swayed his body, its sweet mystery influenced his thought—literally, it was his temperament. Yet, withal, Jim had some of those rare auxiliaries of character that are so often lacking in great musicians. One of these was an unfailing sense of humor. He was keen, gawky American enough for that at all times when he did not actually have his chin on his beloved violin. With this prevailing good nature went a kindness toward every living thing. All this could be detected on Jim's long face, beneath the look of poetry that was predominant in every view of his fine head, with its thick, flaxen hair. He was born in the city by the Golden Gate, of socially prominent parents, who lavished on him every advantage of an early musical education. But just as sudden as had been his inspiration, just as suddenly had he lost all spirit for the hard work of study, and, following his easy-going nature, had drifted inevitably back into his unconventional West, back into the setting sun, from city to town, from town to village, from village to mining camp—and once up into the Tehachepi.

Well, for the story: Some six months before Jim's Tehachepi expedition, he and his fiddle, the two of them tucked away in an empty cattle car on its way back to Arizona from the bay, bumped into Butchersfield, down the southern edge of the great San Joaquin Valley of California.

In the early morning he slipped out at the water tank that did additional, and not very arduous duty as the depot for Butchersfield, and, fiddle under arm, hiked the hot, dusty two miles to town.

Butchersfield is quite a burgh, as burghs go in its region—a medley of attempted solidity of construction and undisguised, intended flimsiness, set far out in a glaring, shadeless immensity of level ground.

There our tramp fiddler hung out his shingle. It protruded from the meager front of a grumpy-looking frame shack that once had done duty as a Chinese laundry. The newly-hung sign proclaimed, in striking homemade letters, done on a pine board, the following:

"Massachusetts Conservatory of Music. Male and Female Lessons Given. Terms Easy. Prof. James Moran, late of Boston, in Charge."

Most of you would not care to review all of the vicissitudes of Prof. James Moran's existence in Butchersfield. Briefly, the professor's pupils throughout that whole uneasy period consisted of Miss Amanda Jones, the spinster school teacher, whose consuming ambition was to learn to play amorously on the seductive guitar, and little Pablo, the Mexican tamale vender's son, a lad fairly delirious with the inborn fever of music.

Blessed Pablo! How else, indeed, would our music teacher have been fed for the last three months of his conservatory career in Butchersfield? For during all that time Pablo's father paid for his son's musical education in fried ham and eggs with coal-black coffee, or frijoles and chili con carne with coal-black coffee, or tamales Spanish with chili sauce and coal-black coffee, fed to Prof. James Moran at 5 o'clock every evening over the narrow, greasy counter of a curbstone café on wheels, the while said professor festooned his awkward length over an abnormally high stool that balanced on the board walk just within the canvas flaps that hung from the extension roof of the push wagon. What Jim ate morning and noon, nobody else knows, and he won't tell.

It was nearing the blessed ham-and-eggs hour of 5 o'clock of one February afternoon. Francisco, alternately hauling and shoving, was just settling his grubbery into position in the gutter of Butchersfield's main street. In the distance strolled Prof. James Moran, meandering in from the direction of the ex-laundry. It was only by chance, of course, that the principal of the Massachusetts Conservatory of Music, "male and female lessons given," was heading for the tamale wagon sharp at 5 p.m.! Prof. Moran—or, to be short, Jim—walked nonchalantly with his hands in his trousers pockets, as if they were jingling change (which they were not) and his little sailor straw was almost lost to sight on the back of his mop-haired but handsome head. Miss Amanda Jones, amorous guitarist and only cash pupil of the Massachusetts Conservatory, had quit Butchersfield the month before. Pablo alone remained enrolled in the professor's school. But, so long as this were a fact, what mattered ought else—for was not a living enough, and was not Pablo, through his father Francisco, and Francisco in turn through his tamales and ham and eggs, the living in question? As for his lodgings, Jim fiddled nightly in a joint for enough to cover their amount.

As Jim neared the delectable precincts of the tamale wagon, he noticed a man—apparently a stranger—slip hungrily behind the curtains the moment the trundling restaurant came to a halt; and as he advanced, he heard an animated controversy break forth within.

"Chili con carne, doughnuts and coffee, if you please——" thus the controversy opened.

Then, after a pause—the while Chef Francisco was sizing-up the new comer, no doubt—came forth this, in a disparaging tone:

"You musica man, too, no? Si, yes—I spot 'em. Firs' yo' sho' yo' mon—dinero, si. No mo' trusta musica man, sabe?"

"My dear fellow" (indignantly) "is it your habit in Butchersfield to insult strangers just because they are strange——"

Just here Jim, accelerated by curiosity, parted the canvas flaps and stepped into Francisco's onion-reeking domain. He raised one long, thin leg to throw it over his accustomed stool, took a good, hard look at the other hungry man—and held the leg poised in mid-air while he broke into a tremendous laugh.

The other man turned upon him in indignant surprise.

"Sir?" he questioned, frigidly, half-rising—or rather, half-descending from his perch, so that one of his legs, too, hovered awkwardly over an abnormal stool. Thus, half-split over their respective eating towers, the two faced each other for one ridiculous moment in silence.

Then, "Oh, Brown, this is a good one on you!" gasped Jim, convulsed with merriment.

"For the sake of—you here, James Moran, variety-show fiddler?" gasped back Brown.

"Right here, to be sure," answered Jim, recovering himself. "Now sit right up, my dear Mr. Brown, music-box manipulator, and have your chili con and sinkers on me. Needn't look at me that way; my credit's good here.

"Now, don't cast inferences, Moran; I've enough to——"

But Brown's protest was cut short by Jim, who pounded loudly for Francisco. That dignitary was serving a Mexican who had just dropped in, and did not respond with alacrity.

"Last time I saw you was on the stage of a canvas-back joint in Toadstool," remarked the small, alert, keen-eyed Brown. "How did you ever get out, Moran?"

"Simple enough. Rode out in an empty, same way I got in here. And it strikes me that the last time I saw you was in Toadstool, too, trying for dear life to sell a piano attachment to the lady—lady, I say—who ran a rival joint to my prospective customer. How in the devil did you get out?"

"Same way that you did," acknowledged Brown. "I've had hard prospecting, old man, trying to sell automatics on commission in this magnificent West of yours. Somehow, the folks don't appreciate my wares. Been piecing out by hammering pianos wherever I could find a dance hall looking for a musician. Think I could get a similar job in this town?"

"You're just the man," cried Jim, in glee, whacking the little man between the shoulders. "They need a pianist of national celebrity in the 'Keg,' where I do a nightly stunt with the fiddle."

"It's a go," replied Brown.

"And here comes our dear friend Francisco," observed Jim, as the proprietor of the vagrant café planted himself before the two. He eyed them coldly; really, there was no sympathy in his gaze as it fell on the two hungry musicians. But the icy stare failed to chill Jim.

"Now, Francisco, we'll eat. This caballero is my guest. Pablo shall have an extra lesson this week."

But Francisco continued to gaze on the supplicants with that cast-iron expression. "No," he said, decidedly, shutting down the lid of the steaming tamale boiler, "I no trusta you no mo'. I no sella no mo' carne, no mo' ham-an' fo' musica. I no sabe Moran musica. I sabe danca musica, muchos tunes, mucho lively. Yet me leetle boy no sabe nice, lively tunes. All time sleepy musica. No mo' ham-an' fo' musica, Señor Moran."

Jim looked at the swarthy chef aghast. For the moment he was stunned by the ominous import of this ultimatum.

"But Francisco," he protested, "you would not give up the teaching of Pablo now? He is a genius, a——"

But Francisco shook his head resolutely, as he leaned back against the pie shelf, and Brown broke in upon Jim's desperate plea with uproarious laughter. "Oh, say, this is rich!" he bawled. "Thought you had one on me, did you? Well, then, this is a dozen on you. Now, sit right up, Prof. Moran, and eat on me. How much can we both feed for, Mr. Francisco? Very well, here's the change in advance, according to your terms."

The suspicious tamale vender, thus placated, swept the coins into his drawer, and laid food before the two stray musicians.

"This means I've got to get out of this town," muttered Jim, after a while, interrupting Brown in the middle of a hearty chuckle and a mouthful of hot stuff.

"Seems that way," laughed the seller of piano attachments. "If you hike, I'll hike with you. I've enough to keep us fed for a little while—far as the bay—perhaps."

"How much?"

"A gold fiver."

"With such a good foundation for wealth as that, we ought to get up a show of some kind and raise enough to ride out like the gentlemen we are," suggested Jim; and then, replacing his coffee cup in its saucer quietly, as if trying not to make a sound, he pulled aside one of the canvas flies and listened atten comes little Pablo," he said, after a mome almost gentle voice. "Dear little Pablo, Another three months and he would ou ter with that fiddle of his. I hate to leave table bit of a chap."

Way down the long board walk of town's main street, clear cut against a of the sun, that was dropping away into the end of the thoroughfare, appeared a ure, followed by a half-dozen other di The bare-legged leader wore an almost pair of knee breeches and a dirty shirt throat, the whole topped—and the eclipsed—by a huge straw sombrero with From the little crowd of approaching strains of a violin, calling men forth from stores to peer and laugh. For that self- of the bunch was Pablo, who, with chin violin so that he was oblivious of all that about, and right arm—from which the sleeve torn away—working like a piston rod, issuing sweet harmony; a juvenile Pan, strings instead of pipes and reeds, but with doned to Nature's rhythm, as truly as ever god's of old.

"He's a wonder, sure enough," murmured miringly, as he leaned out and peered around flap, his feet securely interlocked among the towering stool; and then, of a sudden his ened surprisingly. Evidently a profitable ped up in the practical little Harmonia brain. He grabbed Jim suddenly by the it had not been for the latter's supporting he would have fallen disastrously from his exclaimed:

"My friend, I've got it!"

"Sure, you seem to have it bad," drawled cally, as he recovered his balance.

"Listen m'boy, and you shall hear! We'll musical bit of a greaser on the spot, and cert party of the three of us. I know just off the show. There's a little railroad town the Tehachepi mountains, about sixty miles folks there, I guess, all told, and they're all mine, for Big Pine is a musical commu laugh—once I sold two piano attachments same week. Only place where I've been was heading for there on the strength of when I dropped in here. Now, you see, world-famous violinist from Berlin; the kid'll fant prodigy from Milan, Italy; and alread Pine, I am the noted American pianist, with on the first syllable of the last word. Sabe? they never heard of you or the kid up there folks trade down the other slope of the range I ought to clear $15 apiece, anyway—enough out of this unappreciative ham-and-egg wild Pullman car. My fiver will just take the Big Pine, and we can stand off the printer keeper and the operahouse owner until after "Agreed," said Jim, and turned, beaming cisco.

"No, no, no, no, no!" ripped out the gusted cook, "mi muchachito make no mo' sica; he stay here washa dish, sabe? You him, no, Señor Moran? Adios, good-by!"

But as the picturesque ragamuffin, Pablo as a little Greek god, through all his dirt fiddle under his arm and stepped around dad's sanctuary to begin his evening task of ing, Jim caught his eye and told him to to the studio as soon as the dinner-hour rush and Pablo, with a knowing wink, promised would. What, indeed, would he not do for mable joy of hearing Señor Don Diego Moran violin?

Sure enough, Pablo dropped in later on, gingerly on the edge of the frayed lounge, expectantly from beneath the sagging brim mendous hat. And without much coaxing ate little Mexican, 12 years old and small was secretly induced to enroll himself in eign Concert Company for an expedition hachepi.

Before Pablo had slipped out again, it came gently but suggestively.

"What if we are washed out in Big Pine?" Jim.

"We'll risk it," was Brown's resolute answ

At dawn Pablo, taking good care not to near relative and lover of lively tunes, slipped the edge of the valley into the face of the mountains, fiddle under arm, and joined the tion at the water tank, to await the coming pany the going of the Overland, that just the ascent of the range.

Brown, manager, advance agent and did some lively hustling in Big Pine that Business (credit business) was considerably by the advent of the concert company; the owner suddenly awoke to the rare realizati cobwebbed auditorium was engaged for a formance; the jeweler hard by, who owned press that existed for just such occasions of concert companies or the giving of a railroad hands, began to gather up his type; keeper laid in additional choice canned the unexpected siege of three distinguished the pleasantly anticipated period of two days

And then there was Pablo to clothe; the chandise stores developed a hot rivalry of contributing to the attire of the disting igy from the shores of the Mediterran sourceful Brown was not for a moment at a account for the child violinist's ragged condi

"Yes, it was terrible," he explained. train on which he was speeding across the [illegible] for Big Pine to fill this engagement was held up in [illegible] one night, and all the rich attire worn by this famous young man—among other things medals presented to him by his royal relative, the King of Italy—was taken from him. The indignity may cause international complications. But we came right on, nevertheless, rather than miss this engagement."

Thus did Brown advertise his company; and from the meager stocks of the amazed merchants Pablo was supplied with a brilliant pink shirt and blue necktie, a pair of poker-player style of light checkered trousers, made for a very tall man and turned half-way up from the bottom to accommodate this very short one; and over all, gay four-bit suspenders.

"It is our invariable practice to pay all bills from the box-office receipts," was Manager Brown's brusque style of asking credit.

Just one thing stumped him for a moment. He couldn't find shoes that would do for Pablo. The largest 'youths'' size pinched the boy's flattened-out, grimy feet until he howled for release; and in the really comfortable men's sizes he could not take two steps with the unaccustomed weights on his pedal extremities without treading on himself and capsizing.

But Brown got around the feet all right, eventually, even if Pablo couldn't. He made them help advertise the show. Brown believed in advertising. He had the jeweler-printer prepare huge placards like this:

Tuesday Night at Smith's!
GRANDEST CONCERT EVER GIVEN IN THE WEST.
Tickets Only Two Bits and Thirty-five!

Prof. Hohenzollern of Berlin, World's Greatest Adult Violin Virtuoso!

Prince Carlo Spaghettini, the Child Wonder from Milan, Italy,
Who Can Beat Even the Professor with the Fiddle!
And
Will Brown, the Celebrated American Pianist, Who Is Already Well Known to You All.

[illegible]—Like all great geniuses, our famous young Italian has [illegible] peculiarity of conduct, which is never to wear shoes or [illegible]. Come and see him in his bare feet. The only great [illegible] ever known to appear this way. Don't miss it; it's great.

"In the concert business peculiarities are just as good as money," remarked the enterprising traveling salesman to Jim that night at supper; and later he went down into the main room of the hotel to work up musical enthusiasm among the loafers there. A fair-sized audience listened to his oratory—an audience made up of timber [illegible], hands from the sawmill, cowboys, railroad employes, village merchants, the hotel proprietor, and his [illegible]. For the mountain air was raw with the [illegible] of storm, and a considerable portion of the male population of Big Pine had gathered around the hospitable public stove to discuss the foreign celebrities of whom the proprietor spoke so proudly, and perhaps catch a glimpse of the barefooted Dago prodigy.

Among other things, Brown touched on the fame of Prof. Hohenzollern. "Gents," he exclaimed in a burst of enthusiasm, "he can fairly make the violin shriek! He has played before the Czar of all the Russias!" The [illegible] workers present, having traveled more or less in one direction or the other from Big Pine, to places where the horizon was not so obstructed by mountains, [illegible] incredulously; but the rest of the audience accepted Brown's statement for all it seemed to be worth, and forthwith engaged a block of seats.

Smith's Operahouse (a little barn of a place lighted by kerosene lamps suspended from the roof beams) was fairly well scattered with people that night. By a process of rapid calculation Brown, as he advanced across the stage toward the hush, figured that the half that were holding receipts for bills paid in tickets were sufficiently numerous to get the concert company out of town [illegible] on the early morning train, traveling (Oh, joy!) [illegible]. That was all the success necessary.

The concert was on; the audience was delighted. Brown, the celebrated American pianist, had rattled off his number on the tin-panny piano; Prof. Hohenzollern of Berlin, in full-dress suit, had played a sweet, [illegible] thing, wooing and winning the most unmusical man in the hall with that same heart touch that [illegible] the dirty Piutes; and now all leaned forward [illegible], for it was the barefooted Italian [illegible].

[illegible] Spaghettini's bare soles pattered stalwartly [illegible] the wings. Pink shirt, blue tie, gorgeous suspenders and rolled-up, a-mile-too-big trousers, burst upon the [illegible] gaze of the inhabitants of Big Pine. [illegible], he was a ridiculous little figure, was the Butchersfield tamale vender's son; but the poise of his fine head was an artist's poise, his big southern eyes [illegible] unafraid, and he brought his fiddle to his chin [illegible] bow to the strings with a graceful flourish that [illegible] applause from the assembled villagers. Look, [illegible] a real Italian prince! And listen, there were [illegible] notes from under his famous bow! The populace, [illegible], harkened, was captivated.

Indeed, it seemed that this juvenile Pan played [illegible] a child played before, wrapping his inharmonious little self in folds of harmony. From the first entrancing bit that he diffused through the hush, he [illegible], as in a dream, into the sweet strains of Schubert's Serenade; a thing that Jim was always very proud [illegible] him play; so proud, indeed, that he popped his [illegible] head out from behind the wings, charmed by [illegible] pupil's utter abandon to his theme.

[illegible] just at that tense moment that a mighty clap of [illegible] and a swirl of wind shook Smith's Operahouse [illegible] terrifying force, followed by a cloudburst that sent [illegible] through numerous apertures in the old [illegible].

[illegible] Carlo Spaghettini's musical right arm wavered [illegible] of the thunder; at the dash of the rain the [illegible] came out of his dreams with a jerk. [illegible] born in the shadow of those mountains; he [illegible] when they bellowed under a dousing like that, [illegible] being almost over, the season of washouts [illegible] the land, a season when a train would some[illegible] for days at a time down by the Butchersfield water tank, and never be crowded by the coming or the going of any other train. Papa Francisco could wash his dishes himself well enough for a couple of nights, and not be murderously mad, after all—but for a week?

The little musician dropped his fiddle, turned toward Brown, who was thumping the accompaniment on the piano, and toward the head that was sticking out from the wings, and with bow raised beseechingly, shot his voice above the sound of the storm:

"Señores, señores, zee washing-out! Adios, mi papa in Butchersfiel'; he mi violin will tak' 'way! Ay de mi!" He burst into tears and ran from the platform, straight for the spot where the bushy head and angular face had projected a moment before.

Brown thumped on. The sound he made with those keys was ghastly. For once he seemed nonplussed. After the first ominous calm down in the pit, a ripple of conversation ran through the audience.

"Well, I'll be durned!" "Butchersfield, eh?" "It seems to me I did see that little chap down in the valley once, m'self." "Crazy dago!" "No, jest a greaser!"

Such exclamations as these began to rise from the throng. Still Brown thumped on. This time it was Prof. Hohenzollern who was equal to the emergency. Just before pandemonium broke loose he advanced gravely from the rear recesses of the "stage," accompanied by wee Spaghettini, who was drying his tears with his fists.

The professor bowed in his angular but impressive way, the while his swallow tails stod straight out behind.

"Ladies and gents," he said, solemnly, "you have been greatly honored by this outburst of emotion on the part of this world-famous young Italian. When he feels the subtle, psychological influence of a really musical, appreciative audience, it so plays on his overwrought emotions, on his susceptible genius, on the passionate music soul that animates him, that he breaks out in song in the most exquisite passages of his own compositions, such as the last that he was rendering, and turns, bow in air, as if leading a mighty chorus. I assure you, ladies and gents, that you have been immensely honored, as this is positively the first American audience that has so affected his warm Italian nature. You probably did not understand the words he uttered, as they were Italian. The Prince will resume."

The audience held its breath for a moment, while the tearful little Mexican picked up his fiddle; then it recovered from the shock of Prof. Hohenzollern's amazing announcement and thundered (in unison with the genuine article outside) grateful applause. What a wonder, indeed, was this Italian prodigy! Certainly, he had not been overrated. He was a genius such as Big Pine had read about, in the weekly papers, but had never dared hope to see and hear.

The little boy, quivering as he suppressed, by main force, a last uprising sob, ducked his bronzed chin over his violin, and was soon lost in musical dreams again.

Box office profits showed just enough to take Jim Moran and his enterprising friend, Brown, from Big Pine to the bay in Pullman luxury, and to supply Pablo with a seat in the smoker as far as the Butchersfield water tank. Just enough to do all this, without deducting therefrom another day's board bill, or any other bill, however trifling.

But when the concert company emerged from the kerosene-stinking barn of its artistic and financial triumph, the whole visible world was a rush and glint of impetuous rivers, and the whole audible world was a roar and grind and splash of angry surge. Logs tumbled murderously down the main street, and buildings groaned in the grasp of the flood. The "washing-out" had descended upon that precipitous land in the full fury of waters long withheld.

Over at the little station the operator reported that, up to the time the wires went down, ten miles of track in the mountain division had gone skidding toward hell. Jim looked at Brown, and Brown looked at Jim. They both looked at Pablo, who had begun to weep again.

"Ay de mi, ay de mi—the washings-out! Mi papa he will mi violin tak' 'way. Ay de mi!" wailed the disconsolate little figure.

"Ay de mi, the washing is out," echoed Brown.

"Ay de mi, our pockets are washed out," murmured Jim; and the three floundered back to the inn.

There they sat interned for five days and nights, the while the waters rolled. The second day Smith of the operahouse slushed his way to their apartments and presented his bill in the early morning get-away; but the elements were on his side. His call cost Brown all but one dollar of his concert earnings. The fifth evening the proprietor of the hostelry got nervous (having heard the jeweler-printer say that he was coming round to collect before the line was opened) and forced payment for accommodations up to the next morning. That took every cent of Jim's profits. Big Pine had reabsorbed its concert money.

"We'll have to hike," announced Jim, resolutely, as the proprietor closed the door and made off with the dreamed-of Pullman luxury.

"Agreed," answered Brown, at last cast down.

"But the boy?" questioned Jim, laying his hand affectionately on the black head of the third—and most dejected—member of the troupe.

"The dispatcher says the first train will get through on the early morning schedule," answered Brown. "Here's a dollar and a dime, Pablo—our last. They'll take you to the tank. Present our compliments to Francisco, your good father, when you meet him—if he gives you time to speak."

"Poor little chap, I'm afraid we've misused him," said Jim, drawing Pablo to him. "Never give up your violin, muchachito, will you? Just keep playing, playing, playing, that thus you may never forget Señor Moran. I hate to part with that little chap."

Early in the morning Jim and Brown escorted Pablo, fiddle under arm, to the station among the pine stumps. There they bid him a fond farewell, and hiked; for it would hardly do, under the circumstances, to hang around Big Pine waiting for a favorable freight; better policy to hunt a siding further down the mountain.

"Ay de mi!" sighed Jim, grimly, a mile down the line, as he shifted his fiddle case to the other armpit.

"Ay de mi!" echoed Brown, as he slipped on a muddy tie.

LANIER BARTLETT.

HOW TO THINK.

THE SLIGHT EXTENT TO WHICH THINKING IS INDULGED IN BY MANY.

[Boston Transcript:] One man succeeds in college—another fails. It is an indisputable fact of pedagogy that the difference is to be attributed more to methods of thinking than to means thereof. It is not so much a wide variation in undergraduate brains as it is the fact that a man studying properly for one hour accomplishes more than he who studies "at" a subject for twice the time. George P. Baker, in the Educational Review for September, contributes an article on the undergraduate mind from which the following is taken: "As I work, year by year, with these youths, there is a sentence which keeps recurring to me with renewed significance. It is: 'Now and then be idle; sit and think.' Unless you have recently been reading in the eighteenth-century literature, I doubt if you will associate that with the right person. It doesn't sound like the meteoric career and the varied activities of Richard Brinsley Sheridan; but he is the man who wrote it. I should like to see that verse written large somewhere upon the walls of Harvard College, because as I work with these undergraduates I am more and more surprised to find, not that they do not know how to think accurately, cogently (I suppose they would not be in classes in argumentation if they knew how to think well,) but that many of them have no real interests in knowing how to think well. Many of them mean to enter the law school and therefore wish training in debate. Many suspect that some day they will have to speak often in public and wish the requisite training. Far too many of both groups desire the end, but care nothing for the means, the process by which it may best be attained. It is only by forcing, coaxing, that one can develop in these youths any interest in thinking for thinking's own sake, can make them appreciate the fact that there is a delicate pleasure in the process of thinking. I meet often the type—which you must all know perfectly well, only he is a little more mature with me, and therefore, I suppose, a little less pliable—who sits in front of you with an amiably receptive expression, who smiles gently at all your neat turns of phrase, who gives you a feeling that, on the whole, your lecture is really well fitted to the needs of the class, and then comes to the desk to ask you just one question which shows his mind has not taken in one important idea from the entire hour. Not only that; sometimes, and here is where his real genius comes in, he shows you that (despite his receptive appearance throughout your lectures) he has not taken in anything new for two or three weeks.

"We are developing curious citizens, unless we can, in some way, rouse these men to more responsibility. Now, it is quite fair to say, of course, that the awakening comes in many cases as graduate students and in the graduate school of life. I think it is perhaps a question with all of us teachers whether that is not a slightly late awakening. I never can fully share in the joy of the friends of a young man who has wasted most of his college time, when they say: 'He is working hard, I assure you, in the law school,' as if somehow that were a satisfactory solution for everything. Does that recovery fully offset all the wasted opportunities of his college life? I believe that the causes for this heedlessness in undergraduates lie back of college and school, in the home, in the very nature of maturer American life today. Whether we can get at the conditions in the home or not, we certainly can in the school and college. But first we must recognize the condition and our present failure to grapple with it. Is there not danger that, in much of the higher education, we teachers are like the builders fitting marble plates to stucco walls or him who makes brick without straw?"

A LAND OF GLADNESS.

How softly flow, among Sonoma's hills,
The ice-cold springs, the merry-hearted rills;
Frangrance of pine my wandering fancy thrills,
Till, even through the city's noise-built walls,
I hear the chant of sudden waterfalls;
Once more, through cedar boughs the blackbird calls.

There are wild cliffs on Mendocino's shore,
And well I know the seaweed on the floor
Of hidden caves, and many a marvel more.
Pacific's heart hath legends wise and old;
Go thou, and wait in voices manifold
When storms are loose, to hear the story told.

Again I see gray mountains, purely clad
With gleaming snow; vast peaks forever glad—
Such heights as these the elder singers had.
Again one hails the sunlight's burst of foam
On Lassen's peaks, on Shasta's snowy dome,
Where lilies bloom beneath the glacier's home.

But best the redwood shade, the peace it brings,
Where fancies rise as crystal mountain springs
Beneath tall trees; and dear each bird that sings
In rainless summers; dear the ferns which grow
By cool Navarro, where sea breezes blow
And white azaleas touch the river's flow.

Good Short Stories.

BRIEF ANECDOTES GATHERED FROM VARIOUS SOURCES.

Compiled for The Times.

Trouble at Home.

JEROME K. JEROME was lunching with some lawyers at the University Club in New York.

"As odd a client as you can imagine," he said, "called on a legal friend of mine in Rye one morning.

"She was an extremely pretty client, but her clear, soft eyes were quite bleared with weeping. Indeed, she was in tears, as she entered my friend's office. Her little form shook with sobs.

"'Well, my dear,' said he (perhaps I should explain that this client was hardly more than seven or eight years old)—'well, my dear, what can I do for you?'

"'Please, sir,' said the child, weeping piteously, 'I want to get a divorce from my papa and mamma.'"

An Awkward Position.

G. T. WILSON, who presided at the autumnal convention of dancing masters in New York, said of a certain new way of waltzing:

"Why, to waltz like that would make me feel as awkward as——" He laughed.

"In Portland, one day, while walking down the street, I came face to face with a young woman, and in attempting to pass each other, we dodged from side to side, both going to the right simultaneously, and then both going to the left.

"I suppose this has happened to all of you—this meeting with some one going in an opposite direction, and the subsequent dodging from left to right four or five times before you get by.

"Well, as I dodged before the young woman like that, she suddenly staggered me by saying:

"'Hurry up. Which is it to be—waltz or two-step?'"

A Yankee Trick.

A. J. DREXEL BIDDLE, the distinguished young author, of Philadelphia, was describing the games at Monte Carlo. He had spent the previous winter in Nice, going over to Monte Carlo almost daily.

"I heard," he said, "of one man who got the better of the games, though by how large a sum I don't know.

"It seems that, when a ruined gambler kills himself at Monte Carlo, the employés of the Casino, to avoid a scandal, fill his pockets with gold and bank notes. Thus the real cause of his suicide does not appear.

"Well, this man, a Yankee, came to Monte Carlo with about $100 in five-franc pieces. He lost the money slowly and painfully, and, late that night, in a black corner of the gardens, he fired a revolver and with a loud groan fell full length on the grass.

"Instantly three or four dark, silent figures rushed up, filled his pockets with money, and left him there to be discovered in the morning by the police.

"But long before morning the enterprising Yankee, his pockets distended with gold, had shaken the dust of Monte Carlo from his feet."

Too Much Bustle in Bowdoin.

AT some public exercise in the college hall of Bowdoin, in years gone by, a stylishly dressed young woman took her seat in the front row of the gallery, and gave her undivided attention to picking out her "best man" in the crowd below. This was before the days of the "don't-you-hear-it-snap" fasteners, and in sitting, her draperies became so disarranged as to disclose to view a dress distender of primitive make, viz., a little roll stuffed with sawdust.

An alert "freshie" conceived the idea of reducing the size of this by a thrust of his penknife, which caused quite a ripple of excitement among his confreres. President Goodwin, annoyed at the disturbance, arose from his seat on the platform and remarked severely: "There is too much bustle in the gallery."

"That is just what we are trying to prevent, sir," replied the audacious freshman.—[Boston Herald.

Mixed With Concrete.

DAVID N. CARVALHO, the handwriting expert, said of a manuscript error to a reporter:

"Such an error is ludicrous. A man of intelligence could never have made it. It reminds me of an error that occurred at a church meeting in my native town.

"They were discussing at this meeting the best time for the consecration of a new plot that had been added to the church cemetery.

"There was a long argument. Some wanted the addition consecrated at once. Others thought it would be best to wait till the next year. Finally an old man rose and said firmly:

"'I shall vote for immediate consecration. I have had my back yard done with it, and it wears grand.'"

A Ripping Dream.

WHEN my uncle first started in business as a general merchant in a country town it was in partnership with a young fellow of about his own age.

Both boys were very enthusiastic about their work, and after long days behind the counter they would go to their room above the store and continue to "talk shop" far into the night.

My uncle's partner was particularly engrossed in his work, and often his sleep was disturbed by dreams of customers and big sales.

One night his nightmare reached the climax. Evidently the dreamer was just in the act of selling some cotton goods, for my uncle felt his night shirt go "r-i-i-i-p," straight up the back, while his partner was calmly saying:

"Two yards, Madam?"—[Lippincott's Magazine.

A Quibble.

"THAT is a quibble, a mere quibble," said Walter Camp, Yale's athletic adviser, in a discussion of football rules.

He laughed ironically.

"That reminds me," he said, "of the children of a friend of mine whom I visited in the summer.

"These children—two boys—got on none too well.

"'Here,' said their mother to the older of them one day, 'here is a banana. Divide it with your little brother, and see that he get's the lion's share.

"The younger child, a few minutes later, set up a great bawling.

"'Mama!' he shrieked, 'John hasn't given me any banana.'

"'What's this?' said the mother, hurrying in.

"'It's all right,' explained the older boy. 'Lions don't eat bananas.'"

The Retort Courteous.

A BARRISTER named Bushe was trying a case in Limerick before Chief Baron O'Grady, when, in the course of the lawyer's speech, an ass began to bray loudly outside the courtroom, the window of which opened on a pasture.

"Wait a moment," said the Chief Baron. "One at a time, Mr. Bushe, if you please."

The barrister presently had a good chance to retort. When O'Grady was charging the jury the ass again began to bray, this time at a greater distance from the courtroom window.

"I beg your Lordship's pardon," said Bushe. "May I ask you to repeat your last words? There is such an echo here I did not quite catch that sentence."—[New York Mail.

What He Was.

THERE was a man living in Waterbury, Ct., who is the head of a large family, nearly every member of which is a performer on some kind of musical instrument.

A Bostonian, who was visiting the house of the Waterbury man, referred to this fact, remarking that it must be a source of great pleasure to the family, but to this observation the father made no reply.

"Really," continued the Bostonian, "it is remarkable. Your younger son is a cornetist, both your daughters are pianists, your wife is a violinist, and, I understand, the others are also musicians. Now what are you, the father of such a musical combination?"

"I," replied the old man, sarcastically, "I am a pessimist."—[Harper's Weekly.

Bare Their Heads Only.

TIMOTHY D. SULLIVAN was describing his recent European trip.

"Tell me about court presentation," a young man said. "What is the ceremony like?"

Mr. Sullivan gave as vivid a picture as he could of the splendors of a drawing-room at Buckingham Palace, and the young man was a good deal impressed.

"Men, I suppose," he said, "stand uncovered in the presence of royalty?"

"Yes," said Mr. Sullivan, "but not to the same extent as women."

Vanity, Saith the Preacher.

A PRESS photographer asked Goldwin Smith, the well-known author, to pose for a number of pictures.

Mr. Smith declined to pose. Such things, he said, smacked of vanity, and vanity was a fault that he desired always to avoid.

"Yet it will crop out," he added, "in the most unexpected places. It is, indeed, rather like a microbe—so universal that whenever we look for it, there it is surely to be found.

"During the French revolution, a priest rode in a tumbril to the guillotine with two persons—one a marquis, the other a common thief.

"As the cart jolted through the crowded streets, the citizens shouted maledictions on its occupants.

"'Down with you, beasts of the aristocracy!'

The marquis smiled proudly, but the criminal was vexed.

"'My good friends,' he cried, 'I am no aristocrat. I am a thief.'

"Then the priest touched his arm gently, murmuring:

"'Ah, my son, this is no time for vanity.'"

He Saw Nothing.

CHARLES M. SCHWAB, in an address at Loretto, praised resourcefulness.

"The resourceful man," he said, "lets nothing discourage him. In the most untoward conditions he thinks and thinks until he hits on an expedient which turns the very untowardness of things into a help.

"Let me illustrate this point with a foolish story that yet has a lesson in it.

"A mother, fearing that her pretty daughter had betrothed herself to a young man of inferior station, hired her little son, a boy of seven or eight, to stay in the parlor throughout an expected visit of the unwelcome suitor.

"The boy carried out his contract duly, and at 10 o'clock, tired and sleepy, he came to his mother and asked for his pay.

"'Did you stay in the parlor?' she said eagerly.

"'Yes; all the time,' he answered.

"'Well, what happened?'

"'We played blind man's buff,' said the boy, 'and it was lots of fun; but they kept me "it" the whole time.'"

The Fair Ophelia.

A NIGHT OF DARKNESS AND A GLORIOUS DAWN.

By a Special Contributor.

"THESE days are dawning rapidly in," said Robert Seton, turning from his canvas with a sigh and laying down his palette on the small Moorish table that held his brushes and colors.

His sole companion, his pupil, looked at him for a moment with astonishment and consternation.

"The sunlight is lovely," she said; "it is as bright as midday."

"Nonsense!" exclaimed the artist. "We shall soon be having to light the lamps. No more work today. The time flies all too quickly. We will resume our sittings tomorrow. The days die early."

"Why, it is only July!" gasped the pupil; "night never really comes until 9 in July."

"But it is dark now," reiterated the painter querulously. "I can see it, I can feel it."

The beautiful young face of the pupil all of a sudden seemed to draw that darkness to itself on this bright July afternoon. For a shadow—the shadow of an awful apprehension—fell over it like a falling blind, and quenched the hope and happiness and youth that had recently enhanced its charms.

She rose from her seat, and approached the painter. He was sitting with his face turned toward the lofty window through which the rich late sunshine was flooding in a mass of golden bars, and his eyes were wide open and turned toward the glory of the ripened day. And something terrible in their dead and lusterless stare convinced her that the day was indeed dark to him, and growing darker and darker yet.

"You are tired, master," she said gently. "You work too hard. You must give your eyes a rest."

In a moment the man had risen, thrusting his slender, paint-stained fingers through his grizzled hair, and crying out like one stabbed to the heart:

"Don't say that it's light! Don't say that you can see! Don't say that my eyes are failing me!"

He seized her in a frenzied grip, dragging her to the window and pointing out toward where the sun fell through the rich foliage of the garden.

"Tell me," he almost shrieked, "tell me that this gloom is the dimness of twilight! Tell me that it's—that a thundercloud is overhead—that it's foggy, anything, anything you like; but, for heaven's sake, don't say that my eyesight is failing me!"

"Your eyes require rest," replied the girl gently, and trying to lead the artist away from the window.

Suddenly Robert Seton grew calm.

"You are very kind, my dear," he said quietly, resuming his seat, and feeling for the chair as he did so. "You are very kind, and prepare me mercifully for what I must face. I am going blind. God help me!"

Then this gray-haired man, with his heart still young, and his brain still full of strength and fancy, covered his face with his hands, and cried as only a strong man can cry.

Every word stabbed like a knife as she stood and watched him in his agony, and in her secret heart she longed to claim the right to draw down his head upon her breast, and breathe the words of comfort and solace that are the prerogatives of mother, wife or sister.

"How does it progress?" he asked presently, lifting his head in a tired way.

"It is glorious, master," she whispered reverently, just as one whispers of a Raphael's Madonna, or a saint's passion, or a hero's death.

"The face of Hamlet is a speaking one, I fancy?"

"Of course it is, master. A speaking likeness of yourself—without the gray hair, though. And the Ophelia?"

"Oh, master, the figure is superb. But the face—why have you never finished the face? It is nothing but a blur."

His fingers trembled, and fumbled about among his tubes and brushes on the Moorish table.

"I cannot conceive Ophelia yet," he murmured. "I want a very beautiful face—a very beautiful face, such a face as my Hamlet could really love. I have not found it yet."

Had the sun been sinking, one might have fancied that its rays were now reflected on the girl's soft cheeks. But the sun was not sinking; his countenance was still bright and golden.

But the painter rose with a slight shudder, as though it were cold.

"Good-by," he said gently, "I am afraid I am going to be ill. So I will close work for the day, and resume—resume when God thinks fit to take my darkness from me."

"You will send for a doctor, master?" said the girl anxiously. "You promise to send for a doctor?"

The artist turned quickly toward her. Something in the sweet tone of her voice set his heart beating, and sent the red blood surging to his pallid face. Words—passionate words—were already bubbling to his lips, and in another moment he would have spoken; but, with the icy touch of a dead finger, there returned to him the fact of his impending calamity and threatening blindness, and, with a sigh, he stifled his words and kept their secret hidden in his breast.

With trembling fingers he put away his colors and brushes. This he did solemnly, like one who felt he would have no further use for them. Then, the girl having put on her hat and cloak, he conducted her across the lofty hall to the front door.

"Good-by, my dear," he said, lifting his tired and aching eyes for one moment to the sea of sunshine that was gorgeously bathing the world.

"No good-by, master," she answered, with an assumed cheerfulness. "I shall see you in the morning."

"Where's the use, child?" he cried, irritably. "My box of tools is put away. My time for rest has come. I have nothing more to teach you."

The dimness of his own eyes never allowed him to see the dimness in hers; and her voice was so calm that nothing of the pain in her heart trembled in its tones.

So he did not learn at this, the darkest moment of his life, what might have made it the brightest and happiest for all life to come.

When she had left him he returned to his studio, and stood for some moments before the great canvas, now all but finished; and as he stood, tears welled into his eyes and fell down his cheeks.

Then he began to draw a cloth over the picture, murmuring as he did so:

"My love, my love! I would have told you all in such a way as lover never yet proclaimed his love. But God wills otherwise. Hamlet will never see Ophelia now. Good-by, my love."

The picture was veiled from view. He gently closed the window, shutting out the sweet breath of the summer afternoon, and then, closing and locking the studio door after him, he called his valet, and sent him with a written message to a famous surgeon.

Next morning the pupil called. To her inquiries the old housekeeper shook her head dismally.

"The doctor has ordered him complete rest," she said, "and his room is darkened."

"Is—there—hope?" faltered the girl.

"There is always hope while God is merciful," returned the old woman gently. "And the poor gentleman keeps saying, 'It is for the best; it must be for the best.'"

"Say that I called, and—and—that I am so sorry—so very, very sorry."

And the pupil went away with her head bent down, and fearful of the passers-by seeing her eyes.

And every morning after she called, the same tremulous question on her lips, and the same dull pain in her eyes. And every day the world grew dimmer and dimmer to the great painter, until it closed on him entirely, and the perpetual night descended.

The doctors had not been able to do anything for him. So one morning they told him he might leave his room. And when he had been dressed, he once more entered the studio, where the well-nigh finished picture stood, and only knew that it was day because he felt the warmth of the sun upon his sunken cheeks.

As he sat there, with one hand resting lovingly on his easel, he heard a voice that thrilled his soul.

Hastily rising from his chair, and stumbling in his poor, blind way across the room, he called into the hall:

"Show Miss Carthew in."

Then, with arms outstretched, he waited until two soft, small hands were laid in his, and gently led him back to his easel. Thus the master and the pupil met again.

For some minutes silence reigned between them, broken only by the beatings of their own hearts and the throb of summer life as it filtered through the open window.

Then Robert Seton said:

"Draw away the veil, my dear."

The girl uncovered the canvas, and exposed its beauties to the glowing light—beauties patent and convincing to the eyes of all but him whose genius had called them into being.

"How does it look?" he asked sadly.

And with the old reverence and awe she answered:

"It is glorious, master." Then with a burst of uncontrollable and passionate grief: "And to think that it should lie dead and unfinished, and that the hands of the dear master should be powerless to call it into perfect life!"

The man winced as though she had struck him, and for a few moments he remained buried in somber thought. Then he said quickly, almost hopefully:

"It shall be called to perfect life, my dear, even though these poor hands of mine are powerless to complete the task."

"Oh, master," said the girl reverently, "whose hands other than yours are fit or capable to consummate so great a task?"

"Yours," said the painter, simply.

"Mine?"

"Ay, yours. You are my pupil. You understand my method, and have watched the picture waken into life. You love it even as I love it. You shall make Ophelia live and love, as I have made Hamlet."

"Oh, I dare not, master! Another touch than yours would be sacrilege."

"Then the picture must die."

"Better so, master, than it should live a maimed thing."

"But you will not maim it, my dear," cried the painter earnestly. "You are my favorite pupil, and my most promising. Others whom I have taught have names in the art world, and their pictures are lined in Burlington House, and sell for great sums. But none of them showed the promise that you show—none of them understood me as you understand me. Otherwise, should I have allowed you to keep me company in my work, and study my method, and watch me in my moments of hope and fear, of delight and despondence?"

"It shall be as you wish," she said slowly, "though you may live to hate me for it after."

Then he dropped the knife, sat down, and, with a smile of satisfaction, said:

"Take time, my dear. Make your sketches. Think out your subject. I will sit here day by day and watch you."

And as he spoke the sightless orbs under their quivering lids looked as though they could watch.

So, with fear and trembling, Ellen Carthew passed the day with pad and pencil, sketching and tearing up in her endeavors to create the face of an Ophelia worthy to be loved by the Hamlet of the master. And all the while the master sat by silent, and seemed to watch with sightless orbs.

So a week passed; and still the time had not come for the colors to be mixed and the life of the picture completed.

One day she threw away her pencils, and feeling her utter inability, burst into tears.

The painter laid his hand upon her shoulder tenderly.

"What is it, my dear?" he asked. "Is the task so hard?"

"Oh, master," she cried, "I am confronted with the same difficulty that proved a stumbling block to you."

"And that is?"

"That I cannot make Ophelia beautiful enough."

"Why, then," said Robert Seton, "don't try to make her beautiful. Make her only human."

"May I really paint her as I would have her be?" she asked, breathlessly. "Not in the least beautiful—not in the least beautiful."

"Paint her, my dear, as you would have her be, so long as she be human."

"Oh, yes," cried the girl earnestly, "she shall be human, she shall be real."

And with flushed cheeks and sparkling eyes she once more took up her drawing pad, and worked until the sun had turned red and the birds had long been in their nests. And a fine triumph rang in her tones when she said, as she rose to go:

"Master, I shall dare to touch the canvas tomorrow. Pray God, the child shall be a well-born child."

Three days afterward, when the colors had been mixed, and the face of the Ophelia began to dimly start into life, the great surgeon called at the house of Robert Seton.

An eminent German oculist was visting London. He had heard of the case of the great painter's blindness, and after mature consideration he was anxious to operate. Would Robert Seton consent? At the worst failure could but result. At the best, oh, God! at the best! Yes—yes—yes, Robert Seton would consent.

So the master took to his bed once more, while day by day the canvas grew nearer to the consummation of its perfect life.

There came a day when the brushes were cleaned, the palette laid aside, and Ophelia answered back the words of love that trembled on the lips of Hamlet.

There came a day—the selfsame day—when a bandage was removed, and a voice cried out:

"Oh, the light, the light! Shut it out, for its hurts me!"

And as the master cried out, all that could make or mar the master's work was done.

It was 5 o'clock on an autumn afternoon, when the twilight really had crept in, and the shadows were too deep to paint by, that Robert Seton, his sight still feeble, but restored, entered his studio on the arm of his favorite pupil.

"I hardly dare to show you what I have done," she said faintly. "I know now that you will hate me for taking you at your word."

"Let me see it, my dear," he said, gently patting her hand.

With trembling fingers she drew aside the curtains to let in the last of the daylight, and it filtered, gray and grim as the smile of a dying man, upon the finished canvas.

Robert Seton stood before the easel, shading his eyes with his hands and then uttered an exclamation.

"Oh, master, you are disappointed—you are angry!"

"Not I, my dear."

"It is not human enough!"

"Of all things it is most human, my dear."

"It is not beautiful enough!"

"Of all things it is most beautiful, my dear."

"What, master, you——"

"Flatter, my dear? Not I."

Now this autumn twilight could not possibly of itself have thrown a red glow on the girl's cheeks; but even in this light the cheeks of Ellen Carthew were crimson.

"I never thought that you would see it," she said, in a low tone.

The arm of the master was around her, and she was close to his breast.

"My love," he said, "you have drawn the face that I have longed, yet feared, to draw—more beautiful than any my fancy could have pictured; more human and more kind than any that has entered into my life before. I am not vain enough to ask you for the answer that your brush has painted. My love!"

"Oh, Robert! But I never thought that you would see it, you know!"

"Dearest! all things are for the best. God often makes the alleys and the bypaths darkest that lead most swiftly to the heavenly light."

GOOD COLD WEATHER DISH.

They were eating that excellent cold weather dish, corned beef and cabbage.

"No wonder cabbage is heating," said the farmer. "It perspires more than any other living thing, animal or vegetable.

"Yes, the fact has been calculated out by experts, and it is true that an acre of cabbage perspires over twenty tons of water a day. An acre of cabbage plants, planted in rows eighteen inches apart and eighteen inches from each other, has been known to give off, in twelve hours, precisely 20,411 pounds of water.

"So, if you want a good heating dish for cold weather, eat cabbage, and you won't go wrong."

Practical Poultry Culture in the Southwest.

DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF STANDARD-BRED POULTRY AND THE PEOPLE WHO GROW IT.

THE THANKSGIVING BIRD.

TURKEY RAISING AS AN ENTERPRISE IN SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA.

By Henry W. Kruckeberg.

NOTE.—Short articles of a practical nature are cordially solicited from breeders and fanciers, relating their experience with poultry, giving their successes as well as failures. The writer will be glad, in so far as lies in his power, to answer inquiries of public interest bearing on any phase of an enlightened poultry culture, such as feeding and management, disease and its prevention, market conditions, fancy points, etc. The co-operation of utility breeders and fanciers is cordially solicited to the end that the best thought and practice in an enlightened poultry culture may find a healthy expression in these columns.

THE item which appeared in The Times on Thanksgiving morning announcing the confiscation and destruction of 20,000 pounds of cold-storaged Eastern imported turkeys because tainted and unfit for human food, certainly furnishes food for thought, and possesses an important bearing on our agricultural developments. When we allow for the fact that fully 90 per cent. of the turkeys sold in the Los Angeles markets are shipped in from Texas, Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa and other middle Western points we are quite apt to wonder "where we are at" on the turkey question as an adjunct to an enlightened agricultural practice. We naturally ask why import turkeys when we can grow them on our own farms? But can we? Has not the experiment been tried and resulted only in an indifferent success? Do climatic and soil conditions in the Southwest supply the environment calculated to be conducive to turkey culture as a safe business proposition? Does this section provide the insectivorous and vegetable foods which abound in the country to which the turkey was indigenous before civilization took possession of its native haunts in the Mississippi and Ohio Valleys, and portions of Texas? These are some of the salient features to be considered in the production of turkeys away from the country to which they naturally belong.

"'Way back East" the turkey has been aptly styled "the farmer's fowl"—on farms consisting of eighty acres and up, which afford ample range, and rather extensive foraging ground. To be sure they are grown on small places in limited numbers—the quantity so grown is hardly sufficient to affect the markets to any appreciable extent. The country of the Mississippi and Ohio Valleys is strikingly different in character from that of the Southwest. For the most part it is wooded with expanse of open country and glades, all interspersed with running streams fringed with timber growths and open meadows. These conditions afford a diversity of insect and vegetable foods during the growing season which are more or less absent in the Southwest. In spite of this, however, turkeys can be grown here in favorable situations. Low, damp, cold and heavy clay soils are inimical to best results, the birds being healthiest when raised along the interior foothills where the soil drains quickly. They should have range where at least a portion of their food may be secured. The best success with this bird has been attained in the San Joaquin, Sacramento and other northern valleys. In Oregon and Washington it does well.

In Southern California turkey culture has never attained any great commercial importance, due possibly to prevailing local conditions, or to the fact that breeders have not sufficiently mastered the situation so as to supply the bird an environment calculated to offset any drawbacks to its development that the country may possess in the way of foods, shelter, etc. Though noted as a warm climate, yet we all know that the range of temperature is radical between midday and midnight, and also in shady situations as compared to those in the open sunshine. These conditions must be carefully considered by the breeder who is to grow in quantity and along commercial lines.

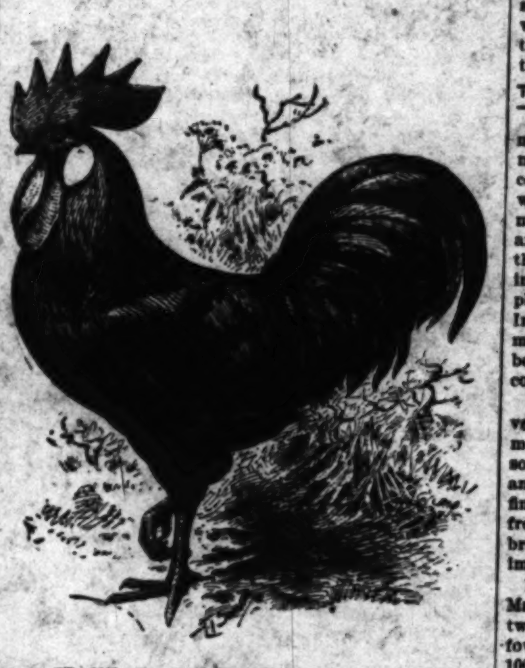
The situation selected being favorable, the next step is breeding and management. This is indeed a wide subject, and can hardly be treated intelligently in a mere paragraph. Turkey eggs are usually hatched in the natural way, either under turkey hens or the ordinary farmyard hen. Some success has been attained in artificial incubation and brooding, but in the main the former system is pretty closely adhered to by breeders. The period of incubation is twenty-eight days, though this is at times prolonged. The most difficult part of raising turkeys is the care of the young chicks. Experience is the best—and most bitter—teacher of this art. The mother turkey must be given a coop in which she can stand erect and the floor must be kept clean and always dry. The chicks must not be handled or petted, for it must be constantly borne in mind that they are semi-wild and thrive best when let alone. They must be allowed plenty of exercise and made to hunt for their food as soon as able. When their feathers are growing, care should be taken to place them within reach of sun and shade. It should never be forgotten that in the wild state their food is bugs, worms, and seeds hunted for and foraged for continually. There was then no overfeeding upon rich and unnatural foods that impaired health and produced bowel troubles or other ailments that naturally followed unwholesome food. They subsisted by their own efforts while under domestication they are quite too often forced to eat unnatural foods that are furnished in the hope of forcing them to an unusual growth. If the grower wishes to copy nature as nearly as possible, the young poults may be given for their first meal fine oatmeal and finely-cracked wheat or corn with a little fine grit of some kind, and a very little granulated meat scrap. Some of the commercial brands of "poultry food" are also good. They should have clean water convenient, where they can help themselves at will. One of the most successful growers in the country feeds the young chicks at the start oatmeal, broken wheat and hulled oats and coarser cracked corn. When running at large, they should be taught to come close to the barns twice a day for food.

The economic feeding of turkeys is a question of wide solution. In their native country when allowed free range they pick up much of their own food consisting of insect life and vegetable matter. These, however, are supplemented by the leading breeders in the Middle West with a grain ration, usually corn and kaffir corn, but a mixture of corn and wheat, or corn, wheat and oats is also good. In California corn is rather expensive, and so wheat is more largely relied on, supplemented with green stuff of one kind or another, with alfalfa as a base or leading green food.

There are six varieties of turkeys recognized in the American Poultry Standard, namely, the Bronze, Narragansett, Buff, Slate, White and Black. Of these the first mentioned constitutes fully 90 per cent. of the commercial output. The remaining sorts are bred but sparingly—indeed, they constitute but a small representation at any of our shows.

The Black Minorca in the Southwest.

The Black Minorca is another member in the Mediterranean class which is deservedly popular in all portions of California, finding an environment decidedly to its liking and breeding true to type and color. The fine, lustrous black of the plumage when coupled to the aristocratic carriage of the males and the neat and trim appearance of the hens, make a strong appeal to the fancier and lover of pure-bred fowl. In this climate they are quite hardy, lay the largest egg of any variety in the Mediterranean or American classes, the hens holding their own in annual egg production with any of the breeds. The Minorcas are longer and deeper-bodied than the Leghorns, possess very large single and rose combs, white or creamy ear lobes, white skin, slate-colored legs and beautiful sweeping tails. For table purposes they rank with any of the Mediterranean breeds, but cannot be classed with the English or American breeds as an all-purpose breed.



STANDARD BLACK MINORCA MALE.

It is the expressed opinion of Eastern judges and breeders who know the Pacific Coast Minorcas and Leghorns that they are on the whole superior to those grown east of the Rocky Mountains. This is in a measure explained by the fact that in the Southwest they find conditions similar to those of the Mediterranean countries to which all of them are native. Our Black Minorcas, White Leghorns, White Faced Black Spanish and Brown Leghorns have met the enemy in competition in Eastern shows, and invariably held their own.

There are but two varieties, the Blacks and the Whites, differing only as to color of plumage. The latter, however, in so far as the writer's observation goes, are not so hardy nor so long and deep of body as the former, nor are they anywhere near so popular. The standard weights for the Single Comb Blacks are, cock 9 pounds, hen 7½, cockerel 7½, and pullet 6½. They are the largest of the Mediterranean class.

Poultry in the Procession.

Recently Santa Ana had a public celebration in honor of the advent of the electric car line between that enterprising town and Los Angeles, which was individualized by a large concourse of people from the surrounding towns, the events culminating in an industrial parade, typical of the resources of Orange county. This included a float representing the poultry industry of our next-door neighboring county, a counterfeit presentment of which we give on this page. This float was unique character and attracted wide attention.

The twenty-five coops shown contained standard-bred fowls of the following varieties: White Plymouth Rocks, White Crested Black Polish, White Leghorns, Barred Plymouth Rocks, Silver Laced Wyandottes, White Peking ducks, Rhode Island Reds, Br Orpingtons, Game Bantams, Silver Pe Buff Leghorns, Black Minorcas, Brow Light Brahmas. The Cost of Eggs to the Breeder.

It goes without saying that the average making egg production his specialty ness in a sort of haphazard way, comes to his book-keeping. Owing to who can give specific and exact data as maintenance per fowl, cost of producing and fixed charges of his plant is the than the rule. This indifference to an in carrying on a successful business in large plains why there are failures in the Indeed, most any enterprise conducted methods would flourish but indifferently be abandoned for want of sufficient profits continuance.

In this connection Bulletin No. 212 of the versity Experiment Station gives the ments covering flocks of several breeds something like 5000 head of fowls. and managed under careful and scientific final results of which may be summarized from the mass of statistics bearing on the breeds, managements, and periods of imum egg production:

In the seventeen weeks from Decem March 29, 1902, and in the similar period twenty-nine flocks representing ten fowls, the average daily production of 100 fowls.

During the same period the average dozen eggs was nearly 18 cents. The most eggs during December and January also in March.

The egg production of pullets was notably that of hens particularly in the earlier price of eggs was highest.

The average cost of feeding 100 hens weeks was $35.33.

The average value of product exceeded by $16.13 per 100 fowls.

Here the cost of producing a dozen of cents seems high and may possibly be existence of drones or non-prolific laying ers in and about Petaluma, the center of try west of the Rocky Mountains, put the of a dozen eggs at from 12½ cents to 15 erage price for the past year at that cents. Consequently, if a breeder possessed ing strain averaging say 150 eggs per annum would be about $1 per hen. Against this, be set the fixed charges of the plant, sickness and other causes, and the contingencies which may arise. The breeder ness for eggs averaging year in and year net profit on a lot of laying hens is doing That this may be greatly increased by ment, favorable conditions of soil and environment rendering the production poultry feed on an economic basis No cognizance is taken in these estimates nues to be derived from the sale of eggs for hatching.

Just at present with hen fruit at 50 the poultry breeder who cannot get in velvet in the business cannot be considered of the essentials of successful poultry Southwest.

The Indian Runner Duck.

C. S. C. of Santa Cruz writes The Times for information regarding Indian Runner ducks. His letter was submitted for reply to Mrs. F. T. Hungerford, of Hynes, who has had experience with the breed and kindly furnished the writer with the following reply to our correspondent's inquiry:

"I find Indian Runner ducks very profitable to raise. They are healthy and hardy, have no lice or mites and [illegible] diseases.

If properly fed and cared for, they can be put on the market at from nine to ten weeks old. They will then be feathered out, and weigh about four pounds. Indian Sign Language.

A POSSESSION OF THE ABORIGINES OF THE PLAINS.

Washington Cor. N. Y. Evening Post.

ONE of the accomplishments of Maj. Hugh L. Scott, who was Gen. Leonard Wood's adjutant through his administration in Cuba and is serving him in the same capacity in the Philippines, is a very thorough knowledge of the sign language. Maj. Scott learned the rudiments of the language from the Indians while campaigning under Custer, and gradually perfected himself thereafter, partly by practice and partly by a deliberate effort to increase his vocabulary by the offer, from time to time, of a prize to any Indian who would bring him a new sign. But of late it has been almost impossible to "pose" him. In one long sojourn in the Southwest in recent years his offer cost him only one payment, and that was for the sign of the walnut—a fruit which does not grow in the north country where his earlier native instructors lived.

Only the Indians of the plains—that is, the aborigines of the great tract lying, roughly, between the Mississippi River and the Rocky Mountains—possess a sign language. The tribes in the far Northwest have the Chinook jargon in common; those on the Atlantic slope use the Chippewa tongue as a "court language," as it were, some members of all these groups being able to speak and understand it and thus to hold communication with the occasional visiting stranger. But these eastern Indians have always been rather sedentary, whereas on the plains the tribes are nomadic, and long ago were in the habit of following the buffalo herds from place to place. This brought them in contact with each other, and the sign language, as the only practicable universal medium of conversation, became highly developed, and was handed down from father to son in every family. The plains Indians include the Blackfeet, Crows, Assiniboines, Grosventres, Mandans, Arikarees, Pend d'Oreilles, Kootenais, Flatheads, Sioux, Northern and Southern Cheyennes, Northern and Southern Arapahoes, Shoshones, Bannocks, Pawnees, Osages, Omahas, Poncas, Otoes, Iowas, Sac and Foxes, Caddos, Wichitas, Kiowas, Comanches and Apaches.

The basis of the language is the representation of an idea by means of a gesture sign. Each sign, there is excellent reason to suppose, grew out of some need of the Indian and its satisfaction, and could be traced to an attempt to suggest, if not actually to reproduce, an organic feature of some natural object, or one of its attitudes or motions. A good many of the signs, of course, have to represent primarily an abstraction, but even these can usually be carried back to a concrete origin. Thus, a question which we indicate in the spoken tongue by an inflection of the voice, is indicated in the sign language by the extension of all the fingers and the thumb, spread apart, and a twist of the wrist, two, three or more times repeated. This looks, at a first glance, like an arbitrary symbol; but Capt. Scott's theory is that it is merely a growth from the extension of two fingers—the index and its neighbor—and, by a twist of the wrist, bringing first one and then the other uppermost. There he finds the sign of a man with two hearts, or, as we should say, a man of two minds; first one purpose is dominant, then the other; then the first again, and so on. This is the mood of hesitation between two courses. Add a third finger to the group and his hesitation becomes doubt. A fourth and a fifth alternative suggests themselves, and his doubt becomes confusion. He does not know; he must ask someone. The meaning the revolution and the counter-revolution of all the fingers by the motion of the wrist is, therefore, uncertainty, lack of knowledge, interrogation.

The application of this sign is governed by the conditions under which it is used. An Indian meets a friend riding. Out go his arm and fingers, and the wrist turns. He wishes to ask: "Where are you going?" He encounters another Indian in a hostile country, and the same gesture means: "Who are you?" He finds you listless when he wishes to tell you something; his fingers and wrist say: "Do you follow me?"

The sign for fat would probably puzzle many. It is made by holding the two fists together with the knuckles upward, and then drawing them apart and downward, so as to describe an arc of a circle. This outwardly bears no relation to the substance indicated. But go back to the time when the Indian used to chase the buffalo, driving them before him into a narrow pass. As they gallop through this with their backs toward him he runs his eye quickly over the herd to select the particular animal he is to hunt down and kill for meat. It is the fat one he is after, and he can judge of its condition only by its hump, which is shaped like two fists, and in its full distention has the silhouette of an arc.

Or, again, there is the sign for woman; the two fists laid sidewise against the top of the head, with the thumbs out, and then brought down, one on either side, rubbing the head as they come, as far as the ears, where they stop. Old books of exploration describe the Sioux women as wearing their hair parted in the middle, but thrown out in wide rolls at either side of the head. In the sign we have probably this distinctive characteristic of appearance, reproduced as nearly as may be with head and hands.

MRS. ROOSEVELT'S THOUGHTFULNESS.

When President Roosevelt is at his summer home at Oyster Bay two secret service men sit all night under a big tree near the house. It is only on very stormy nights that they desert the tree and take refuge on the veranda, and are thus protected from the rain, but not from the north wind that sometimes sweeps in from Long Island Sound. During a storm late last summer the wind, moaning through the trees, drove the rain in sheets upon the veranda, and the most sheltered place the secret service men could find was wet and chill.

Within the house all was silent. Apparently everybody had gone to bed. But suddenly the side door creaked, and a feminine voice called out: "Come here, won't you, please." The secret service men lost no time in responding, for they recognized the voice.

"I've been worrying about you men out in this awful night," said Mrs. Roosevelt, "and thought that some hot coffee would do you good. Come in and drink it. It was too late to call the cook, so I made it myself. I hope that it is all right."

"It seemed to me to be the finest coffee I had ever tasted," remarked the secret service man when he told this little story of the ever-present thoughtfulness of Mrs. Roosevelt for those around her.—[Success Magazine.

Farming in California—The Land and Its Products.

FIELD NOTES.

Grazing Conditions.

LIVE stock will soon be "in clover" all over Southern California. The season so far is one of the most promising on record. In the north, grazing conditions have not been so favorable, the green feed usually available at this time of the year being scarce or totally absent. Late rains have improved matters, and a prosperous year will follow for the whole State. But the continuous clear weather in the ceneral districts has been a blessing to the grape men and the fruit dryers. Six months of continuous drought has been experienced but very few times before in the central counties, the records of fifty-seven years scarcely showing a parallel. With a moderate, wet winter, such as the last, Southern California will have the most abundant and lasting pasturage ever seen in this section.

America's Hop Crop.

OF the 235,000,000 pounds of hops the world has produced this year, America has grown about one-fourth. The figures are interesting in view of the great activities in hop-growing the present season upon the Pacific Coast. Germany produced 58,300,000 pounds; Austria 37,000,000, England 60,500,000, America 52,800,000, Belgium, France and Russia filling out the total. This is in excess of last year's output by 60,000,000 pounds. The prevailing prices are from $13 to $25 per hundredweight, an Austrian district receiving the latter price for its choicest grade.

Our Great Rival.

I DO not know what the standing of The Pacific Homestead may be in its own town, but it occasionally contains strange statements, one of which has cast some doubt upon the claims of California as the leading producer of English walnuts. Here is the queer writing. Sorry that Southern California could not have been even "mentioned:"

"Walnut trees cannot be grown in all parts of our country, and it is in only a few sections that they can be grown successfully from a commercial standpoint. The State of Oregon and parts of Washington and California in certain sections lying between the Cascades and the coast are especially adapted to their culture. The planting of an orchard of English walnut trees today is no more an experiment, but in Oregon, especially in this section named above, it has been proven to be a great source of revenue.

"At the present time the State of California probably outstrips Oregon in its acreage of walnut orchards, but it is an established fact that this State produces larger yields per tree than does California, and in that State some of the very highest priced land is given over to the culture of the English walnut and has made independently rich many of those who have taken up this most important industry."

Seedless Apple Fake.

A LONG time ago this department of The Times exposed the seedless-apple fraud. It's easy. Just keep your thinker in operation, wait for verification of any big story told for money, look at the claims made for the new things horticulturally, and, above all, be conservative. But the Buffalo Inquirer, New York Times, American Inventor, Scientific American, New York Herald, National Nurseryman and a score of other distinguished papers gave the Spencer seedless apple a great send-off, some of them editorialily. Now they must be heartily ashamed of themselves. Col. Brackett, the pomologist of the Department of Agriculture, now states that the seedless-apple propaganda is apparently one of the most carefully-considered and intelligently worked-out schemes for fooling and defrauding the public which has ever been attempted along agricultural lines. There is at least one thing this department of The Times is proud of, namely, that it has never been fooled by a fake proposition. That is worth money to the farmers.

"That hereafter the legal and standard box or crate for oranges shall measure twelve inches in width and twelve inches in depth on the inside, making each end or compartment of said box or crate, whenever the same contains a middle partition, twelve inches in length, twelve inches in depth, and twelve inches in width. No crate or box intended for the sale or shipment of oranges except of the standard measure herein specified, shall be manufactured or sold."

Feeding Alfalfa to Horses.

IT seems to be the general opinion that alfalfa hay is not a good horse feed, and especially for horses on the road or for fast work. Now, I would like to correct this, as alfalfa is too good a feed to be condemned for any purpose, says I. D. O'Donnell. The fact is nearly every one who feeds horses feeds them too much hay. The same would apply to all kinds of hay. If you give a horse about what alfalfa he should have, say twelve to fifteen pounds per day for horses of 1000 pounds, and a fair grain ration, you will find he will travel just as far and just as fast as with other kinds of hay, and be in better condition.

But if you allow your horse to eat thirty to forty pounds per day, which they will of alfalfa if you give it to them, you are sure to have a horse that is short-winded and sloppy. One of the famous trotting horses on the Eastern turf with record below 2:03 is fed alfalfa as his only hay.—[Orchard and Farm.

Profit-sharing Farming in England.

CONSUL LIEFELD, of Freiburg, Germany, transmits the following extract from the London Daily Mail dealing with the efforts to check the depopulation of English villages:

"With a view to placing a check upon the depopulation of Kentish villages, which is reaching alarming proportions, several large landowners have decided on a system of profit sharing with their agricultural laborers, hoping by this means to stimulate "Hodge" to take a greater interest in his employment. The system of sharing farm profits was initiated by Mr. E. W. Hussey, a large estate owner, of Scotney Castle. Every year the hands are called together, and each receives a share of the profits made on the year's workings of the farms. On the last occasion of the profit sharing each man received $13.13, while a youth's share amounted to $8.75. In cases where several members of a family are engaged on a farm, sums approaching $48.66 have been taken home. The system has had such successful results that Mr. Hussey has received numerous inquiries asking for details as to the working of the scheme.

Hopes A-glimmering.

ANY hopes which have been entertained by the landless and moneyless that the result of the national irrigation act will be to give them a good, irrigated farm for a song, and any fears which Eastern farmers may have had that they were to be completely snowed under by the products of free government irrigated farms, have been effectually disposed of. The cost of the bare land under the canal system thus far decided upon by the government ranges from $18 to $40 per acre, with a probable average of $30. When the necessary improvements have been made, these irrigated farms will cost quite as much as farms equally well improved can probably be bought for in good Eastern farming districts and much more than they will cost in the Southern States. That they will all be eventually taken is certain. Whether or not the offering of the lands is a generation too early we shall know within a year or two.—[San Francisco Chronicle.

Another Humbug Singed.

THE Department of Agriculture has found it necessary to roast the advertisers of another fake agricultural scheme, and has issued the following warning:

"As is well known, the orris root of commerce is grown almost exclusively in Italy, the chief centers of production being at Florence and Verona. The plants yielding the article are the common species of Iris, especially I. Florentina, I. Germanica and I. pallida, cultivated widely as the common fleur de lis of many gardens. In many letters, advertisements are cited in which the cultivation of orris root is boomed as a quick road to wealth, and the conditions of the market are described in glowing but entirely misleading terms. One advertisement states that orris root is worth 40 cents per pound, is protected by a duty of 25 per cent., and meets with an annual demand equaling $2,000,000. On this basis, an offer of roots for cultivation is made at an excessive price. As a matter of fact, the average price of dried orris root of commercial grade varies between 3.8 and 9.6 cents per pound during the period from 1897 to 1904, inclusive. There is no duty on orris root. The total importation averages about $20,000 annually. During the last two years the orris business in Italy has been in a somewhat dubious state, due to the low price realized and the lack of profit to the grower. Owing to such deceiving statements as above cited, there is a great likelihood that many people will be misled to their financial loss. Some advertisers claim to have the indorsement of the Department of Agriculture, whereas the department has in no way suggested the culture of orris except on a small scale in a purely experimental way. It is of the opinion that the outlook for building up the orris industry in the United States is at present not good. Although a limited demand may arise for roots for purposes of cultivation, one should not fail to remember that an orris industy can be built up only on the tion of the root in a commercial way.

Gardening in California—Flower and Vegetable.

Vegetable Growing in California.

IT is an interesting fact that, though California's horticultural prominence now rests upon fruit products, the first attraction to the new State after the discovery of gold, was the wonderful size of the garden vegetables. The reports of immense size, of acreage product and prices secured, were almost incredible because so [illegible] in advance of ordinary standards, but the statements were so fully assured that many were drawn to California by them. The horticultural pioneers, however, soon found that the immigrants from Asia and the [illegible] regions could, by cheap living and by doing their own work, cut under the American growers [illegible] had to employ high-priced labor, and so the latter [illegible] from the field, leaving the opportunity to the [illegible] foreigner. Thus vegetable growing from an [illegible] point of view, came into disrepute and largely [illegible] this disadvantage at present.

[illegible] conditions affecting vegetable growing are [illegible] and various. Nowhere else, perhaps, is it so essential that certain things should be done just at the [illegible] time and in the right way. If these requirements [illegible] fairly met, the product is large and fine; if they are [illegible], the failure is sharp and complete. This fact [illegible] given rise to the impression that California is a [illegible] place to grow vegetables, which is not true unless [illegible] knowledge or the nerve to apply it. One of the [illegible] causes of failure is in following seasons and methods which have yielded success under conditions prevailing [illegible] of the Sierra Nevada mountains. If one begins [illegible]-making in the springtime, the plants do not secure deep rooting, which is necessary to carry them [illegible] to success in the dry season, and the garden is [illegible] to be a disappointment. This house completed cost $40 and the profit accruing from each setting of plants is $150.

The roots used for filling this house are dug from the field in the fall and left on top of the ground, to permit the frost to thoroughly work on them. About January 1 they are taken into the dark house and placed as close together in the beds as possible. The interstices are filled with soil, using enough to level up the top nicely. A thorough watering with cold water completes the process of planting.

For heating the rhubarb house, Mr. Paulhamus uses an ordinary kitchen stove, which he places near the entrance. The pipe runs the length of the house close to the roof and enters a chimney at the back. The temperature is kept as near 50 degrees as possible, but frequently runs a little higher; great care is exercised, at all times, to keep it from running too high.

In about three weeks from planting the first crop will be ready to pull and market. The darker the room has been kept, the better color the stalk and the smaller the leaf. When the stalk is fully grown the leaf should not be more than 2 inches across and should be of a clear, golden color. In pulling, an effort is made to keep the plants pruned down to six, or at most eight, eyes to a hill and but one stalk at a time is pulled from each eye. This, of course, is the stalk that is most fully developed. At the end of the season, if the roots have not been forced too heavily, the clumps may be planted out in the field and used in the house again the following year. Two settings ends their usefulness.—[Orange Judd Farmer.

Home Market Gardening.

THERE is a limited area of land about Los Angeles, situated in that certain altitude where the thermal zone oscilates. Here is where the speculative gardener loves to ply his vocation, lured by the promise of fabulous prices he spares no labor nor expense to bring his garden to the marketing stage. If the temperature favors him, and Jack Frost keeps below the altitude of his garden he is fortunate indeed, and his labor has not been in vain. More of this frostless land could be made available by developing water thereon.

The gardener on lower land is less speculative, he expects frost, and regulates his crops accordingly.

The gardener from the East, accustomed to making up the hot beds on St. Patrick's Day and planting semi-hardy vegetables, such as radish, beets, turnips, lettuce, cabbage, onion, carrots, parsnip and spinach and all vegetables that are kin to these, soon learns that around Los Angeles these vegetables are planted in the fall and thrive all winter, while St. Patrick's Day is a signal for planting the less hardy vegetables; which include almost everything not mentioned above, particularly vines of every description and corn of all varieties.

Early planting does not indicate an early crop. A bean that would under favorable conditions mature to the marketing stage in six weeks may consume ten or even twelve weeks under unfavorable conditions.

To the speculative gardener there is little to be said; he sows nothing he may never reap. He is not discouraged when frost destroys his crop; he plants again, knowing he has a better chance than his competitor on lower ground. To the inexperienced gardener of this class, I would say, try to avoid planting just before a rain, rather soon as possible after a rain to give the seed a chance to germinate and grow above the surface before another rain packs the soil. Do not plant deep during the winter and early spring, one inch I would consider deep enough for any seed and too deep for many small seeds.—[The Market Gardener.

Truck Crops.

A GREAT many garden vegetables are grown in Algeria, among which may be enumerated artichokes, asparagus, beans (broad, kidney, and string), beets, Brussels sprouts, cabbage, cardoon, carrots, cauliflower, celery, chick peas, chicory, cucumbers, eggplant, garlic lentils, lettuce, melons, onions, peas, peppers, sorrel, spinach, squash, strawberries, sweet potatoes, tomatoes, turnips and watermelons. Most of these are grown chiefly for the local markets. In the littoral zone, however, the production in winter of early vegetables for export to Europe is an industry of considerable importance, some 20,000 tons being shipped out of the country every year. Artichokes, potatoes, peas, and string beans are the most important of these. The growing of early tomatoes for export is also becoming a profitable industry.

Near Algiers, especially, market gardens abound. There the industry is chiefly in the hands of natives of the Balearic Islands, while in Western Algeria the gardeners are generally Spanish, and in the eastern part of the colony Italians and Maltese. Neither the natives nor the French colonists have gone into the business of growing truck crops for export, although Arab and Kabyle families usually have small gardens in which they raise vegetables for their own use.

There are a number of factors which combine to limit gardens as a commercial enterprise to the neighborhood of the seashore. Nowhere else, except in the Sahara, are the winters sufficiently warm to allow Algerian vegetables to be put upon the markets of Europe early enough to insure a remunerative price. As it is, the competition of the Riviera, and other parts of the northern shore of the Mediterranean, has in recent years cut down by 40 or 50 per cent. the prices formerly obtained. Facilities for rapid transportation by water, such as are obtainable near the coast, are essential to the success of this industry. An abundant supply of water for irrigation is indispensable. Finally, the large quantities of manure, sewage, etc., that are applied to the gardens can only be had in the large cities of the seaboard. At Tunis, Archimedean screws placed in the drains are said to be used for lifting sewage onto the fields.—[U. S. Government Report.

War on Morning Glories.

THE morning glory propagates from the root, and every piece will throw up a sprout. Farmers that cultivate lands upon which this pest grows should be careful about dragging the weeds around with the cultivators and the farm tools because every root will produce a new plant, thus spreading them over the farm very fast.

Morning glories are not so bad a pest as thistles, as they do not prick and interfere with handling the crops or in feeding, but they wind about the stalks of grain and corn and take the plant food and moisture away from the growing crop.

Take as much land as can be put in a summer fallow and plow every week. One season's work extending through the hot, dry months will kill the morning glory. Sheep will prevent their spreading, but will not kill them. Hogs, if confined on small patches, will kill them, as they are very fond of the roots and will go after every one.—[Farm Sentinel.

ABOLISHING SORCERY.

CIVIC OFFICIALS IN KOREA TRYING TO ABATE THE CUSTOM OF WORSHIPING IDOLS.

[Boston Transcript:] It is counted significant of conditions in the East by leaders in the Christian churches, and as indicative of the enlightenment that has come to the eastern peoples, that some of the grosser forms of idolatry and superstition are giving place to more reasonable forms of worship; sometimes Buddhism or Confucianism, and sometimes to Christianity. In Korea there has been official action taken against forms of idol worship, which have been for ages unmolested. A report of this action has just been received at the office of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions, from one of the representatives of that organization in Korea. The report comes from Seoul, the principal Korean city, and is, in part, as follows:

"Several times in the last few years someone has been appointed chief of police here who was ashamed of the prevailing superstition and idolatry, and who undertook by force to abolish it. 'Mutangs' or sorceresses were forbidden to perform their incantations, or to beat their gongs, as is their wont when endeavoring to drive the evil spirits out of the sick.

"But the office of chief of police, like all other political appointments in Korea, is short and uncertain. A man might begin such a campaign, and before it was well under way another would have his place, perhaps a man who had no objection to spirit worship. Then the 'mutangs' and 'pansus' would come out of their hiding places, and the sound of the gongs and cymbals would once more be heard.

"Last summer, while waiting for a train in a village not far from Seoul, the Presbyterian missionary heard one Korean say to another: 'This is a dreadful state of affairs; my brother is very sick, and although I have tried to get a mutang, no one will come for fear of being arrested and punished, so I suppose there is nothing for it but to let the poor fellow die.' In February of this year one Shin held the office of chief of police, and he conducted a vigorous campaign against the sorcerers. Policemen were sent to all shrines in the city to tear down the venerated pictures, most of them being ugly, and sorcerers, male and female, were arrested by the score.

"Palace Lady Om (mother of the King's youngest son,) like all the women of Korea, has been an ardent worshiper of the spirits, and a certain mutang went often to the palace to consult with her. Even this 'palace-going' mutang was arrested and locked up, so that all practicing the business were terrified, and many fled from their homes. It was recently told, on what seems good authority, that quite a number of sorcerers were executed in the city jail last spring. When first heard, this report seems incredible, as nothing had been said about it in the papers, but, as the informant truly remarked, 'Many things are done by the government which the papers are not allowed to report.' It was further said that the sorcerers that were executed had been carrying on their work in secret, and the authorities felt that an example had to be made of them, in order that others might know that the new laws must be obeyed. Buddhist and Confucian temples have not been affected by these new rules.

"In a large village called Sam Kai, on the river ten li from Seoul, there was a building formerly used as a temple to 'Kwan Kong,' the god of war. The idols and pictures had been removed by the police and the house stood vacant. The temple was built many years ago by a man named Shin, who was advised to erect it by a sorcerer, who said that the man's son would recover from an illness thereby. The boy did recover and is now grown to manhood, but the temple has now been turned over by Mr. Shin to a little company of Christians who worship in the village under the leadership of a colporteur named Chun."

The Strenuous Life—Nervous Exhaustion.

A FEW weeks ago a newspaper quoted Thomas A. Edison as saying: "People eat and sleep too much and don't work enough," and there was a chorous of comment, largely more or less favorable to his idea.

A few days ago the same paper quoted Frank R. Lawrence of New York thus: "As a rule the vice of American people is not overeating, but overworking."

This leads an exchange to ask "which is right?" Surely, not Edison.

The following communication has been received from Caleb Ray of Pueblo, Colo.:

"For more than a year I have been a reader of your highly interesting and most instructive columns in The Times. I am in hearty accord with your views on hygiene and the new idea on the preservation of health.

"Along one line of the modern man's ailments, however, I fail to recall your having expressed yourself during the period of my reading your articles. That is of the business man's—the strenuous kinds—nerve, heart and stomach tire and ache—the sort that overtakes him insiduously, after years of hurry and anxiety incident to the sharp ups and downs of the erratic business life of the West. When first his nerves become shaky, then his stomach fails to perform its work well, then inability to sleep with restful effect becomes a most dreadful factor in the sum of his miseries, and last and perhaps worst of all, his heart jumps and thumps, accompanied often with small annoying pains, and always with more or less irritability, constipation, too, being evident in the list of troubles of the victim of the strenuous life. An article from your pen on how these sufferers can find relief and perhaps cure would, I am sure, be productive of immense good, for their name is legion."

The thinking portion of the American public is becoming alarmed at the rapidly increasing number of cases where men break down from overwork, also the vast increase of Bright's disease in our large cities. The extraordinary statement was recently made that nearly 6 per cent. of Chicago's male population in early manhood is afflicted with Bright's disease. The latest report of the State Commission in Lunacy of New York State shows the startling fact that 347 cases of insanity last year were caused by overstrain.

To what is this due? Chiefly to the "strenuous life" indulged in by Americans, together with hasty eating and the abuse of stimulants. If you try to burn a candle in a draught it will burn a much shorter time. If you prefer "a short life and a merry one," all right. But even your short life is not likely to be very merry, if you are afflicted with dyspepsia and its train of attendant ills.

A German physician recently pointed out that "although more temperate in the use of alcohol than the Germans, and working an average of 10 per cent. shorter hours, the Americans are exhausted earlier in life." They may work shorter hours, but they crowd two or three days' work into one, and give themselves no time to eat. The German, or the Swiss, may begin his office work at 7 in the morning, work for an hour before breakfast—which consists usually of milk, coffee and a roll—then at about ten he will often go out and have a mug of beer and a piece of bread and cheese. At half past twelve or so there is a leisurely lunch, followed perhaps by a game of dominoes for a black coffee. At five another mug of beer and in the evening the dinner. In Swiss towns even the drug stores are—or were—closed from 12 to 2. The above is not a hygienic dietary, but it is more conducive to long life than a hasty swallowing by the American at the lunch counter of milk and pie.

Discussing the subject of overwork and its great object lesson, a writer in an English paper says:

"It is almost impossible to present in orderly array all the symptoms which may be regarded as the indications of nervous exhaustion, and the probable precaution of premature disease from brain strain and overwork. These symptoms, indeed, will vary somewhat with the individual—with his hereditary tendencies, habits and surroundings.

"There are, however, certain common and positive evidences of existing or coming evil which are present in many cases. The most prominent of these early warnings, which are at the same time symptoms of the affections or conditions most conveniently termed acute neurasthenia are as follows: (1.) Certain physical symptoms, such as excessive irritability of temper; depression of spirits; morbid impulses and fears; constantly recurring thoughts, phrases, or suspicions; sense of effort; impairment of memory and attention; and change in habits and methods of mental work. (2.) Laxity or immobility of countenance. (3.) Diminution or loss of physical resisting power. (4.) Heart failure. (5.) Sleeplessness. (6.) Pain or distress in back of the head and neck. (7.) Nervous dyspepsia.

"Intellectual work of itself does not injure health or shorten life, but mental overwork, particularly when associated with emotional strain, is a frequent cause of nervous break-down and premature disease.

"Health and life are sometimes lost through forgetfulness of the fact that mental strain and overwork are particularly dangerous to those in middle life or advanced in years who attempt brain work and responsibilities to which they have not been accustomed. The effect of suddenly-imposed mental strain on these classes is especially disastrous."

This question of nervous exhaustion, brought on mainly by overworking the brain, and increased by wrong methods of life, is the most serious one in the United States today. There is no country in the world where the strenuous life has begun to reach such a pitch as in the United States. In England the wealthy business man comes down to his office at 10 o'clock, takes an hour for a leisurely luncheon, back at 1 o'clock, leaves at 4 o'clock for his suburban residence, and probably does not come down at all on Saturday, while every year he goes off several times for a few weeks' shooting, or perhaps to Norway for salmon fishing, or to the Continent for a trip. He manages to get along very well, and certainly enjoys life more than the American, who rushes through so fast that he can scarcely take note of what is going on around him, and falls an early victim to dyspepsia and paresis. With our people it is not merely a "a short life and a merry one," but too often a short life and a miserable one, for what enjoyment can a dyspeptic get out of life?

Before making any suggestion in regard to treatment for such cases, it is necessary that the patient should make up his mind whether his health and life are worth more to him than his business. Otherwise, it is a waste of words and time to say anything to him. If he declares that he cannot spare time to live like a reasonable human being, then he must go on to the end, which will not be so far away. The man who cannot afford time to take a vacation has an early vacation in store for him, when the undertaker calls around with his handsome black box.

First and foremost, among the things to be remembered, is this: Do not, under any circumstances, resort to stimulants, or sedatives. If you do, your days are numbered, for in that case you have to keep on increasing such stimulants and sedatives, until you become a nervous wreck. The only safe restorative is sleep. Be sure that you get as much of it as possible. A long article on the treatment of insomnia was published in this department a few months ago. In addition to plenty of sleep, see that you thoroughly relax the mind and body several times a day, if only for three or four minutes. Then, again, when you leave your business, drop all thoughts of it entirely out of your mind.

Apart from this, follow the general rules in regard to hygiene—diet, bathing, exercise, breathing, etc.—as laid down from week to week in this department, for what is good for one ailment is good for another, all diseases being really one. An excellent idea is to walk as much as possible. Wherever you can, instead of taking a car, walk to your destination.

You may say that it is difficult, or impossible, for you to follow these instructions. Very well, then you must "take your medicine," and prepare to meet your fate.

A recent dispatch from New York stated that health records of that city show a remarkable decrease in nervous diseases, and that other ailments, such as heart disease, Bright's disease and consumption, have been gaining ground. This does not, by any means, show that increasing noise, and bustle, and worry, have decreased ailments, but rather that the trouble has broken out in a new place, once more proving what the editor has so frequently affirmed, that we are all wrong in giving a vast number of names to various ailments, that are practically one and the same.

Last, but by no means least, remember that it is not hard work that kills, but worry. Resolutely put away from you worry, which is only another name for fear.

The following sensible remarks, reprinted a few months ago in The Times from the Chicago Post, are worthy of reproduction:

"One of the most popular fallacies of our day is that we are martyrs to the strenuous life. Life, we tell ourselves, is lived at such a tremendous pace in these twentieth-century days that we are all breaking down under the strain. Especially here in America we are so astonishingly efficient and so wonderfully industrious, we are accomplishing such mighty results, that our constitutions are going to the demnition bowwows. It is all very sad and very noble, and at bottom we are proud of immolating ourselves on the altar of progress, or civilization, or whatever capitalized divinity most strikes our imagination.

"But the cold facts are these: Americans are not breaking down generally, and those who are do not succumb to overwork, but to overstrain from generally intemperate living. Hard work seldom kills. Close attention to business, keen interest in practical work, the full exercise of one's faculties do not break men down. Labor is the portion of man, and he is healthier at work, and hard at work, than he ever could be idling. In the language of the street it is booze, not business that kills, if the slang term be extended to include not only the intemperate use of liquor, but intemperate living of every kind."

Another idea to be considered is the theory of Maj. Woodruff, that excessive sunlight is injurious to blonde races, and that the blondes are out of their sphere in the United States, except in the northwest corner of the Pacific Coast and Alaska. He claims that most of the neurasthenia so prevalent here is due to this.

In cases of nervous prostration, the editor believes that the milk diet, under proper conditions, with com-

[illegible] Defective Infants be Killed?

[illegible] women were on the board of judges which decided, a few nights ago, in a debate at the local College of Physicians and Surgeons, that children found at birth incurably deformed should be put to a merciful death. This decision was also approved by many women in the audience while others shuddered at the thought of [illegible] a babe for the sins of its parents or grandparents.

This is an old question, a grave question, and one that cannot well be disposed of, off hand, by the students of a medical college. Germane to the subject is the mooted question as to whether a physician has a right to administer a death-dealing potion to a patient, who is suffering agony, and whom the physician believes to be in a hopeless condition. But then, many whose cases have been abandoned by the drug dispensers have recovered under rational treatment. Again, there is the old question as to whether a person has the right to take his own life. As he came into the world without his consent being asked, it seems only reasonable to claim that he should be allowed to leave it when he [illegible].

The Greeks cast physically defective infants over a precipice. They also, however, made careful provision for the birth of children sound in body and mind, by paying attention to parental culture, which we entirely neglect. We spend millions of dollars and much study in improving the breeds of horses, and cattle, and hogs, and poultry, and dogs, and cats, and other domestic stock, as well as of fruits and vegetables and flowers, but we let human beings mate—or mismate—as they [illegible].

[illegible] people, are we not, now "honest?" Talk about our advance in civilization. Bah! In many things, we are far behind the Greeks, and some other nations of antiquity, as a crawfish is behind a collie dog. Those Greeks may have been idolaters, but they didn't worship [illegible] of coined metal, that pass from hand to hand.

[illegible]thy Philanthropy.

The season approaches when men open their hearts—and some of them their purses—to the needs of their unfortunate fellows. When you come to bestow your [illegible] largesse, do not overlook that worthy institution, the Barlow consumptive sanatorium. In addition to gifts of money, these things are acceptable: [illegible] and groceries of almost all kinds, especially [illegible] which are just now high in price. There should be an increase in the annual membership, so that more effective work may be done in caring for poor consumptives. The endowment fund should also be increased, either by subscriptions or life memberships. [illegible], who will contribute their services to the institution for a month or longer, will be welcomed. Bolts of [illegible] cloth are used as handkerchiefs, and then [illegible]. Finally, the sanatorium grounds need attention. [illegible] are welcome at this institution. The editor [illegible] make some modifications in the dietary, but [illegible] that it is a model. It is located in the [illegible] ravine, ten minutes' ride from Spring street, by [illegible] or Colegrove cars. Get off at Elysian [illegible], whence it is a five minutes' walk.

[illegible]

[illegible] that invalids continue to flee from the [illegible] and come to this region of mild climate. [illegible] the usual climatic table, telegraphed to [illegible] from Chicago, showed that, in thirty-[illegible] of the mountains, the highest minimum [illegible] the preceding twenty-four hours was [illegible] just freezing, and that was at Memphis, [illegible] only one degree north of Los Angeles. While [illegible] showed minimum temperatures below zero, [illegible]—Grand Rapids—18 below, or 50 degrees below [illegible]. Even the maximum temperature for the [illegible] hours was above freezing in only fifteen of [illegible], the highest point attained being at Cincinnati [illegible]. For the same twenty-four hours, the minimum temperature at Los Angeles was 45, and the maximum [illegible] degrees. These simple figures transcend all [illegible] about our "glorious climate."

[illegible] same time, it should be remembered that, from [illegible] point of view, a cold temperature during a part [illegible] year, is bracing and wholesome and if not too [illegible] protracted, breeds sturdy races of men.

[illegible] and Dope.

[illegible] know that a stream cannot rise higher than [illegible]. How, then, can we reasonably expect to [illegible], safe and rational method of medical treatment [illegible] among a profession, many of whose [illegible] are addicted to the use of poisonous body, [illegible] soul-destroying drugs? It has been admitted [illegible] publications that many physicians are addicted to the use of morphine. Surely, this is a case of [illegible] of the blind."

[illegible] two items in one number of The Times [illegible] ago, that furnish food for thought in this direction. The first was the following dispatch from [illegible]:

[illegible] that strychnine is being used to stimulate [illegible] of the Spokane High School football team [illegible] has aroused parents and school authorities, who believe that the practice will result in a desire for the drug, which will be most harmful, aside from the ill effects likely to follow so powerful a stimulant.

"Coach Smith admits that strychnine has become part of the team's equipment and says it is administered hypodermically by Dr. Tooker, the regular physician of the team. Smith justifies the use of the drug by saying that it puts ginger into the men when exhausted.

"Dr. Tooker says that no harm can result from a slight use of the reviver, but the parents of the boys take a different view, and it is probable that the school authorities will be asked to see that the practice is stopped at once."

Comment on the above would be entirely superfluous.

The next was a local item, telling how Dr. Charles E. Brown, who a few years ago was a leading physician of Denver, had been before the Insanity Commission, in Judge Conrey's court. His health was gone, his ability could only be controlled at intervals, his sanity even was in question. Cocaine and morphine did it. Of late he has been in the habit of taking twelve grains of cocaine and six grains of morphine daily. He had threatened the lives of his children, was suspicious against his family and had created a disturbance in a hotel. In short, he was a "dope" fiend.

Only last week, reference was made in this department to the case of a physician, in Dayton, Ohio, who was found guilty of the murder of his father, mother and bother. He consumed fifteen grains of morphine daily.

Dr. Rosenbach on Drugs.

THE editor sent to Prof. O. Rosenbach of Berlin a clipping of the review of the professor's book, "Physician versus Bacteriologist," from the Care of the Body department, also a copy of the pamphlet, "Follies and Failures of Modern Medicine." Following is a translation of a reply from Prof. Rosenbach:

"I thank you for sending me the very welcome review of my book. I have read your pamphlet, 'Follies and Failures,' with great interest. In one point, only, do I not agree with you, namely, in your total condemnation of pharmaceutical preparations (drugs.) It is true I prescribe few means of this kind, yet, in view of my wide and critical experience, there are about a dozen which I could not dispense with, because I regard them, under certain conditions, as indispensable. To this extent I also belong among the followers of the 'superstitions of the old school.' I am certainly a decidedly opponent of the view that there are any 'specific' mediums, that is to say mediums for use against the non-existent abstract disease. Our means and methods, that are not hygienic, but prophylactic, only influence certain functions by regulating them, and so aid in the process of healing, if—as is not always the case—we have correctly diagnosed the ailment.

"Perhaps a book of mine, that I send you under separate cover, may interest you. In it I seek to combat what I consider to be grave errors in modern medicine."

The book referred to by Dr. Rosenbach is entitled "Das Problem der Syphilis; und die Legende von der Specifischen Wirkung des Quecksilbers und Jod"—"The Problem of Syphilis and the legend regarding to specific action of quicksilver and iodine." It will be read and reviewed as soon as time and space permit.

As to the drug question, the editor has no doubt that, if Dr. Rosenbach lives long enough, the author of that noble book, "Physician versus Bacteriologist," will cast off the last fetters that hold him to the "superstitions of the old school." Meantime, he has done great work in calling attention to the exaggerated and dangerous follies of the misguided bacteria enthusiasts.

Medical Legislation—XLIII.

THE State law of California relating to the practice of medicine is known as Assembly Bill No. 284. It passed the Assembly on January 31, 1901, and the Senate on February 11, following. It is entitled "An Act for the Regulation of the Practice of Medicine and Surgery in the State of California, and for the Appointment of a Board of Medical Examiners in the Matter of Said Regulation."

The board consists of nine members, to be elected annually as follows:

"Five members thereof shall be elected by the Medical Society of the State of California, two members thereof by the California State Homeopathic Medical Society and two members thereof by the Eclectic Medical Society of the State of California."

The board is to hold its regular meetings in San Francisco on the first Tuesdays of April, August and December of each year, for the consideration of applications for certificates, and other business. Following is a part of Section 5, relating to requirements, examination and fee.

"Every person, before practicing medicine or surgery, or any of the departments of medicine or surgery in this State, must have the certificate herein provided for. In order to procure such certificate he must produce satisfactory testimonials of good moral character, and a diploma issued by some legally chartered medical school, the requirements of which medical school shall have been, at the time of granting such diploma, in no particular less than those prescribed by the Association of American Medical Colleges for that year; or he must produce satisfactory evidence of having possessed such diploma, or a license from some legally constituted institution which grants medical and surgical licenses only upon actual examination, or satisfactory evidence of having possessed such license; and he must accompany said diploma or license with an affidavit stating that he is the lawful posessor of the same, that he is the person therein named, and that the diploma or license was procured in the regular course, either of instruction or examination, without fraud or misrepresentation of any kind."

The examination is to be on the following subjects:

"Anatomy, physiology, bacteriology, pathology, chemistry and toxicology, surgery, obstetrics, materia medica and therapeutics, and theory and practice of medicine."

Not a word, here, it will be noted, in regard to such important subjects as the cause and prevention of disease, diet, hydropathy, massage and so forth. But then, as these subjects are not taught—or only taught to a very limited extent—in the medical colleges, it is not, of course, to be expected that they should be included in a medical examination. And, for the same reason, it is not a subject of surprise that physicians of the "regular" school are, as a rule, lamentably ignorant on these subjects, on account of which so many of their patients die, who might easily have been blessed with health and a long life through a natural method of treatment.

In regard to the issuance of certificates to those holding certificates from other States, the law says, in part:

"Said board may, in its discretion, accept and register, upon payment of the registration fee, and without examination of the applicant, any certificate which shall have been issued to him by the medical examining board of the District of Columbia, or of any State or Territory of the United States; provided, however, that the legal requirements of such medical examining board shall have been, at the time of issuing such certificate, in no degree or particular less than those of California, at the time when such certificate shall be presented for registration to the board created by this act."

We have had several instances of late in which the board has refused certificates to thoroughly well qualified physicians—so far as the allopathic idea of qualification goes—holding certificates from other commonwealths. Surely, an absurd and unreasonable law this, that makes a man a "regular" in one State and an irregular in another. Just about as absurd as the law that makes a man married in one State and unmarried in another.

The law states that certificates may be revoked for unprofessional conduct. Such unprofessional conduct is defined in the act as follows:

"First—The procuring or aiding or abetting in procuring a criminal abortion.

"Second—The obtaining of any fee on the assurance that a manifestly incurable disease can be permanently cured.

"Third—The willfully betraying a professional secret.

"Fourth—All advertising of medical business in which grossly improbable statements are made.

"Fifth—All advertising of any medicines, or of any means, whereby the monthly periods of women can be regulated, or the menses reëstablished if suppressed."

"Sixth—Conviction of any offense involving moral turpitude.

"Seventh—Habitual intemperance."

If certificates of physicians are often revoked by the board, in this State, for these, or other causes, the public is carefully kept in ignorance of such action, although, assuredly, there is no lack of cases in which such revocation would be in order. However, for the physicians to debar one of their fellows, however grievous his offense may be, is as rare as for the Law Association to debar a member of the legal fraternity—and there are some of them who ought to be not before the bar, but behind the bars.

Section 12 of the act thus defines illegal practice:

"(1.) Those who profess to be, or hold themselves out as being engaged as doctors, physicians or surgeons, in the treatment of disease, injury, or deformity of human beings.

"(2.) Those who, for pecuniary or valuable consideration, shall prescribe medicine, magnetism, or electricity, in the treatment of disease, injury, or deformity of human beings.

"(3.) Those who, for pecuniary or valuable consideration, shall employ surgical, or medical means or appliances for the treatment of disease, injury, or deformity of human beings, except dealers in surgical, dental and optical appliances.

"(4.) Those who, for pecuniary or valuable consideration, prescribe or use any drug or medicine, appliance, or medical or surgical treatment, or perform any operation for the relief or cure of any bodily injury or disease.

"The doing of any of the acts in this section mentioned shall be taken to be prima facie evidence of an intention on the part of the person doing any of said acts to represent himself as engaged in the practice of medicine or surgery, or both; but nothing in this act shall be so construed as to inhibit service in the case of emergency, or the domestic administration of family remedies."

From this, it will be seen that there is nothing in the State law of California forbidding a man to practice the natural healing art, that is to say, including dieting, exercise, breathing, hydropathy, massage, osteopathy, and so forth—provided he does not administer medicine, magnetism or electricity, or perform surgical operations. This is more reasonable than the laws prevailing in some States. For instance, as mentioned in these columns, the State Board of New York recently caused the arrest of a man in that State, for giving advice in regard to diet. The State boards are beginning to discover, however, that the people are becoming enlightened, and will not "stand for" any such unreasonable medieval tyranny. At the same time, it would be well for our people to be on their guard, for there is a large class of physicians who, conscious of their own weaknes to stand without outside support, are constantly seeking for laws to force the people to employ them, just as there is a certain class of less able preachers of religion who are constantly trying to secure the enactment of laws that would leave people no other place of entertainment on a Sunday than the churches.

The practicing without a certificate is a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine of not less than $100 nor more than $500, or by imprisonment from sixty to 160 days, or by both fine and imprisonment. In each such conviction, half of the fine goes to the prosecuting witness or witnesses. This opens quite a promising field of activity for young "saw-bones"—or even older ones—who are without patients. It is almost as good, in the shape of a "potboiler," as these frequent smallpox scares, and consequent demands for vaccination, at so much per.

However, as stated, the California State law relating to the practice of medicine is not so bad, as such laws go. Meantime, let the people see that it is not made more drastic, but rather that these laws are all relegated to the shelf, as the laws have been relating to compulsory religious observance. As the editor has said, a free American should be allowed to choose his physician as he chooses his parson—or to go without either. That he should be confined to a certain school of medicine—or rather to be exact, to three schools, the allopathic, homeopathic and eclectic, which, however, all believe in drugs—is as unreasonable and unjust as it would be to force him to take spiritual advice from a Methodist, a Presbyterian, a Catholic or a pilot or any other of the devious channels that are supposed to lead to Paradise. As the editor has said, the only reasonable restriction would be to require that any person setting out to practice the healing art should be made to show, by a jury of experts in the same line of healing, that he is able to do that which he professes to do, whether it be water cure, massage, diet, breathing, physical culture, osteopathy or any other means of aiding nature. That it must come, and will come to this, before many years, no one who believes in American independence and sense of common justice can for a moment doubt.

By the way, how many of the "regulars" could successfully fulfill this condition if the jury before whom they appeared was fearless and just?

Soap.

A CORRESPONDENT recently suggested that powdered soap, as used in some hotels and institutions, should be substituted for ordinary soap, because the latter is not cleanly. It is certainly not pleasant to handle a slimy cake of dirt-encrusted soap, that has just been used by some person who don't wash regularly. At the same time, the danger of "bugs" on soap does not appear great, to judge from the following item:

"Soap and water have long been recommended as an important means of grace, since cleanliness is so closely akin to godliness. It is not so generally known, however, that common soap, which is constantly within the reach of every one, is one of the best disinfectants. Dr. A. P. Merrill gives in the Scientific American the results of some experiments made by him on behalf of the State Board of Health of New Hampshire. He made careful bacteriological study of seventy-five cakes of soap obtained from as many different sources, including hotels, machine shops, railroad stations, a sewage disposal plant, etc., and was unable to find living germs on any of them. Another series of experiments was conducted to find how long germs would live in soap. With but three exceptions, the germs were all dead in less than half an hour.."

As for varieties of soap, of which there are so many—each a little better than the others, if we are to believe the high-priced advertisements—the editor uses either an olive soap, a Castile soap (in bars,) a carbolic soap, a tar soap, what is known as "Ovo" soap, the latter an excellent antiseptic soap and a local product.

His Nerves Were All Right.

FOLLOWING is from an exchange:

"A country doctor tells this story on himself: After writing a prescription for a patient, the physician told him that the druggist would probably charge him 60 cents for filling it. Then the patient asked the physician to lend him the money. Thereupon the physician carefully scratched out a part of the prescription and handed it back, with 10 cents, remarking: 'You can have that filled for a dime. What I scratched out was for your nerves.'"

A Soul With a Void.

The Tragic Story of a Man Who Sought Perfection.

By a Special Contributor.

"THERE is nothing," thought he, "but my own sensibility. For me that is the only truth in the world."

[illegible] felt it strange to be walking there, amid the bustle [illegible] the boulevard, lost between the stream of people going [illegible] him and the stream of those coming toward [illegible] all, it seemed to him, with some object, elbowing [illegible] to make way for themselves and to reach [illegible] destination a second sooner. They were mostly [illegible] with important business; and they wore a [illegible] definable air of hostility toward him, as though [illegible] at once saw that he was not one of themselves.

[illegible] all have something to do," thought he, "except me. I never have anything to do. . . ."

[illegible], he stopped before a shop window [illegible] with jewels. And he longed for a soul of [illegible], hard and glittering, of radiant substance that [illegible] suffer less than his own, woven out of invisibility and intangibility, which suffered.

[illegible] I have nothing to do," he thought. "What [illegible] I do?"

[illegible] saw himself, as in clear water, reflected in the [illegible] of the shop window; his pale face, in the electric radiance, was like the face of a corpse. [illegible] that he wanted shaving, and it came as a [illegible] and most pleasant inspiration. He walked the [illegible] toward the barber's. He had something to do. [illegible] after that, what shall I do?" already he asked [illegible]

[illegible] while he felt the shaving brush fidgeting over [illegible] leaving the thick white lather behind, he [illegible] of one or two houses where the hostess would [illegible] at this time, half-past four, tea time.

[illegible] course, he was certain of finding his friend, [illegible] the painter, at home now. But there were [illegible] so many visitors there at this hour; young artists, [illegible] enthusiastic natures, fluent, full of vitality, consumed by their art; sometimes women, too, smelling [illegible] the perfume that made him ill.

[illegible], what in heaven's name shall I do?" he asked [illegible] again, at his wit's end.

[illegible] finished; he passed the corner of the napkin [illegible] face.

[illegible] my hair a little and just singe it a bit. My [illegible] too."

[illegible] glad to have thought of this. He sat bolt [illegible], staring at his powdered face, like a death [illegible] mask of a tragic Pierrot, with two glowing [illegible] set in it. The barber's scissors went fluttering [illegible] his temples, slipping away lightly. A little [illegible] the brush to remove the small hairs and so [illegible] was done. Then came the singeing. [illegible] it took longer to singe him, very long [illegible]

[illegible] on, absolutely unable to make up his mind; [illegible] did not know what he should do.

[illegible] I went this evening to the Francais; they [illegible] 'Phedre,' with Adeline Dudley," he thought, [illegible] effort; for he was quite dressed, and [illegible] off the mantle and bowed to him smiling.

[illegible] did not know why; the Francais had no [illegible] him either; nothing attracted him, nothing. . . .

[illegible] up in his despair. He paid; there [illegible] more for him to do there; he left, bowed [illegible] barber.

[illegible] what shall I do, what shall I do, what [illegible] asked himself outside, in unspeakable [illegible] once more, aimlessly, among the [illegible] of so many people hurrying along. [illegible] called coronet on his cards and on his [illegible]; he had a refined, gentle, engaging [illegible] pale and sad, with his great black, [illegible] was tall, slight almost to leanness; [illegible] always as naturally elegant as though it [illegible] him. He was regarded as one of the [illegible] of this earth, blessed with prosperity, [illegible] fortune and lovable disposition; all [illegible] him happy.

[illegible]; he never had been. From his childhood [illegible] been happy. He had lost his parents. True, his guardians had always been [illegible] worked for his welfare. He seemed [illegible] under not ordinary, but particular [illegible] allowed him to live in ideal liberty, [illegible] all the cares and drudgery of mankind. [illegible] been happy, because—and this had [illegible] from his cradle—desolation had [illegible] him about like a field of ice, like [illegible] weird and drear and sunless. Never [illegible] him the warmth of sympathy, the [illegible] love, nor even of family affection—[illegible] been bankers, merely honest men [illegible] warmth—still less even had he felt [illegible] of friendship, the flame of a love. [illegible] a good deal of sympathy, even [illegible] one nor the other had he ever been [illegible], and, without the response in himself, [illegible] sympathy, of love, had never meant [illegible]. Was it his fault that he had never [illegible] single being to whom he could de[illegible] he could be at once worshiper [illegible] he ask too much, did he long for [illegible] did he forget that he was still in [illegible] was it Fate, which makes a man, [illegible] all good things, all worldly gifts, [illegible] just the one thing which he would prize above all those gifts, which would be his happiness, the reason of his existence, the solution of the riddle of his life? . . .

He had never understood any of these things; and he had never understood why he, so useless, lived. And then, he no longer felt that it mattered much to him, the why, the why of the world, the why of himself, riddles which he had tried with all his strength to solve when he was seventeen or eighteen; a pale, quiet, dreaming youth, with his big, wide eyes of ceaseless longing. It mattered more to him now, as a man of twenty-eight, whether or not he should find that soul, that sister-soul, for which he yearned so deeply within himself, never telling of it, never letting any peer into the depth where that longing lurked. . . . Because —and it was just this—he had never yet met such a one, man or woman, who had roused in him the irresitible, irrevocable, fatal desire to give himself, to disclose himself, so that the man or woman—whom he had not found—might see the longing in the depth of his unlocked soul. Oh, how he longed to meet them! . . .

Why could he not have been content to receive? Why must he give in order to be happy? Why did he never find, even among those who gave to him, one to whom he, too, could offer the whole treasure of his heart?

He attracted, fascinated, captivated. He possessed a charm that was irresistible. Everyone thought him sympathetic. And never, never among all those who came to him, had he found one with a soul to understand his own and to love him with that sympathy which joins two in the constraint of one narrow circle, as in a girdle that binds together, a ring that locks.

Was that which he longed for so unattainable, then? Was it so hard to find, so ideal? Was he the only one who longed so, or was there here, or in some other world, another like himself, who yearned as he yearned? . . . And if there was, when would they two meet? In this life? After a thousand metempsychoses? Oh, it was no mania, this of his; it was to him an all-fervent, noblest longing for that other; it was to him an all-noble privation, a bitter want, that boreal desolation of his soul. He had so often been mistaken already, mistaken in Braauws, in Bella, in the young married woman, in the young girl, thinking of them, by turns, that here lurked the soul which he sought, cherishing for a short while the illusion that now the ice field would thaw in the sunshine. And then—at the very point of giving himself, giving himself passionately, unlocking all the secret of his nature, like an empty sanctuary opening to the god coming to be enshrined within it—he had darted back, realizing that he was willfully, knowingly deceiving himself in the burning longing of his quest, realizing that he had not yet found it, that it was not here. . . . And yet, when he suddenly drew back, he immediately doubted, doubted the accuracy of his insight:

"Supposing this to be really the one? Supposing that I have now repulsed the sister-soul?"

Oh, never, never! Never the certainty, never the electric flash revealing the twin soul, unmistakably with its zig-zag of fire!

Surely he had felt his hunger, the hunger of his soul, gnawing him as eagerly, more eagerly, perhaps, than that poor child felt hers, there on the boulevard, in her fluttering rags, in the draught at that corner which he never turned without giving her a few sous, superstitious about the alms and trembling in his longing as he heard the hoarse voice of the little beggar-girl cry after him:

"Thank you, p'tit m'sieu, that will bring you luck!"

"Do you think so? . . . I hope so, my child!" he had once replied.

When he reflected upon his grief and asked himself why he did not find when so many did find, he came to his solution: what he demanded was the absolute, the perfect, the whole; while others were contented with what was only relative, imperfect and a part. He had never been able to reconcile himself to the "almost" of the world; the "almost" had always made him suffer. All that he saw about him in the world, all that men called great and noble he thought "almost;" and, whatever were present, the absence of that which would have completed perfection had always poisoned his appreciation of what was called great and noble.

He despaired, too, because he always at once detected what was missing, because he could never wholly abandon himself to a feeling of approbation, of admiration, because his feelings, too, were always "almost." Oh, if he could only once "wholly" feel! The "almost" would torment him in a crease of an otherwise irreproachable dinner jacket, in a less perfectly engraved letter on his visiting card, as well as in the imperfections of the highest art or of human life.

The world was "almost" and, still worse, the world was old, worn-out, stale. Oh, how his soul suffered under it, his soul craving its ideal, to worship as an idol, longing for its ideal as it longed for heaven!

He always remembered the indignation to which he had once driven his friend, Braauws, the painter, in the Louvre, before the Venus of Milo.

"I always look for the arms; and, then, I cannot help seeing that she looks as though she had the smallpox," he had the courage to say. "I can never find perfect pleasure in a mutilated statue; it hurts me. . . ."

"Haven't you enough imagination to picture to yourself what the statue was before it was mutilated, though you have to look for the arms?" Braauws cried angrily.

He shook his head, with his unhappy, gentle smile:

"Had I been able to see it, then I should have found some other imperfection in it. . . . Don't be angry with me; I am like that, I can't help it. I always seize upon any imperfection, in art as well as in life."

"But an imperfection in life is often precisely what is interesting in it!" Braauws exclaimed.

"Very likely. . . . But you speak and feel as an artist, and I cannot; I am only a sensitive man, and to such as I an imperfection is a pain," was his humble excuse.

He could not help it, he was so. He saw what was missing and suffered from the "almost" in plastic art; he heard it, he suffered from it in music; he felt it, he suffered from it in literature. And, most of all, he felt it in the life of feeling itself; for he could not wholly love anyone in whom he found something missing, in whom he detected an "almost."

"How delightful to be able, like a woman, to love someone for his faults," he would think. "To be able 'wholly' to feel as a woman does. I know that the sole aim of my life is to be able to do this just once, and I know equally that I shall never satisfy that aim. . . ."

LIFE OF PRESIDENT'S SECRETAR

The recent order of President Roosevelt making his secretary, William Loeb, Jr., the spokesman for the Cabinet respecting matters of public interest dealt with at its sessions by the latter, is a signal proof of the Chief Magistrate's great reliance on his faithful right-hand man. In no other secretary to a President was such confidence reposed, but in this case the act was justified by the remarkable ability and good judgment displayed by Mr. Loeb in the performance of his duties. Moreover, Mr. Loeb has sustained a close confidential relation to the President since Mr. Roosevelt became Governor of New York, and he thoroughly comprehends his superior's views and policies.

It is not difficult to see that while Mr. Roosevelt goes ahead with work at a clip like this, occasionally taking a trip across country besides, there must be a great volume of business to transact in the executive offices. This falls upon Mr. Loeb, and so arduous has the labor of the White House become that the private secretary has been very appropriately dubbed in jest "Our Deptuy President." It is Mr. Loeb's duty to open all the White House mail, and this is the first thing that engages his attention when he enters the executive offices in the morning at 8 o'clock. The porters have brought the huge mail bags into the office from the postoffice early in the morning, and they contain all the letters that have come in for the White House overnight. It then devolves upon Mr. Loeb to "go through" this vast pile of letters, carefully assorting them so that he may put aside only the very important public matters and extremely personal letters for the President to take up personally.

Mr. Loeb is usually ready for his session with the President before 10 o'clock, taking with him to the President's private office only such matters as require the personal attention of the Chief Executive. Left behind are many letters and business matters with which Mr. Loeb himself can deal, and these are eliminated from the conference, except, perhaps, for a casual mention of the nature of one thing or another. The President reads his important mail, tells Mr. Loeb what he wishes done with this or that, takes up new business, and gives directions, and within an hour, or little more, has managed to load Mr. Loeb down with enough work to keep all the stenographers of the White House force busy the rest of the day. Having been so long associated with President Roosevelt, Mr. Loeb has caught the manner of the man, and is quick in seeing the point. When he returns to the executive offices he knows very well how to attend to every detail of the routine, and distributes the work of correspondence among the stenographers in a way that will keep them all hustling while he takes time to go over the voluminous documents, letters, papers, etc., which the President has not seen.—[Leslie's Weekly.
